1. If you're happy and you know it... Senior Jessica Kinard claps along with the band as they play a tune at one of the home football games. Jessica doesn't play an instrument, though, she is in the colorguard. 2. Proud to be a bulldog. Junior Shantel Middleton shows her bulldog spirit while cheering at a football game as she poses with the bulldog. The bulldog had to take a leave of absence, though, because he got a little mangled by a few other K-9's. 3. Strike a pose! Sophomores Lateisha Payne, Dominique Washington, Sedrick Young, and Dominique Singleton strike poses in the hall for the camera. The three girls had been friends for a long amount of time.

Making Impressions

Day-by-day, students constantly tried to make impressions whether by means of fashion, spirit, or grades. No matter the form of expression used, these impressions made WHS unique. They set the students of WHS apart from all other students.

Fashion- "the prevailing style during a particular time," (Webster's Dictionary). The fashions at WHS expressed the diversity of the students. The fashionable students who kept up with the latest styles could always be found, but others set the diversity of WHS to a further level. Some came to school dressed comfortably in jeans and t-shirts, and others came to school in baggy jeans or wide jean cuffs.

"I think the way people dress says a lot about their personality, their fashion reflects what kind of person they are on the outside," said junior Paisley Polk.

The fashion at WHS reflected not only the diversity of clothing, but also reflected the diversity in personalities. These fashions added to the many characteristics of WHS, no matter what the style.

Spirit- "A lively or brisk quality in a person or a person's actions," (Webster's Dictionary). Every school expressed their spirit in different ways than others, but WHS's stood out among all others. Spirit week, one of the most participated in activities in school, expressed a lot of the student's spirit toward WHS. "Twins," "college students," "retro students," "famous characters," and "blue and white" students filled the halls of WHS during spirit week. The participation of the students surprised and thrilled many.

"I was really impressed with the amount of spirit our school had this year. It was awesome walking down the hall and seeing people with their faces painted and wearing spirit clothes," said junior Tamara Spangler.

Academics- "Academic subjects," (Webster's Dictionary). Students worked and studied hard just as any other year. New AP students took the place of old ones to carry on the tradition of earning college hours and honors students continued working hard to receive acknowledgement for their hard-work. Advanced Placement and honors students could not be given the only credit for their hard-work, though. All level classes worked hard and tried their best to give WHS a good impression academically.

"My sophomore year really motivated me. I began to work harder than ever before. I really want to get into medical school so I know my grades have to be impressive," said junior Amanda Lucas.

Many impressions were made throughout the whole school year. No matter the impression, though, each impression made by each individual student counted as a show of hand. The whole school's impressions added up equally a show of hands, which is what the 2000-2001 Paw Print staff captured for you.

Recognizing Royalty... While adjusting the senior homecoming crown, Mr. Barnhill concentrates diligently to be sure it is secure and in perfect position. Miss Senior, Shacurlynn Reed, stood confident and proud while receiving her crown and applause.

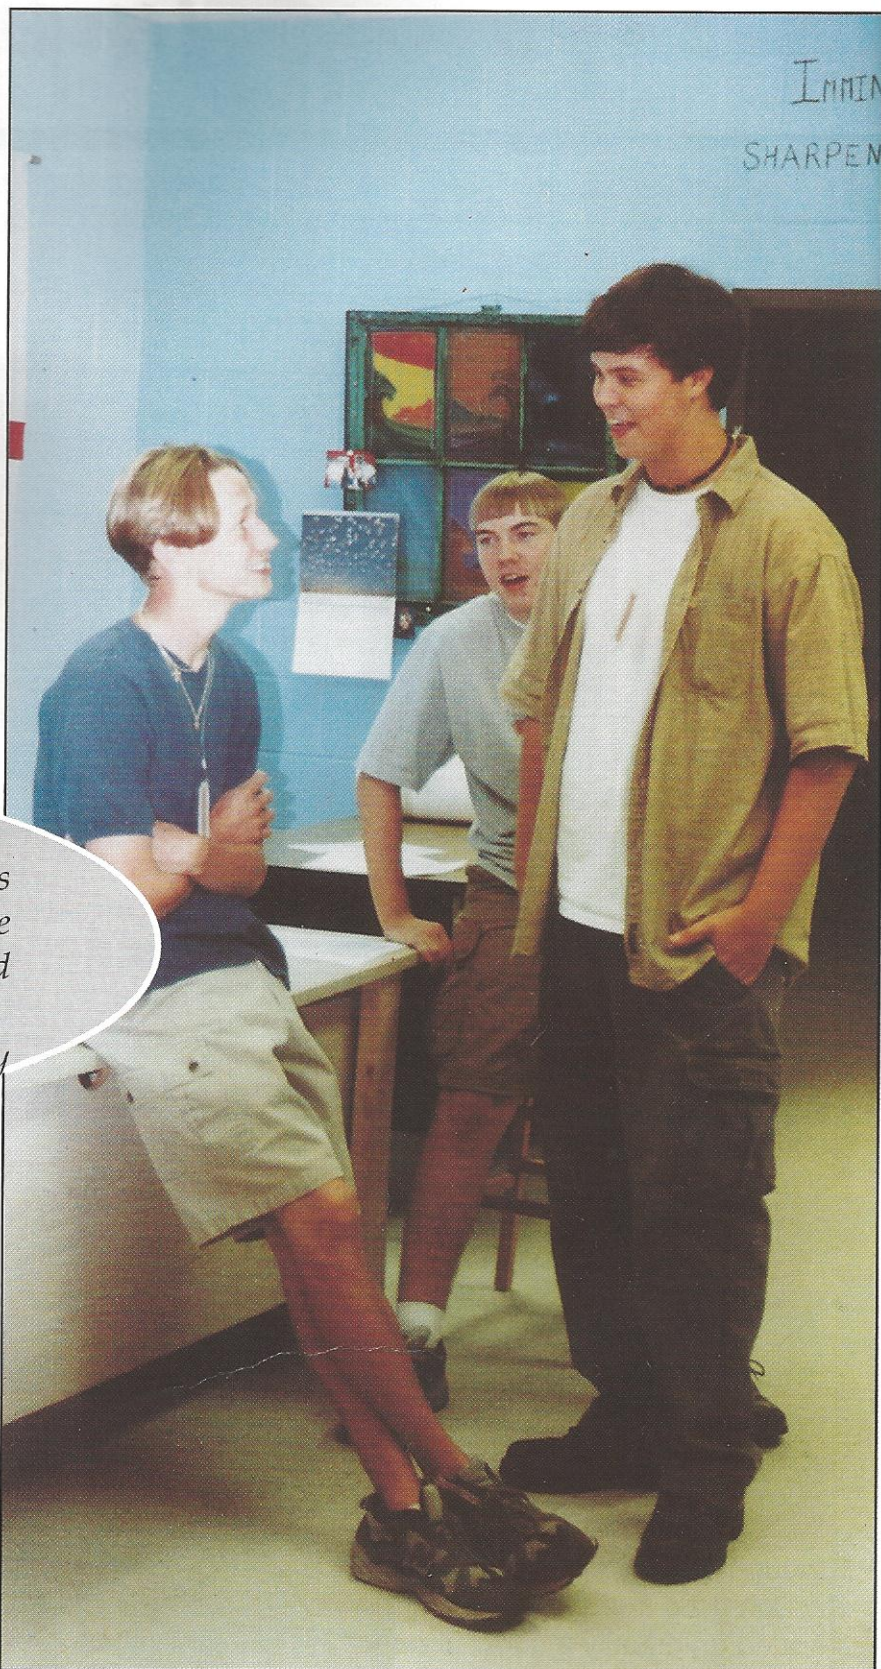

"Will and I have been best friends for a long time ; we met in middle school. We have a lot of good and bad memories together.

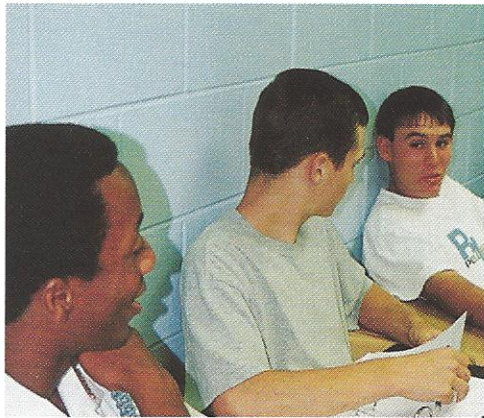

-Junior Ryan Berry

Put on a happy face... Dressed up for the homecoming football game against Berkeley, seniors Kristen McLeod and April Bullock happily come to support their dogs. The two had a good reason to be happy because a victory over Berkeley was a great way to start their weekend!

