One, Two, Three, Reach!

Students in Coach Robert Drigger's P.E. class do their daily exercise routine before running a mile. Most students took P.E. their freshman year.

Physical education is a one-year program required by state law. Every student was required to pass this class in order to receive a high school diploma. This was one class that had no separation of students into levels. A single PE class could have students on the practical, general, CP or Honor's level.

Athletic Director Leroy Riley and the physical education staff ran a well-organized department.

"I feel that the coaching staff ran a very good program," said Coach Riley. "I also feel that implementing a program of team sports will make the PE department more enjoyable and interesting."

"PE has been hard work but a lot of fun," stated Cristy Ward. "It is a challenging class and makes students feel good about themselves."

Although PE was usually taken during a student's freshman year, some students waited to take it in their senior year.

PE was not just another required subject. It actually was very valuable to total development. As a student exercised his mind in the classroom, he learned the value of physical exercise for his overall well-being.
