

GREAT DAY

morning, noon, and night

Drew Brightwell diligently works on his math homework for the next day.

“

“This year, I’ve spent most of my weekends out of town, school really gives me a chance to spend time with my friends as well as to learn.”

Heather Gahagan

”

2:20

Typical day at John C. is not much different from other schools. Everyone studies, jokes, and participates in activities. John C., however, has an advantage in that everyone is close and friendly.”

Kevin Beach

The alarm clock rang continuously, the feet hit the floor, and the body was up. This was going to be the beginning of “A GREAT DAY”. The student rose early or late as the case may have been for another day at John C. Calhoun.

Homeroom was a time for socializing and lunch orders to be placed. First period arrived and the day had really begun. After the changing of classes most students were finally awake. Only a few more classes were left before lunch. A little Geometry here and some English there took up the next few classes. The chance to pass that special note to that special person without being caught in Mrs. Linder’s class was a challenge and so was the Literature test. The bell rang and it was off to lunch.

After lunch, the day had almost ended and the anxious students awaited the final bell. Finally it was time to go, and the mad dash to the lockers and cars was made.

Wayne Crosby, a senior, slowly but surely gets out of his car for another day of learning.