It's no joke, Charley!

"Debbie, will you bring in our next victim, please?" This is a typical request made by Al or Charlie as he presided at one of this year's Guidance Council meetings.

Obviously, the term "victim" referred to a violator of the Honor Code. Although the council often jokingly used this term, its members felt strongly about the culprits. Therefore, at each council meeting they endeavored to explain to these students the importance of an effective Honor Code — one unanimously obeyed and respected.

Did the members cease all efforts as they left room two hundred one? No! They spent many sessions brainstorming to find ways to improve their effectiveness. During the second semester they tested a system of procuring and filing the names of students participating in the honor system.

This successful plan is an example of the hard work and excellent results of our Guidance Council.

"Gotcha this time!"

Making law and order of the seeming noon-time bedlam in the junior school was the job handed to the lunchroom and hall monitors. Under the direction of Mr. Quist, eighth and ninth grade boys who were judged mature and trustworthy enough for the assignment kept eager students from running in the halls and on the stairs. The punished offender usually found himself taking the hall over at a somewhat more moderate pace; a punishment which usually discouraged further offenses.

Although few senior school students realize it, it is to the hall monitors of the junior school that they owe the clean cafeteria at lunch time, for twenty-one special lunchroom monitors were assigned to the cafeteria to see that all tables were left neat and ready for use.
