Led by high scoring center, "Big D" Don Shannon, the 1960 basketball team achieved a very creditable record which included an early trouncing of arch-rival Kirkwood, and a televised victory over University City. Even coach Tyke Yates did not place a great deal of confidence in the squad at the beginning of the year, but by the sheer drive and teamwork which characterized the team all through the season, the Webster cagers surprised everyone. Although no starters remained from the great team of 1959, several boys developed into fine ball players. The first string of Dennis Goette, Don Shannon, Bill MacMann, Roy Sander, and Pat Corley proved a very tough combination. MacMann and Corley provided the outcourt shooting while Goette and Shannon effectively controlled the boards. The hard work paid off when Webster took second place in the rough Suburban League, losing out to St. Charles in the final minutes of a close, exciting game. The Statesmen also took second place in the regional of the state tournament when they were defeated by Kirkwood 58-56 in a very tight game. The outlook for next year is promising even though all the starters are graduating. Don Siegmund and Ron Woods displayed evidence of real ability to lead the Statesmen to another victorious season next year.