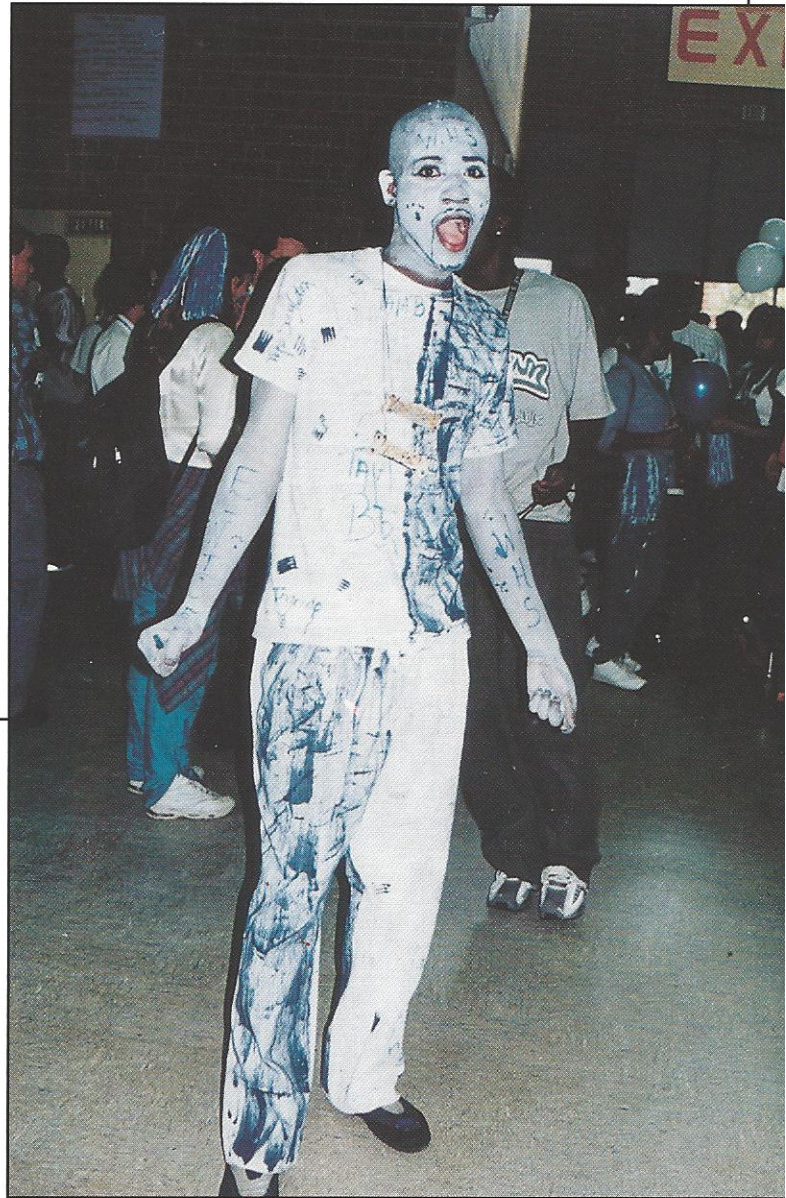

A Display of Memories

"A part of you has grown in me. And so you see, it's you and me together forever and never apart, maybe in distance, but never in heart."

-Unknown "

Showing his true color... In order to be a loyal bulldog, senior Eliot Forsythe paints his entire body and clothes blue and white. He was known around he school to be outgoing and always trying to crack people up.

Hail, Hail! Smiling so sweetly, senior Rita Manigo accepts her honor as the principal, Mr. Pence gives her words of confidence. The memory of being crowned Homecoming Queen 2000 would follow her throughout her lifetime.

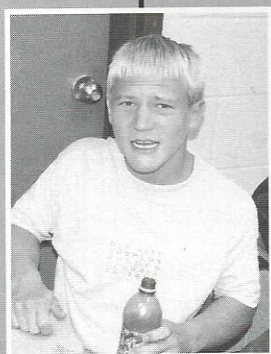

"The best thing about the first day of school was seeing how everybody looked, if anybody changed, and just modeling for my haters."

Reuniting Friends...Students find time to catch up on the latest summer gossip. Some, like junior Ashley Murdaugh, began the school year in an educational state of mind. Ashley was inducted to the National Honor Society in the fall of 2000.

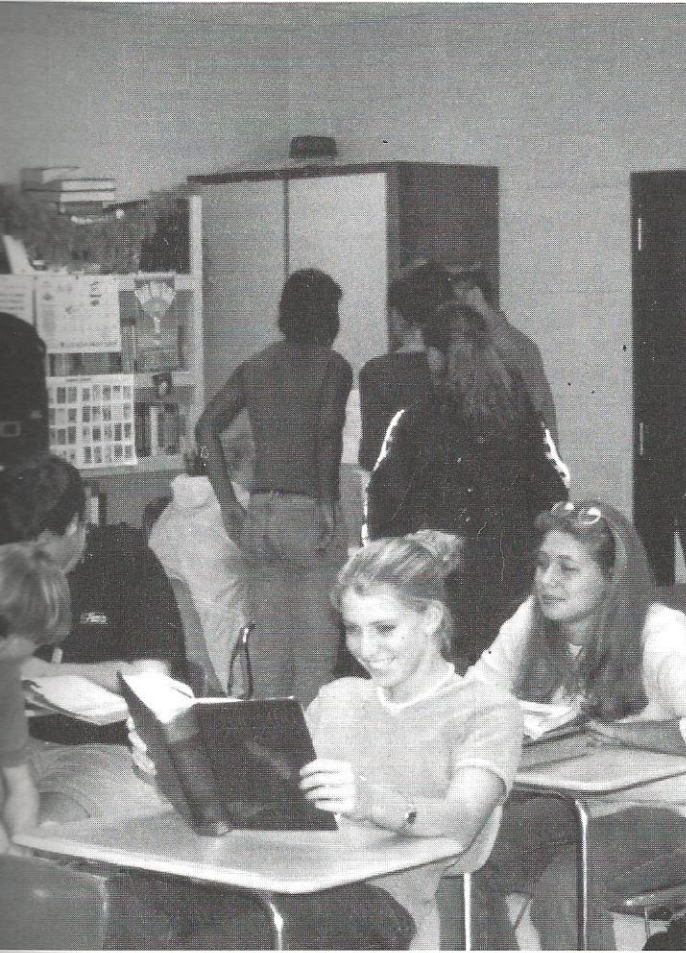

Getting in the swing of things...Almost all students look forward to the end of the day for their after school thirst quencher. Already on the 1st day of school, junior Quinton Muckelvaney picked up his after school habits.

Sweet Cancun... Many people dream about it, but few people do it. Senior Aston Hetrick and her god-sister enjoy a great summer vacation at Cancun, Mexico. This was certainly a sweet treat for Aston's seventeenth birthday.

Back In Session

The Final Bell on Summer has Rung

Brrring! Summer fun, basking in the sun, and the relaxation of summer ceased as the first bell of school rang. Students reminisced about their summer vacation as they prepared themselves for a challenging school year.

Senior Aston Hetrick sadly saw her summer come to a close as she found herself back in school. Aston visited Cancun, Mexico with her family and friends of the family. "While in Cancun, I snorkeled and went to some awesome clubs," said Aston.

Sophomore Josh Mundell experienced a more adventurous summer vacation. Josh hiked part of the Appalachian Trail in North Carolina. The difficulty level created a downside to this scenic experience. "Hiking was not the hard part. The hard part was carrying those heavy backpacks for 21 miles," said Josh.

Like Aston and Josh, other students returned to the high school atmosphere. Teachers placed homework and books aside in order for students to enjoy their first day back at school.

Junior Arnold Williams began his third year by reuniting with old school buddies. "I enjoyed the first day of school more this year than I did last year. I was not as nervous. I was ready for football season. I was ready to meet new people," said Arnold.

As summer ended and the new school year began, memories were made that would last a lifetime.

"I am definitely going back to World Changers. The people there were great and I loved helping out."

A once in a lifetime experience... Freshman Margaret Smith spent part of her summer vacation in Paris, France, also known as the city of lights. She posed for a quick snap shot on the Champs-Elysees, the street in front of the famous Eiffel Tower.

Got Spirit?

WHS Can't Hide That Bulldog Pride

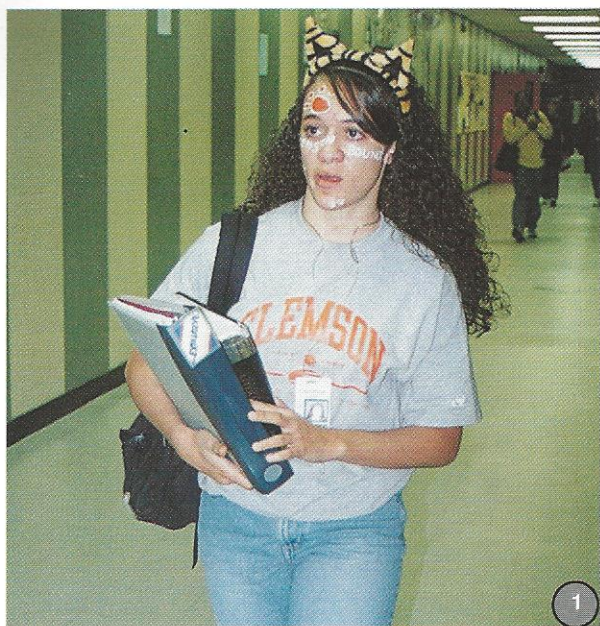

"We've got spirit. Yes, we do!" Finding original ideas to make people stand out did not seem hard for some. The halls were filled with many students and staff that had chosen to participate in spirit week. "I wanted to liven up things and make some people feel happy and laugh. I also wanted to lift up a little spirit," said senior Elliot Forsythe.

Spirit week began with college day and was followed with twin day. One of the most favorite days proved to be retro day which gained a lot of participation. "I definately liked retro day. It is fun to pull out all of the oldies clothes and compare them to your own." said senior Jessica Koth.

WHS added Character/hero day to bring some freshness to the special week. Friday brought the week to a close with Blue and White day. Throughout the halls, student's face's were painted blue and white; many also wore their dog bones, and as usual, seniors wore their "crowns" proclaiming their senior status.

All in all, more students participated in spirit week, going all out on many days, showing their "true blue."

1 Go Tigers! Senior Karen Davidson shows her support as a loyal Clemson fan on college day. She had hopes of attending Clemson University after graduation. Clemson, along with its rival, Carolina, were the two most supported colleges on college day!

