

As spring came around everyone was busy. Term papers were due for some freshmen and sophomores and all juniors and seniors. Seniors were also busy making their college and work plans final. Students had one week of relaxation during Spring Break and then two more months of school. By then students had the Exit Exam, AP Exams, the Rice Festival, the Prom, Junior-Senior weekend, and awards banquets for just about everything to take up their time. This proved to be both a happy and sad time for seniors. Of course many were happy to be graduating and getting into the "real world," but they also realized that this meant leaving many friends and good times behind. They had to make the most of the time they had left.
