

Above: It couldn't be a Bonfire without a fire could it?

Spirit From Pep Rally Lights Bonfire

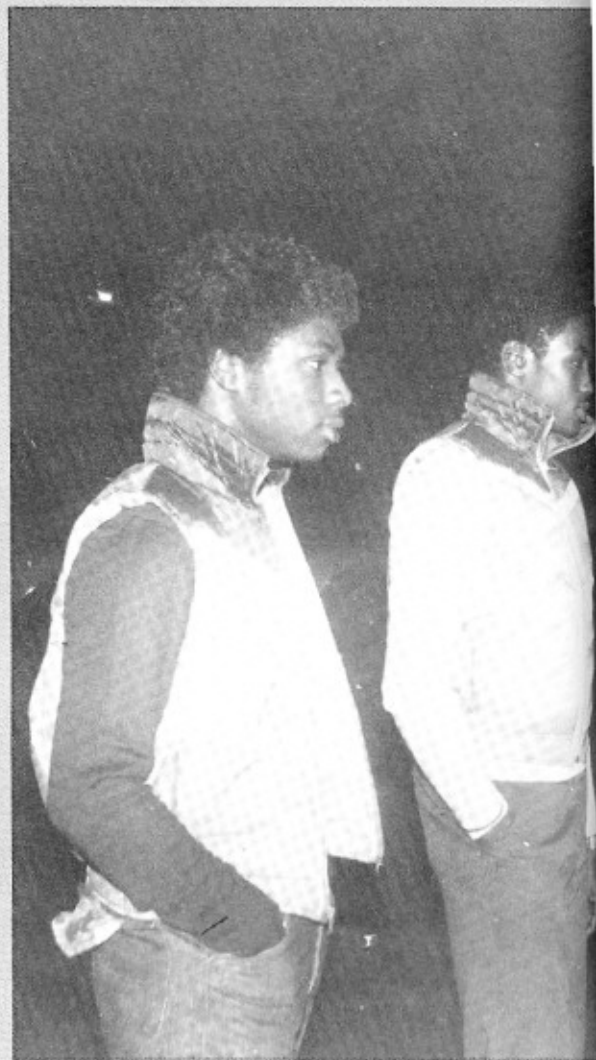

Spirit Week had more events that suited the Walterboro High School students' tastes than any other week. And once again the students showed their superior school spirit.

During the Pep Rallies the juniors were pitted against the experience of the seniors. Well of course there were the cheerleaders who kept all the students interested (at least the guys). The seniors started by showing the juniors what a sign was supposed to look like. And if you ask any juniors, they will tell you that the seniors' sign was gigantic. Well that counted as one point for the seniors. Then another for Jimmy Reece running around in a cheerleader suit. But Billy Reed gave the juniors a point because he also wore a cheerleader suit. The only change the juniors had left was their ability to use their mouths. And when given the chance the juniors undoubtedly had the most spirit. Well to none of the juniors' surprise, they won.

But just think, the juniors have to last another year at WHS. At least that made the seniors feel better.

Now on Thursday there was a bonfire. The bonfire also proved to be fun. While the students watched the fire they got to know each other better and even participated in some of the cheers. The students again showed their spirit which was ever present. The bonfire was sponsored by the National Honor Society.

Above: You can't fool us Danny Thomas and Jack Gant, we know you aren't looking at the bonfire.

Below: "It must run in the family because they always follow each," says Terry.

Above: Wonder if Mrs. Rhodes knows that Mr. Strickland is looking for Justin.