2 Blue and White! Sophomore Krystle Bishop goes to the extreme to support her high school on Blue and White day. This was not unusual, though, because almost everyone had fun painting their entire bodies blue this year!

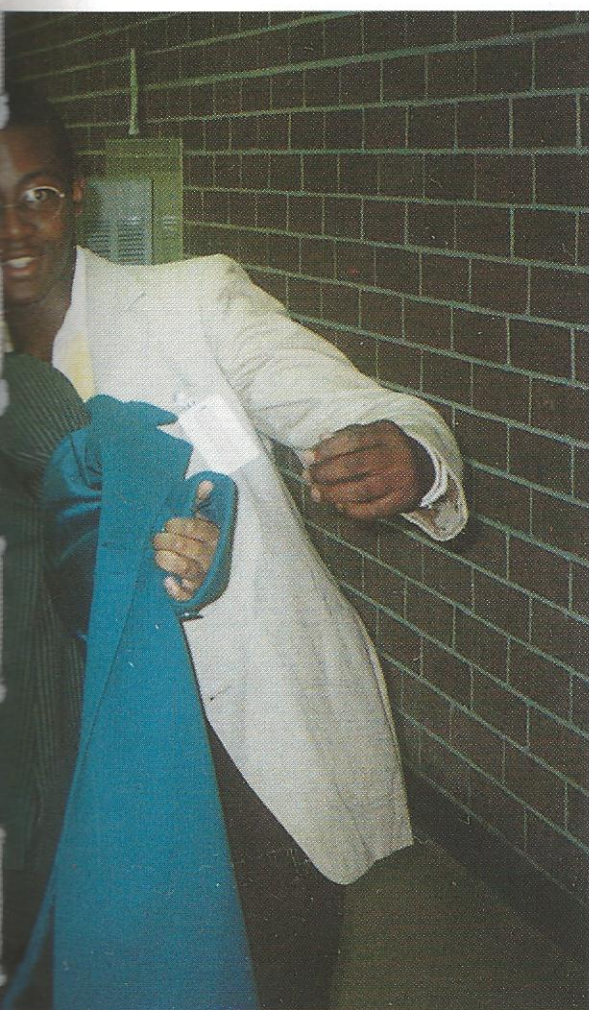

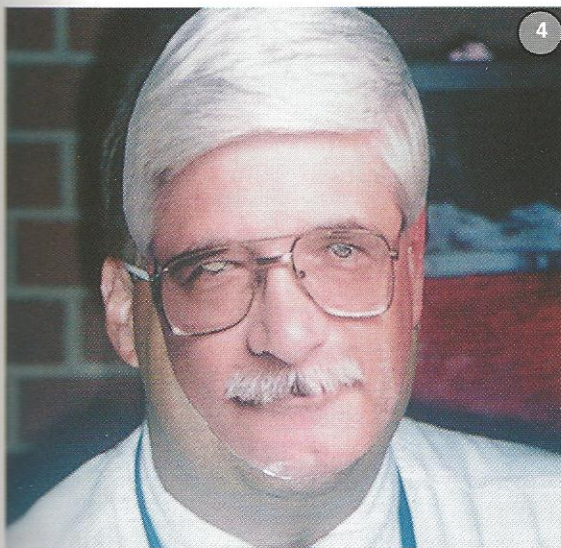

3 Get Down and Dirty! Senior Elliot Forsythe, senior Latoya Yates, and sophomore Harry Brown have a lot of attitude and enjoyment for Retro Day. Many students enjoyed participating in Retro Day also!

4 It's an imposter! The faculty, especially Mr. Locklair, got a big kick out of impersonating Mr. Pence. Hero day gave Mr. Locklair a great opportunity to show off his disguise.

5 Who's Who? "The twins," juniors Katie Inabinett and Ashley Kofron, look exactly alike for twin day. The two were best friends and had a bond like real twin sisters between them.

Twin Day

"This year was our best routine yet, because we even had matching cowgirl hats. We looked so cute!"

-junior Amanda Pournelle

Retro Day

"Sometimes I wished I lived back in the sixties because the clothes were so awesome."

-Freshman Paul Nease

Hero /Charcter Day

"Leandre Nelson went all out for hero/character day. His idea for 'Super Senior' was the best."

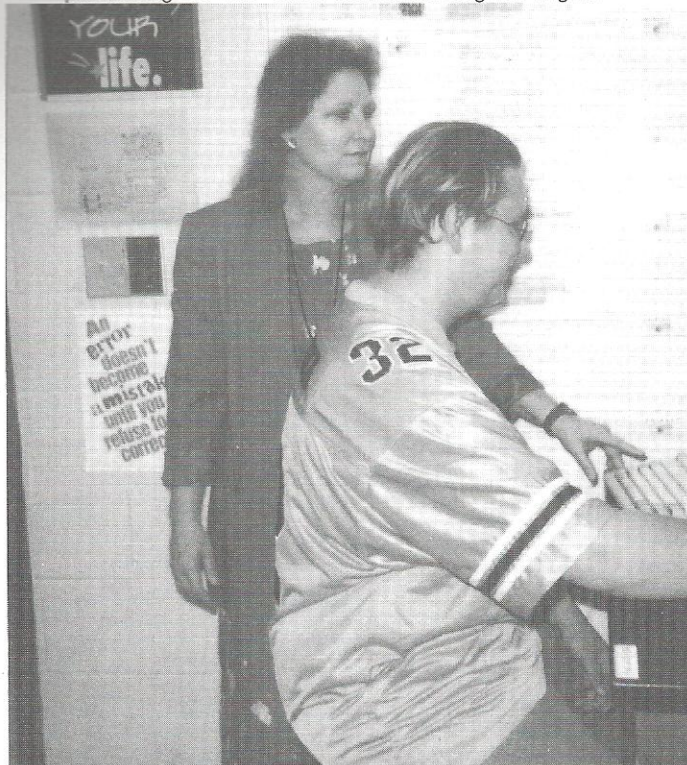

-senior Stephanie Stacy

Blue and White Day

"I waited four long years to be a senior and wear the senior crown on blue and white day."

-senior Jessica Kinard

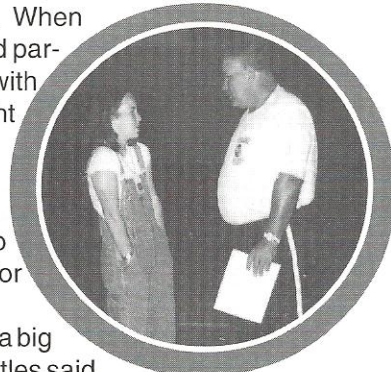

Sharing the Wealth. Mrs. Marsha Kriesle, a chemistry teacher, and her son, sophomore Wallace Kriesle explore the internet together. The two were writing a letter to the DMV in Columbia, S. C. asking questions pertaining to the laws about driving at night!

Family

How much is too much?

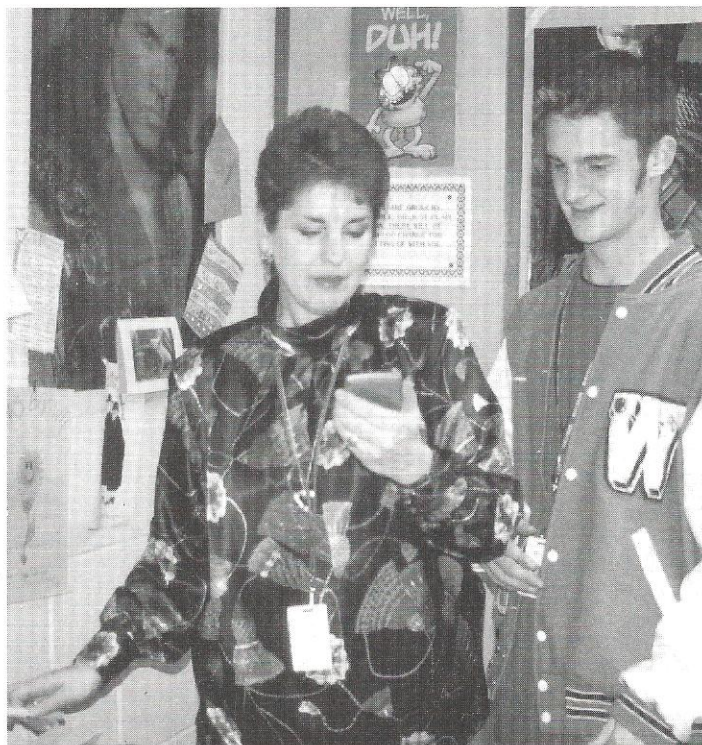

A fun-filled year between faculty and family flourished with focus on the future. When questioned, many students who had parents working at the same school with them said that the situation brought them closer together. "Having my mother teach at the same school I attend always makes me feel more comfortable because I could go to her if I needed money," said junior Paisley Polk.

Disadvantages also played a big role in the picture! Senior Lucas Nettles said, "If I get in any trouble at school, it is impossible to hide it from my mom, so it is basically double-trouble for me!" Although Lucas and his mother, English I teacher, Mrs. Susan Nettles, may or may not have enjoyed being in the same building together all day, it rarely affected their relationship.

