

During school, special projects like Mrs. Linda Harrell's fruit fly experiment provided the hands-on skills from which students benefitted the most. Cultural food days were popular as many classes chose to present facts along with preparing crowd-pleasing dishes. These, along with the ever-present assignments and lectures, fulfilled the year's academic expectations.

The community, as well as the school, stood firmly behind the student body in each of its endeavors. They provided the funds and support WHS needed to succeed.

The sports combined with the schooling, and the weekends combined with the summer to give students the variety they needed to get through the 180 days. Like a play, the year came to an end, but the friendships and experiences will always remain.

-Erin Davis

---