

What To Wear?

The Styles of '97

With everyone trying to make a statement these days, what better way to do it than with fashion? It became a must for students to identify who they were by the way they dressed. Students strove to stand out from the rest of the crowd.

"What I wear expresses who I am," said senior Patrice Lee.

Name brands, as usual, dominated the scene. Tommy Hilfiger, Jenco, Nautica, and Chaps were just a few of the names sported around school. Baggy jeans, baby T's, short skirts, bright colors, and big-heeled shoes were some of the "in" styles.

"I like to dress up in skirts, dresses, pants, and cool shoes," said junior Amy Hefner. "The way I dress makes me feel good about myself."

To find the latest fashion, students had to shop at the most popular stores. Most students headed to the city for this. Some popular places to go were Hilton Head, Santee, Charleston, Columbia, and Savannah.

"My favorite store is the GAP because it always carries the latest fashions," said junior Ericka Tedder.

No matter what was worn, students made sure they had their own unique style.

What would you like to see your girlfriend/boyfriend wear on a date?

"I would like my man to look as if he just stepped out of GQ magazine."

— Morgan Walker

"I would like to see her wearing a cute shirt."

— Bryan Hunt

Anything Goes. Nakita Martin and Reggie Wilson talk in the commons during class. Shirts displaying name-brand logos were very "in."

Nice Pants! Philip Green, Tamika Bostic, and Brandy McCall share a laugh before going to class. Philip was a varsity football and varsity basketball player.

Stylin. Friends Ericka Tedder and Jace Johnson chat for a while during class. Both were known for their stylish clothing.