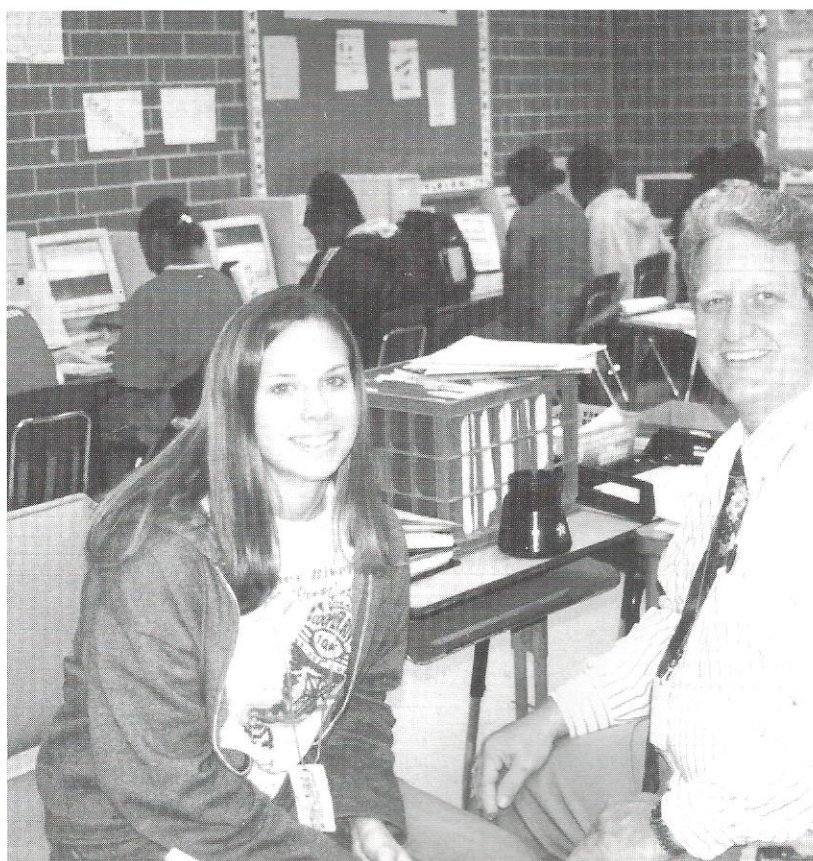

Generally, every situation was a great experience for the parents and the children. Sophomore Julie McMillian said, "Having my mother working at the same school I attend brings us closer. Since she's my guidance counselor, she helps 'guide' me through my education and teenage years."

-Frayse Lyle

The unsolved mystery. Trying to figure out what his mom, English III teacher, Vicki Brown was showing him, sophomore Caylen Brown expresses a look of confusion.

Nip it in the Bud! With a few extra minutes, junior Katie Nipper and her dad, keyboarding teacher, Mr. Nipper, pose for a picture. He expected there to be no problems to nip in the bud this year.

Bonding

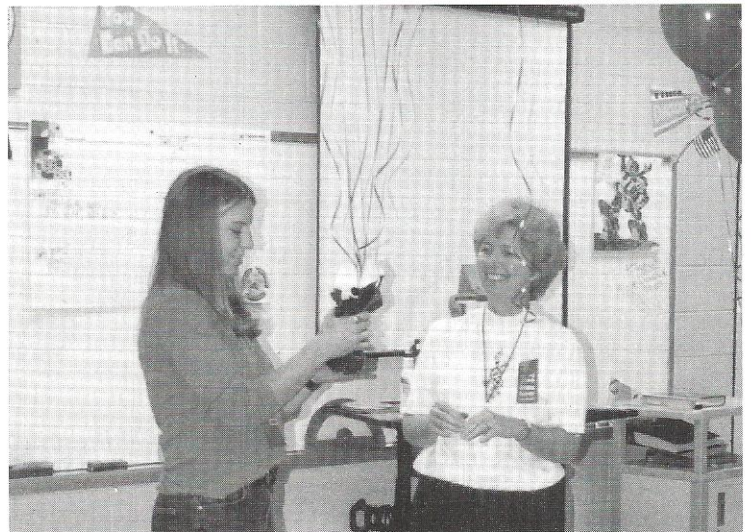

Pucker up! Supporting his mother all the way, junior Justin Singleton gives Mrs. Lily Singleton, his mother and home economics teacher, a kiss of encouragement! Both were drug-free citizens and proud of it during Red Ribbon Week.

“My Dad has always been away with the navy, so I am really glad that he works at school with me. It has made us a lot closer, and I’ll really miss him when I leave!”

-Junior Jaimie Wheeler

Fun for the whole family! Constantly smiling through work or play, junior Ashley Murdaugh and her mother, Cheryl Murdaugh, geometry teacher and a leader of the NHS, decorate for the induction ceremony. Ashley, like her mom, was known for her happy face.

Homecoming Court Winners

Bulldog Pride

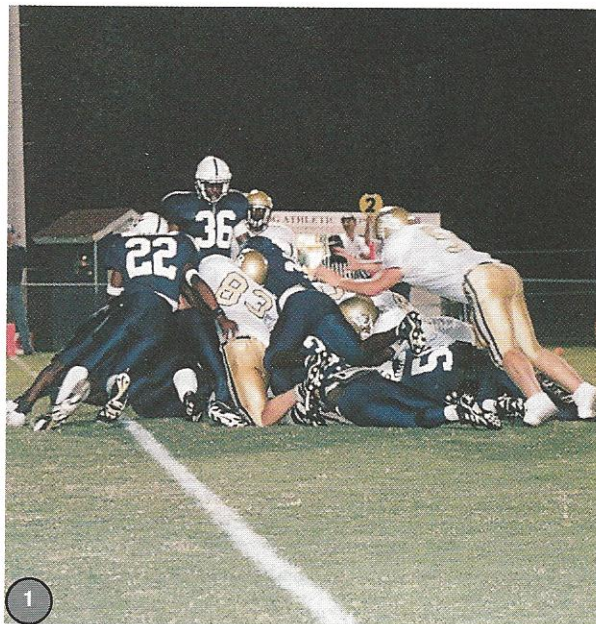

And the winner is...as the thirteen candidates for the Homecoming Court stood in front of the large crowd waiting and hoping that their names be called over the loudspeaker as the winner for their grade, emotions ran high. "I was very nervous walking out on the field. There were so many people out there," said Miss Freshman, Dominique Edwards.

Homecoming was a special night for all graduates to return to their Alma Mater. Everyone put a lot of emphasis on the game against the Battery Creek Dolphins, especially the football players. "Homecoming is important because you must win. You have to play good for all the returning graduates, because it is their night," said Senior Justin Adams.

For senior, Rita Manigo, winning Miss Homecoming was a special accomplishment. Rita, who was also crowned Miss Sophomore in 1998, was excited to be crowned once again. "I felt overwhelmed when they called my name," said Rita.

Homecoming allowed everyone from the community to show their support for the football players, cheerleaders, band members, and homecoming court candidates. With the support of the fans, the Bulldogs went on to win the game against the Dolphins.

-Amanda Lucas and Charlie Hoffman

1 Dogpile! The Bulldogs put on their fierce faces as they fight the Battery Creek Dolphins. The Dogs were victorious with a score of 19 to 7! Go Bulldogs!

2 WHS Beauties! Miss Freshman, Dominique Edwards, Miss Sophomore, Andean Richardson, the Queen, Rita Manigo, Miss Junior, Brenda Jackson, and Miss Senior, Shacurlynn Reed, smile ever so sweetly as they accept this great honor! All the winners were very respectful of their new titles!

3 Shout and scream for your team! The cheerleaders had a ball making the bright and bold run-through for homecoming this year. They patiently awaited the football players entrance, but also regretted destroying such a beautiful sign!

Trendy Styles, Friendly Smiles

Students at WHS Are Dressed to Impress

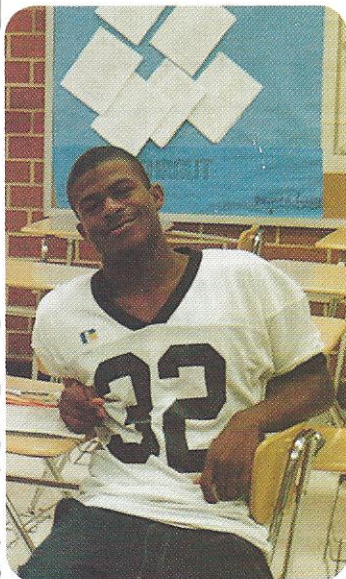

"I dress for myself. I wear what I want to wear because it appeals to me, not to attract boys," said sophomore Nicole Cook.

Teenagers dressed fashionably. They all had their own style, whether it seemed "different" compared to others, or followed along with the current fashions and fads.

"Blue jeans-hello! They're so long. Even though styles differed for comfort," said junior Heather Brown, when asked what the most common thing was that all teenagers wore. Blue jeans were found on many students around school.

The year's fashions extended from Body piercing and tattoos be- Capri pants and tube tops, to dark jeans and sweaters with three quar- year.

ter length sleeves for the girls . It seemed that tattoos and piercings started to appear everywhere.

"I have six of them," said sophomore Brandon Geddis, referring to the number of tattoos he had on his body.

Fashions and fads changed very frequently, and always will, but teenagers continued to express themselves through their physical appearance.

