

Juniors — So Close And Yet So Far

“What do you wanna do with your life?” — (Twisted Sister). For the Class of '88 this year was a time for serious inner reflection. They spent many hours thinking about what they were going to do with their lives. The questions “What do I want to be when I grow up?” and “Where am I going to school after graduation?” plagued the minds of these almost-seniors. In their classes and their personal lives, they developed decision-making abilities to answer their many questions. Having their licenses, the juniors experienced more freedom than they had had in the past. The added responsibility strengthened the maturity of these students, preparing them for their senior year — their time to “rule the school”.

Class rings, letter jackets, taking the PSAT's and SAT's, playing varsity sports, attending the prom, and being a member of the very elite group — “the Upperclassmen” — all contributed to a very busy year. The Class of '88 found that being a junior had many advantages that underclassmen can't enjoy. However, life as a junior wasn't all fun and games. With college lying ahead, many of these students began to take studying more seriously, hoping to have better chances with their favorite colleges. It didn't seem as if it had been that long ago when they were freshmen; now they were almost seniors. The old cliché about “How time flies when you're having fun” could have been written with the juniors in mind.

Who ever said the juniors weren't TOUGH? Stephen Padgett, Chad Brightwell, and Will Bryan show us what “real men” we have in the Class of '88.

Becky Bennett
Elizabeth Biggers
Chad Brightwell
Will Bryan
Kim Carter

Benji Crosby
Dwayne Davis
Kelly Ferguson
Jamie Gahagan
Amy Goehring

Allan Gustin
Allyson Haynes
Benjie Herndon
Toby Hinton
Matt Hiott

Wendy Hiott
Toni Hooker
Ashley Hudson
Terry Jones
Caroline Linder

