Computer Technology Aids in the Renaissance of Clubs

The rebirth of clubs gave hope toward an exciting year. Teachers who were interested in sponsoring a club were asked to gather the names of prospective club members and set aside guidelines for the organization. Coach Doug Bullock used his computer genius to compile a list of all the clubs, members, and sponsors. He even composed a list of students not in clubs and assigned them to various study halls. Once the distribution of members and non-members was completed, the announcement was made that clubs would officially be reborn.

The National Honor Society sponsored a Christmas Tree in the office including the names of underprivileged children in the community. An overwhelming response was received from the students in order to place a smile on children's faces who normally would not receive a gift. In order to raise funds for the NHS Convention in Orangeburg, members sold hot chocolate at the Christmas Parade. For the umpteenth year in a row, The Infamous Pat Rhode sponsored the Spirit Club. The popularity of the club has grown over the years and the club has become a most favorite organization. Blowing up balloons, painting spirit signs, selling pins, painting paws, and promoting school spirit were the major activities of the club.

The importance of clubs was never doubted, yet since the institution of the EIA, time was needed to work out the kinks. Finally, it was realized that we were on the road to a successful club system.

THE ART CLUB sponsored by Cathy Layton and Marilyn Zielke, prepares Wind Chimes to sell at the Rice Festival. Melanie Brown, Tammy Hiers, and Ms. Layton design their chimes and prepare them for the kiln.