-Lydia McCollum

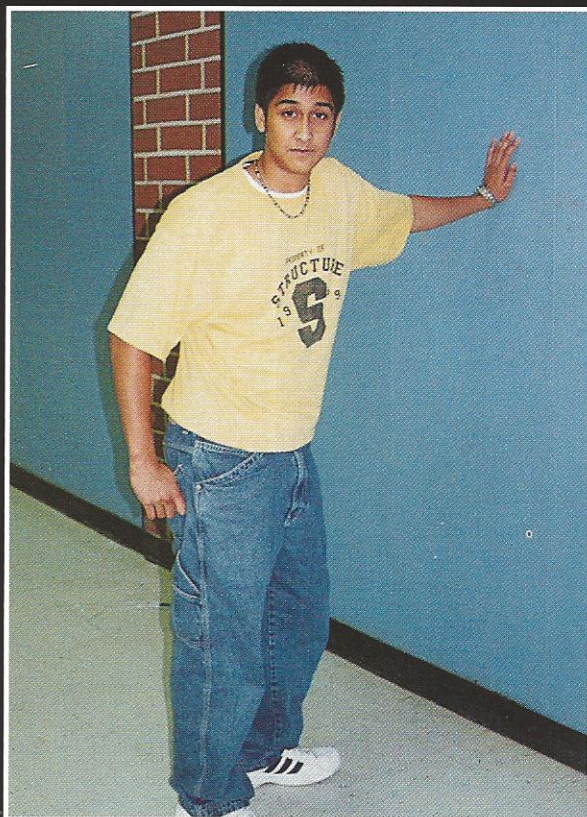

Say Cheese! Showing off her innocent but trendy look, freshman Kara Fox poses for a picture during class. Kara was later voted into the top three for Miss Freshman.

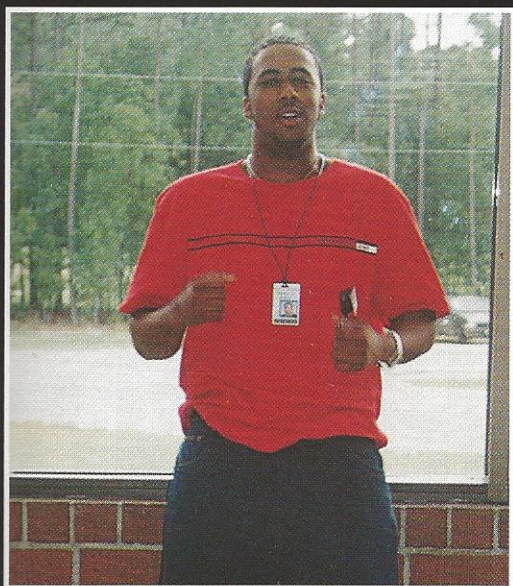

Stike a Pose! Showing off her fashionable style, freshman Dana Garrett struts her stuff. Her Tommy Hilger shirt and blue jean skirt were a major fad for the school year.

Stylin' and Profilin'! The Press and Standard's Rob Novit offers his head as an easel for willing artists on Friday nights. The football managers took turns painting Rob's head each game.

Struttin' His Stuff! Setting off an easygoing look, senior Shakti Patel poses for the camera. His Structure T-shirt and baggy jeans were a popular fashion over the year.

Smile Pretty! Getting caught off guard by the camera, senior J.P. Parks models his style. His Tommy Hilfiger shirt and blue jean shorts were very stylish.

Weekends & nightlife

What did students do on Friday nights? Around here, people went to the movies, to parties, hunted, or to football games.

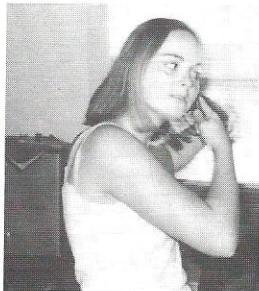

"I usually just hang out on Jefferies with my boyfriend, Matt Nettles, or go to Bryan Harrison's house," said junior Stephanie Ballard. Many chose to go to friend's houses instead of going out, enjoying the evenings spent at home. After long weeks at school, students needed a break. Most sat back and relaxed while others went out and had fun. Some went to Charleston or out of town for the weekend to have fun.

"Some of my friends and I went to downtown Charleston one time and went shopping. Then we went to Folly Beach where we had a lot of fun," said sophomore Tara Scheir.

Some students dedicated their weekends to sports. "It's a very athletic sport and I enjoy playing the game. My teammates and I have a lot of fun on and off the field," said freshman Bray Mabry.

On her weekends she would play soccer for Wildfire. She planned to play for the high school in spring. Even though Walterboro was a small community everyone found something to do on the weekends.

-Ericka Kizer

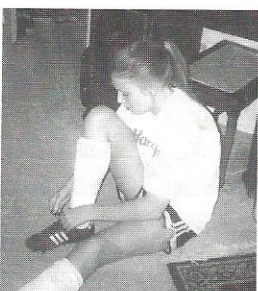

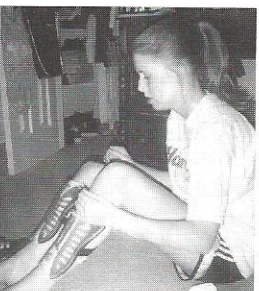

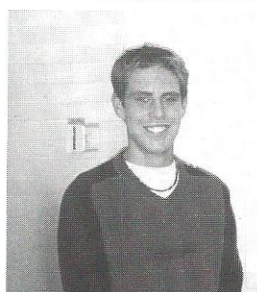

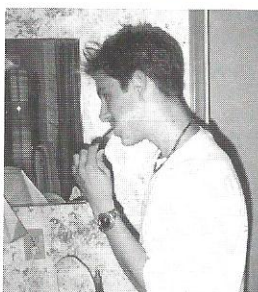

Many Walterboro High School students got ready for their nights out on the weekend. Some went out and some went to play soccer.

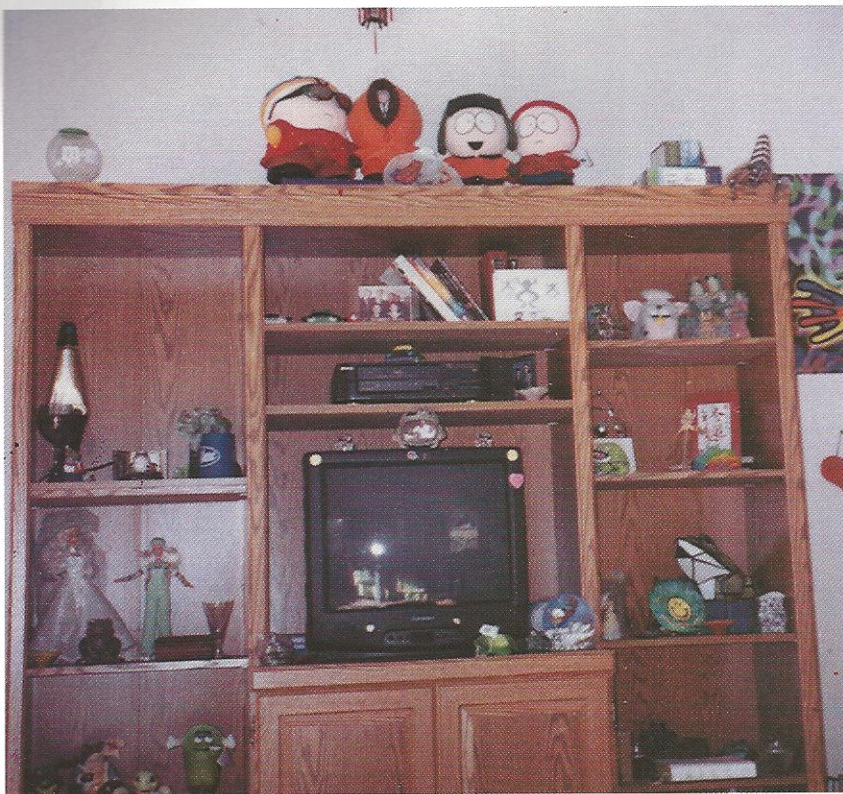

As sophomore Celeste Simmons got ready for her night out, she combed her hair and decided what to wear. It usually took girls a long time to get ready.

With guys, sophomore Evan Culpepper is shown getting ready to go to a party. All he had to do was put gel in his hair and brush his teeth, and he was on his way.

