

Living For The Weekend

So much to do, so little time

When Friday finally rolled around after a long week of studying and tests, students finally got time to go out and relax. Plans for the weekends were discussed all week, usually beginning first thing Monday morning. "What's going on this weekend?" and "Are there any parties tonight?" would be asked all day Friday.

Figuring out what to do was one of the biggest problems students had when it came to Friday and Saturday nights. When there was nothing to do in Walterboro, many headed to Charleston to find entertainment.

"My boyfriend Chad and I usually go to Summerville and Charleston, or we get a bunch of friends together and hang out watching movies or going to parties," said sophomore Christy Edwins.

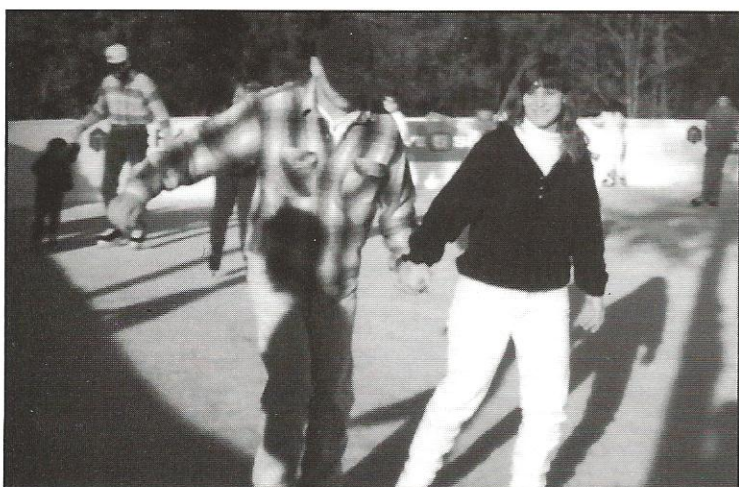

The weekend was a time to socialize. Some students worked, while others were able to go out with friends. Going to parties, the movies or to Charleston easily ranked as the favorite things to do. For some, it was a time to spend with that special someone.

"I spend my weekends with my girlfriend. We usually go out to Washington Street Cafe and see a movie, but sometimes we just stay home and watch movies," said junior Justin Shearer.

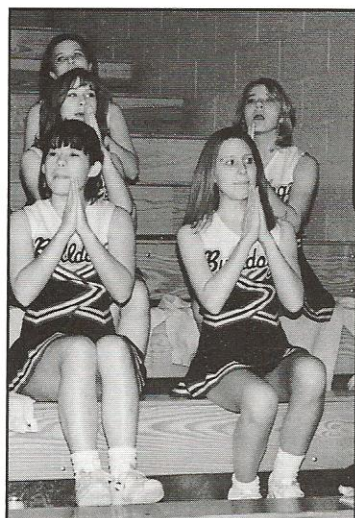

As the weekends came to an end, students relaxed or rushed to get Monday's homework assignment finished. Everyone was bummed that the weekend was over but excited to get back to school to see what everyone had done over the weekend.

"Hold My Hand." Spending a day together, Jamie Virga and Joey Frasier travel to the James Island ice skating rink. The couple enjoyed being together on the weekends.

Clap Your Hands! Kalee Kinard, Christie Edwins, Alice Bickley, and Kristen Kauffeld perform seated chants during basketball season. Cheerleaders began every weekend with Friday night games from August through February.

What was your most exciting weekend experience ever?

"Some of the best times I have ever had on the weekends have been getting a bunch of friends together and going on road trips. Saturday USC football games at Tally-ho and downtown Charleston are just two of our favorite places."

— Kristen Kauffeld

"The best weekend I ever had was a night that my best friend and I went out and partied all night long. We met some really cute guys and had a great time just hangin' out."

Just a Little Snack. Erin Davis, Amy Hefner, Jessica Epinette, Alice Bickley, and Rebecca Corbett make plans for a Friday night over a box of chocolates. All the girls were members of the tennis team.
