

AFTER BEING TAPED in for the night, seniors Consonya Holmes and Shanese Jones utilize the telephone to discuss the next day's plans.

Approximately forty-five miles away, the small, rural community of Edisto Beach played host to winter weary teenagers as warm weather arrived.

Weekends spent at the beach began with a bang on Junior-Senior weekend. Edistonians looked upon this weekend as the start of a fun-filled summer for teenagers who brought life to the town from dawn to dusk and beyond.

Palmetto Boulevard, the main strand, was as popular as Jefferies Boulevard for cruising, and the washout was the best spot for catching rays.

Armed with radios, lounge chairs, frisbees, footballs and suntan lotion, teens endured the forty-five minute trek from Walterboro to Edisto Beach to enjoy the natural beauty and unlimited enjoyment Edisto offered.

RHONDA ROBINSON, ERICA BOOTH, CARMEN Sauls and Michelle Craven show off their shades which are always needed during the hot, sunny Rice Festival weekend.