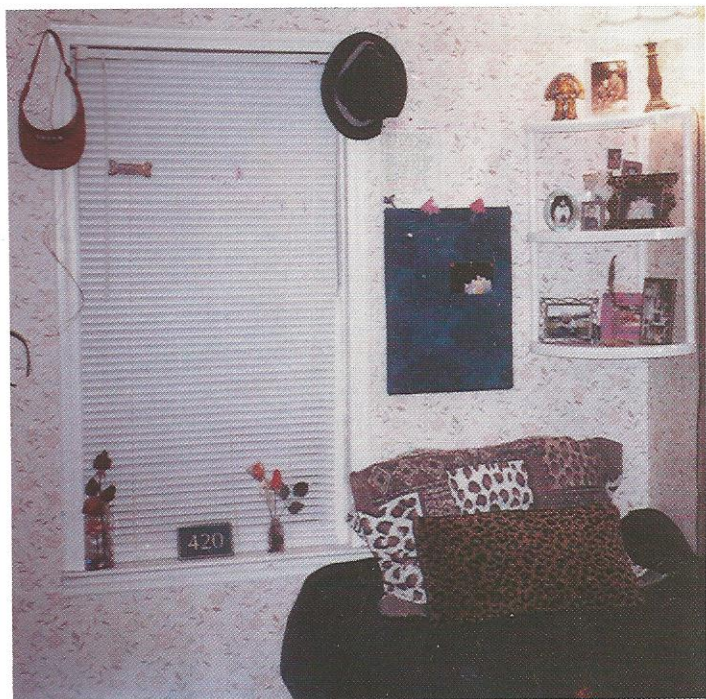

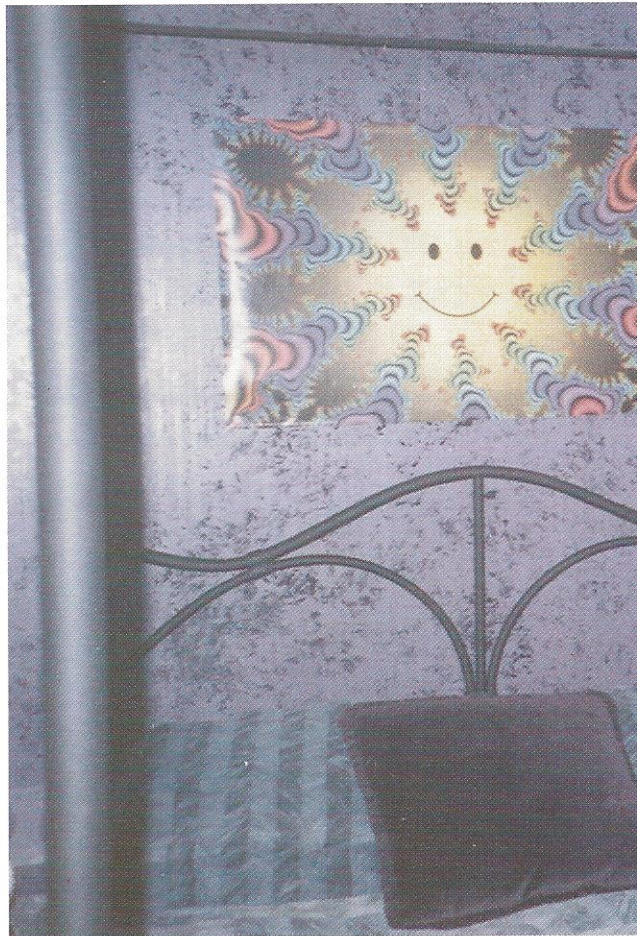

Sophomore Mary Caroline Wilkinson usually had soccer games on Saturdays. All she had to do to get ready was put her shin guards and cleets on, get in her jersey and head to the soccer field.

Ribbitt... Southpark and frogs can be found in junior Jennifer Crosby's room. Jennifer also had many autographed posters from musicians she had met.

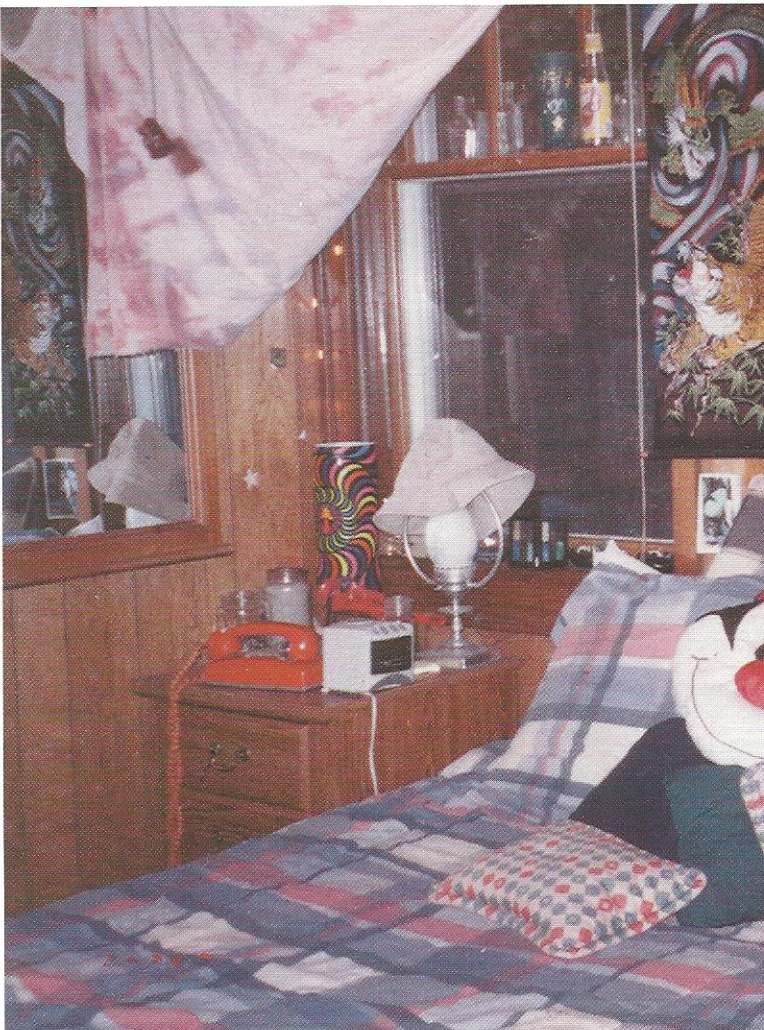

Wild designs Covering the walls of freshman Tiffany Lewis' room fit her personality to a "t". She had not quite finished with her design, though.

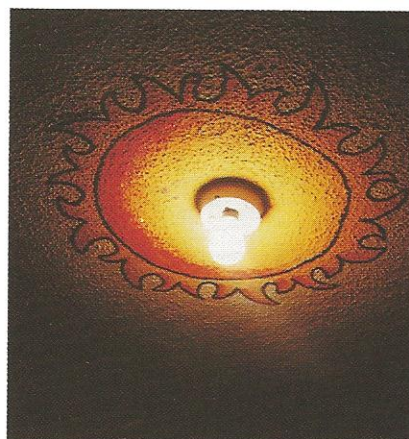

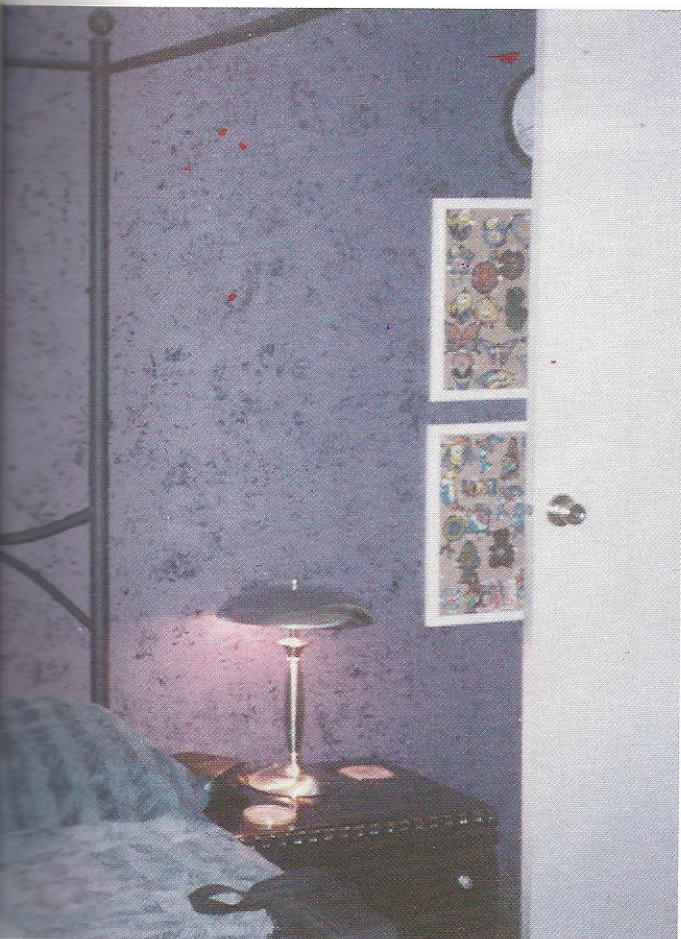

Welcome to the jungle... Leopard print is the main theme in junior Jodi Clark's bedroom. Jodi was known to wear leopard print accessories, as well.

Hippie Style... Statues of Buddha and posters of Christina Ricci cover sophomore Buist Bickley's room. Buist liked to display his unique style in his room.

Bedroom Behavior

Bedrooms are no longer just a safe haven.

What did a person's bedroom say about him or herself? A bedroom showed different personalities, interests, and characteristics of a particular person.

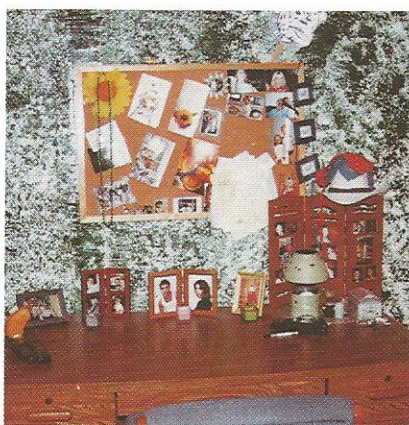

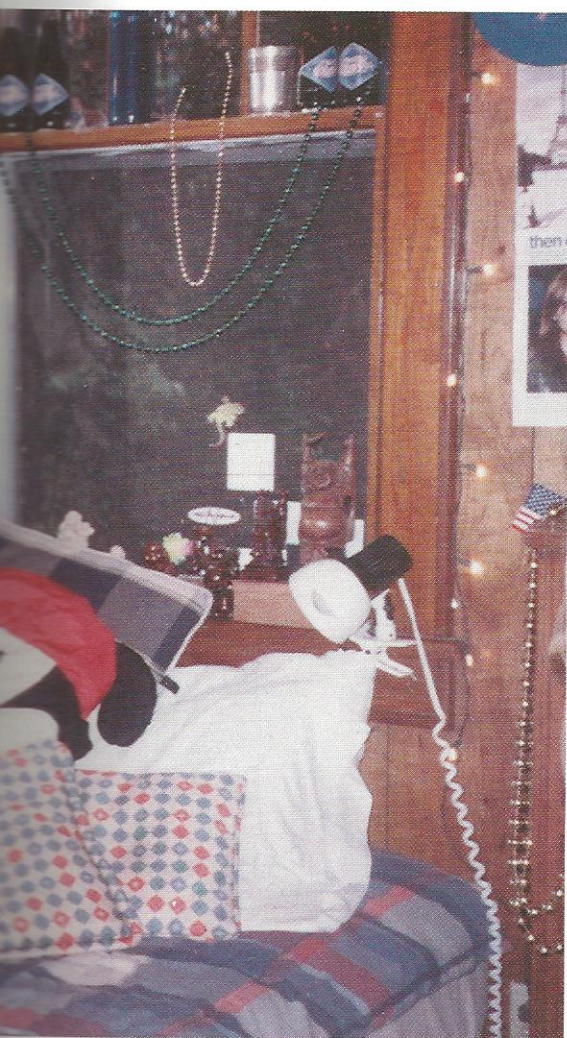

"I like my room because it brings out my personality," said freshman Tiffany Lewis.

