

VOCATIONAL

Mr. H. Mines

Mr. B. Dempsey

Vocational education classes are designed to prepare high school students for gainful employment in a specific occupation or family of occupations.

The Agriculture Department tries to prepare its students for positions in the many fields of agriculture. These include farming, agricultural occupations, agricultural sales and services, and preparation for the students who plan to further their education in one of the fine agricultural colleges or technical schools.

Three years of home economics are offered at WHS. The courses include the following; clothing and textiles; child development; foods and nutrition; health; home management; housing, equipment, and furnishings; personal and family relationships.
