

Of A

Junior Bryan Fralin focuses on a subject. Bryan was a photographer for the Journalism staff.

Senior Frankie Ackerman concentrates on a figure study for Mrs. Zielke's Art IV class. Students first draw on plexiglass and later transfer it to paper.

When taking a picture, the shutter clicks and the moment is over. The only tangible thing left as a reminder of the moment is the photograph. Likewise, when the final bell rings, the school year is over. Students will always have the memories, but a yearbook is the visual collection of those memories. In many ways a yearbook is a portrait, a portrait of a . . .