There were many different ways a person could decorate their room to make it different, or interesting. They could have put something unusual on their ceiling, painted their walls weird colors, or had different objects in their room.

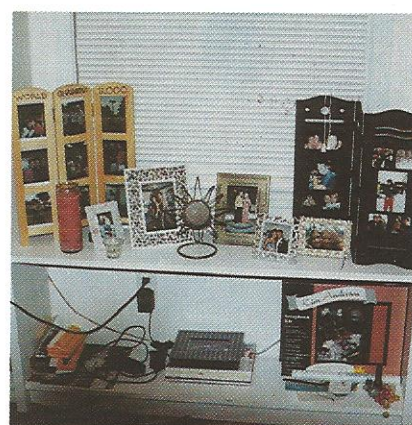

"My bedroom used to be my garage. My walls are cement and they are painted white with green sponging," said junior Kristy Renfro.

Bedrooms reflected a person's individuality. It matched their interests and personalities. As a person grew and matured, their room changed, reflecting the changes in their lives.

-Angela Reeves

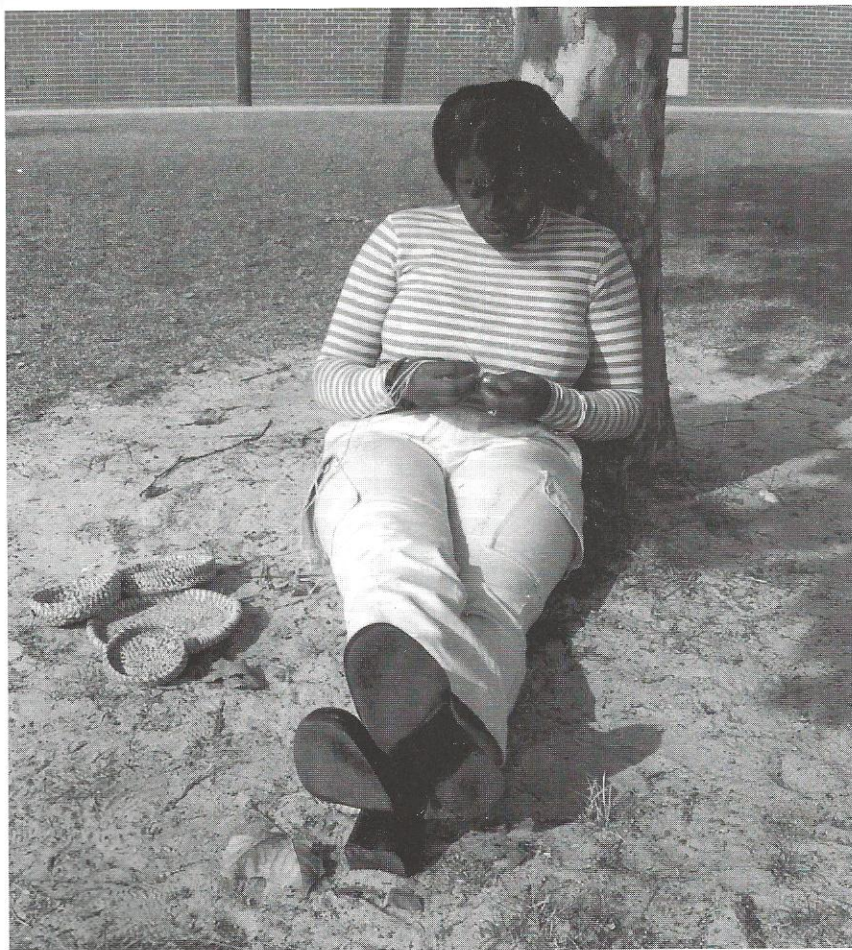

Unique Walls... junior Kristy Renfro, like others, has many pictures of friends and family. her walls were different, though, because they were made of cement.

Silver, Bronze, Metal... Junior Amanda Pournelle, shows an interest in collecting different picture frames. Here she remembers her most precious moments of her life.

Weaving Traditions. Senior Rebecca Bennett sits in the shade weaving a sweetgrass basket. She enjoyed doing this on her free time to relieve stress. Mrs. Zielke taught many classes of basket weaving through the years.

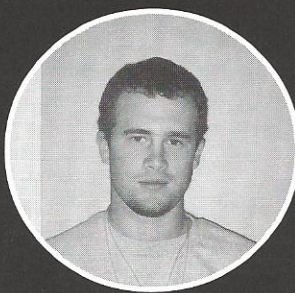

A Gentleman's Charm. Senior Donald Green flashes a captivating smile at senior Robin Aiken. Not many gentleman can be found in the hallways at the high school but every now and then one is found.

Southern Belles. Seniors Kristen McLeod and Sophia Barnes nervously prepare for the Miss Walterboro Pageant. Sophia won the title, with Kristen as runner up. Both girls had a great time at their first pageant.

"Country Cookin' Makes You Good Lookin'"

"One of my favorite southern traditions is eating Thanksgiving dinner at my hunting club with my family. I eat grits."

-senior Craig Stivender

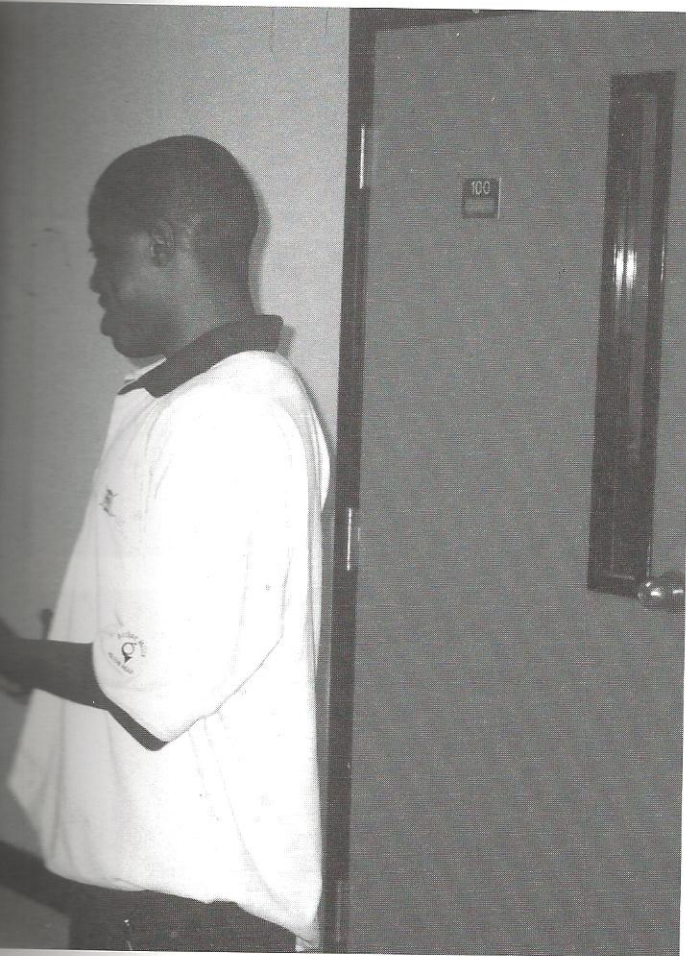

"I'm from Pennsylvania and there isn't much difference between Thanksgiving traditions here than there are there. Probably one big difference is that the Amish have harvest time."

