

Projects Stimulate Interest in World History

Each year Mrs. Simmons assigns a special project. "I want to stimulate interest in some specific period of history," she stated. Students are given great freedom in constructing or writing these projects.

This year Mrs. Simmons' students were asked to do two projects, one first semester and another second semester. The projects count almost as much as two test grades and, as a result, students in Ms. Simmons' classes put a lot of time into their World History Projects.

Mrs. Simmons has been assigning these projects since she began teaching. She said that one of the best projects she received was a model of the Eiffel Tower, made out of tooth picks and spray-painted. She also mentioned a scale model of the Great Pyramid made out of sugar cubes. With the price of sugar skyrocketing, she doesn't expect another like it.

These projects represent a minute few of the many that Mrs. Simmons has collected from her students over the years.

Anthony Mack
Ronald Magwood
Agnes Manigo
Joanne Manigo
Joette Manigo

Rita Manigo
Howell Martin
Jacqueline Martin
Joey Martin
Mandy Martin

Vicky Martin
Sandra Mason
Amy McClennon
Gail McClennon
Sherri Lyn McClure

