

AND NOW FOR

SOME SPIRIT

The Cheerleaders

Work Hard To

Increase Spirit

Varsity Cheerleaders, Keri Holmes, Heather Gahagan, Michelle Jones, and Amy Gentry get set to begin their sideline routine to "Brass Monkey."

What's this? Captain, Emily Warren, watches tentatively as Senior, Lesi Rodgers, demonstrates her idea of an effective cheerleading move.

The Varsity Cheerleaders began the 1988-1989 season on quite a pleasant note. During the last week in June, the squad, along with advisor, Beth Warren, left J.C.C.A. to attend cheerleading camp at Columbia College. The week was a long, hot, and hectic one. Little did the cheerleaders know that all of the sweating and practicing would pay off. The squad brought home a trophy for outstanding performance.

Soon after arrival home from camp, the cheerleaders began practicing for the competition that was soon to be held during football Jamboree. At the Jamboree, the squad won third place for their superior performance to "Brass Monkey."

The Varsity Cheerleaders worked hard throughout the year. They were constantly doing something to help encourage school spirit. Cheerleaders have to be willing to give up time that they could be using to do something else. They had spent many long hours practicing, preparing for pep rallies, selling spirit ribbons, painting spirit posters, staying after school to decorate their secret football players' lockers, and most importantly, the cheerleaders did their best to cheer the Hawks to victory.

The Varsity Cheerleaders had an all around great squad. They cheered hard throughout football and basketball season. Win or lose and rain or shine, the cheerleaders were always there to give the Hawks support and to help encourage an increase in school spirit.
