

Demetra Bryan
Yasmin Burnell
Ryan Bunton
David Burris
Kewis Butterfield
Kisha Byranis

Amanda Cain
Will Caison
Elizabeth Calaway
Brian Camp
Cora Campbell
Shanique Campbell

Jessica Carroll
Donna Cassidy
Ed Chapman
Ebony Chisolm
Eric Chisolm
Joe Chisolm

They're Here . . .

Freshman Shannon Nettles listens to her friend in the Commons as she talks about her weekend. Students found the lunch period, even though it was short, a time to socialize.

Everyone's freshman year definitely is remembered as a time of major change. The transition from the middle school to the high school took some adjustment as incoming students had to become accustomed to unfamiliar surroundings. With over 500 students in the Freshman Class, it was the largest ever. Almost all freshmen had made many friends after the first semester of school.

Although most freshmen got picked on for being the "new kids on the block," they overlooked it and took it in stride.

"Even though I like the high school more than the middle school, I still don't like being picked on just because I'm a freshman," said Holly Garrett.

"I do not mind being picked on because I know that I'll be in a different pair of shoes next year," said Thomas Gruber.

Most freshmen liked freedom of choice at lunch time. They could choose from either the regular lunch line or the two short lunch lines. A freshman also had the option of a salad.

"I like having the opportunity to decide what to eat rather than having to eat something I do not like," said Angela Dewitt.

— Tony Lowery