

Football Games Arouse Debates

Steve Powell dashed into Mrs. Hughes' third period government class. He wanted to be the first to ask her the big question. "Mrs. Hughes, did you hear about all the upsets in college football this weekend?" Without giving her a chance to reply, Steve boomed, "Yea, Michigan State upset Ohio State, Clemson beat North Carolina and Carolina won!" The class now assembled in their seats laughed hysterically. They all knew Mrs. Hughes was a Carolina fan.

The upsets were not missed by other teachers. Ms. Randall, Ms. Hamilton, and Ms. McIntyre all graduated from Michigan State and watched the exciting MSU-Ohio State game. The controversial game was a raging topic in their classes. Similar debates were heard every Monday morning throughout the football season. People chose their favorite team and supported them loudly. With the popularity of Monday night football, the debates were extended to Tuesday morning.

Back to that third period government class—Mrs. Hughes wasn't to be outdone. Later that class period they were discussing capital punishment, but this time Steve Powell asked the wrong question. "Do you believe in capital punishment, Mrs. Hughes?" The answer came back, "Only in your case."

Ms. Pat Randall seems to be a little distressed as she averages her six weeks grades.

Louis Guess
Christopher Hacker
Laura Haddock
Nina Haller
Micheal Haman
Deborah Hamilton

Jacqueline Hamilton
Ted Hampleton
Harry Lee Hampton
Amy Hankerson
Robert Harbiston
Ricky Hardee

Debra Harrison
Heyward Harrison
Tony Harrison
Karen Haskell
Sherry Haynes
Jennifer Marie Herndon

