

Got a Problem?

Guidance counselors proved to be a vital asset to the school throughout the year. Not only were they extremely busy with paperwork, but they also provided one-on-one counseling to students with problems.

Most students went directly to a guidance counselor when they had a problem. Students felt they could trust the counselors and appreciated the advice of these adults.

Guidance counselors went beyond an advising role. They were responsible for compiling schedules for the following year. Scheduling was a tedious process that involved counselors, homeroom teachers, parents, and students.

Counselors had to complete many applications for students. A great amount of time was spent writing college recommendations.

"As a Teacher Cadet, I found that counselors are extremely busy people whose day doesn't allow any time to be wasted. People shouldn't take their counselors for granted," said Michelle Edwins.

Freshman Counselor Rusty Adams explains the block schedule to Jesse Burns. Rotating classes each day for a week, students remained in a class for ninety minutes, allowing longer instruction.

Mrs. Mary Bryan reads a student recommendation before submitting it. Not only was Mrs. Bryan a counselor, but she also taught Latin and English.