-senior Rachel Cartier

Southern Traditions

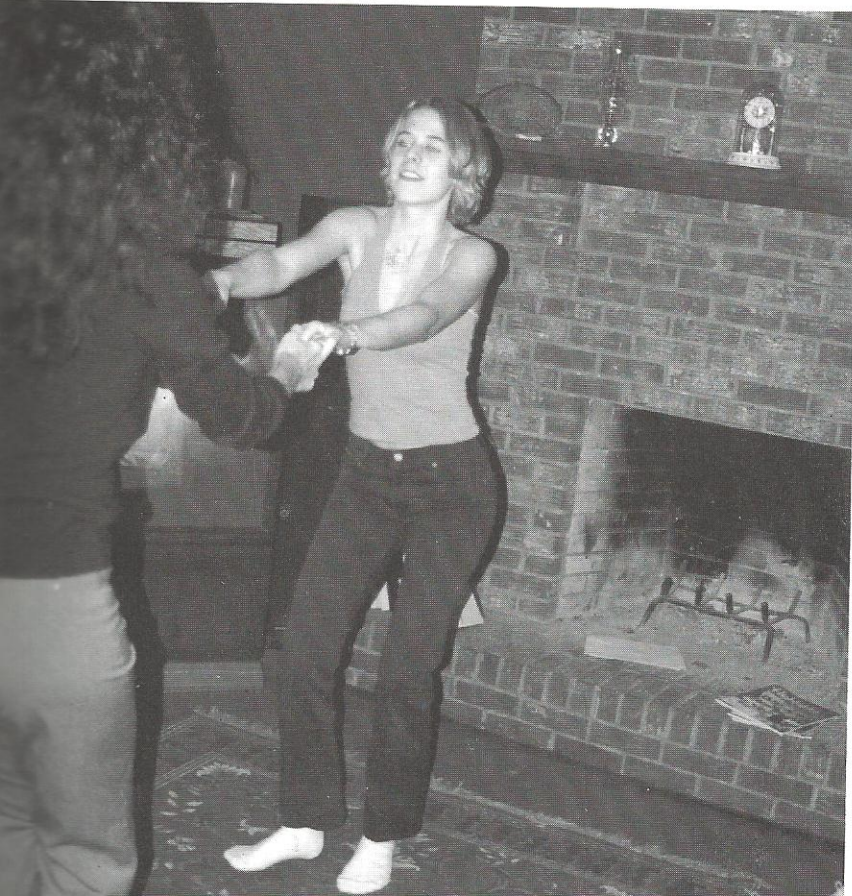

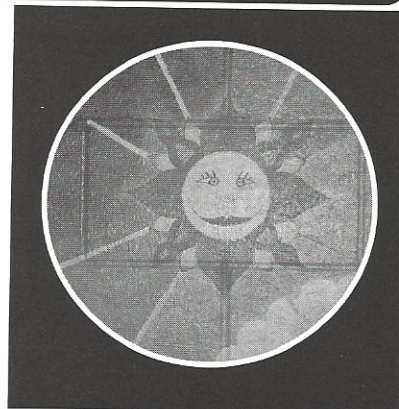

There's More to the South than Grits and Dixie

Nothin' could be finer than to be in Carolina... Soul food, shagging, basket weaving, hospitality, country accents...all of these things are associated with southern traditions. Along with great southern hospitality comes sensational cooking with dishes such as grits, fried chicken, cornbread, macaroni and cheese, and corn on the cob.

Time-consuming sweetgrass basket weaving originated here in the south and has been passed down from generation to generation. "Everyone should try basket weaving, it's fun and it allows you to relax because you can be as rough or as gentle with the basket as you want to," said senior Rebecca Bennett. Rebecca learned her sophomore year how to weave these traditional baskets and her distant relative owns the Sweetgrass Baskets and Things shop on Main Street. Another famous tradition that originated in the South is the up beat dance called shagging. Gini Girardeau and her mother love to take time out to shag, "Whenever I need a little motivation or I just feel like dancing, I grab my mom, put on some Otis Redding, and start shagging," said Gini.

-Paisley Polk

Good Home Cookin'. One sure thing about the South is the way people go all out with huge homecooked meals for the holidays! Julia Travis stopped to take a picture of her table for Thanksgiving, stuffed to the max with food.

Shagging on the boulevard...Senior Gini Girardeau swings her mother and shags away the afternoon. Like many other Southerners who enjoy the state dance, Gini and her mom love shagging to tunes which bring back memories of the summer.

The Good The Bad And the Ugly...

AS GOOD AS IT GETS

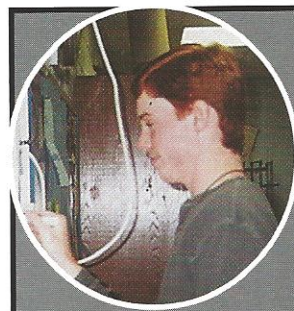

As students entered their freshmen and sophomore years, the anticipation of finally being able to drive mounted to an ultimate high. Some had parents who granted them the car of their choice. Others were forced to earn their wheels themselves.

Like a teenagers' room, a car often reflected the personality of its owner. Whether driving into the school parking lot or cruising around in their cars on a Saturday night, students liked the reactions they got from passers-by.

Regardless of the students' preference in cars, they all reflected the various personalities of the drivers.

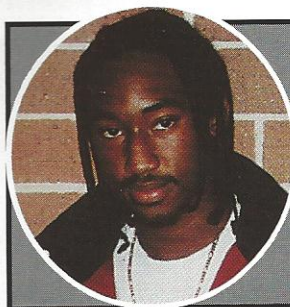

As the 3:07 dismissal bell rang, those who were able to drive made a mad dash to the student parking lot, some proud of their ride, and others not so proud.

-Shera Brown

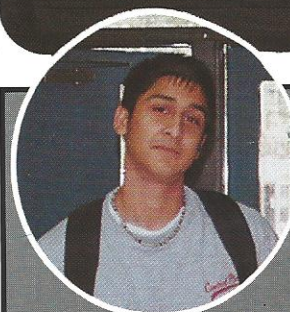

Most Likely To Make it Through The Swamp ...

Senior Clay Chaplin enjoyed driving through the mud to test out the strength of his truck. Senior Kyle Moody and he enjoyed mudding and hunting on the weekends. The two have been friends for years and enjoyed spending the weekends together.

Most Spoiled! Senior Howard Jackson's car sat in the parking lot looking sporty and classy. Howard was in band all four years of high school. His favorite part about being in band was the Friday night football games!

THE CHICK CHARMER... Senior Shakti Patel drove away while seniors Jamie Goodwin, Wendy Varner, April Bullock, Tavera Edwards, and junior Monique Boatwright stood and waved at him as he left the parking lot.

Old But Sweet! Senoir JP Parks had a 1964 Chevy Impala that he loved showing off, that sat in the student parking lot . "The best memory about my car is when all the girls were sweating it at a car show," said JP . "The only bad thing about his car is the gas milage , but other than that, it was looking good.

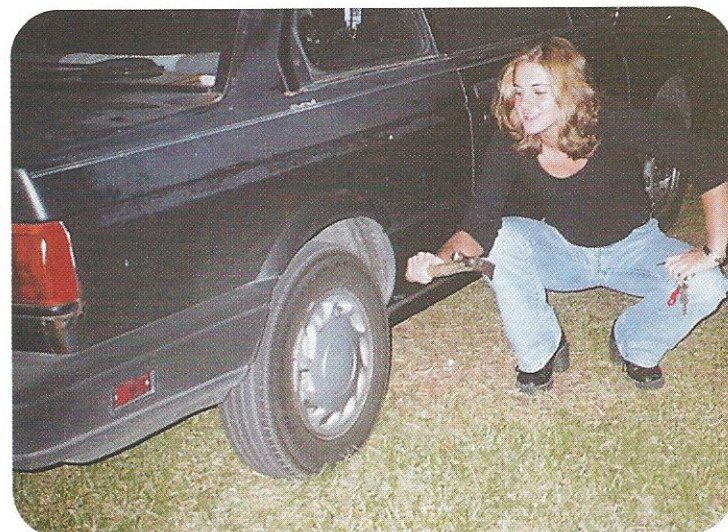

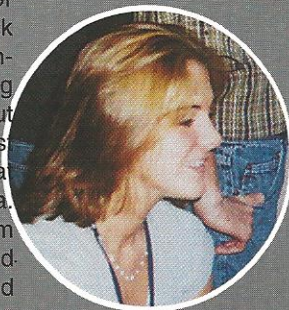

The Ride That Impresses! Senior Lysa Ramsey cruised away sporting her convertible Pontiac Firebird. She enjoyed hanging out with her friends and working at Dimitrios in her free time.

BOOMING SYSTEM... Senior Jason Berry made sure his system was ready to boom. He wanted to be sure it would be sounding good when he pulled out of the parking lot so he would attract the ladies as he left. Jason had two Rockford Fosgate Punch DVC's with a 1200 Watt U.S. Acoustic Amp in his truck. His speakers consisted of high and midrange speakers of two Orion, six 1 1/2 speakers in the door, two 4 1/2 speakers in his dash, and two fulton tweeters that all ran to a 200 watt PPI amp.

In Most Need Of Repair... Senior Sophia Barnes put her hub cap back on with a hammer due to it's tendency to fall off while she was driving down the road. "The best part about my car is the CD player and the worst part about it is the huge antenna that sticks out on my car " said Sophia. Sophia's car was passed down from her older sister Sophia enjoyed playing soccer in the spring and going to First Baptist Of Walterboro wher she was a member of the local youth group World Changers. Sophia had also tried to wreck her car many of times to get a new one, but it never really worked.

The Best of Times

Bringing in the New Year...

Not only did WHS students enjoy fall holidays because it was a break away from school, but it was also a time to spend with friends and family. Students had different ways of celebrating Halloween, Thanksgiving, Christmas, and New Years.

Jessica Crosby always spent Christmas at her great-grandmother's house near Hendersonville.

"My favorite holiday to me means spending quality time with the people that I love," she said.

Sometimes students could not be with their families during the holidays because they had to be other places.

"This Thanksgiving I was not home with my family because I was in New York marching in the Macy's Parade with the band in the freezing cold," said sophomore Jared Morris.

Travel has become a part of most Christmases around America. Junior Jenna Hampston received a suitcase as one of her presents for Christmas for future traveling.

"I travel every Christmas so this helps me alot," said Jenna.

Although everyone spent their holidays in a different they shared their holidays with the people they love.

-Courtenay Daniels
Julie McMillan

It's the best present ever! While ripping one of her presents open on Christmas Day, junior Jenna Hampton comes to find that her present, a suitcase, is very handy. Jenna later used her suitcase to travel.

"I love the holidays because I get to spend time with my family. Just being able to eat around the table and taking a good look at your loved ones is great. To me it is a time for you and your loved ones to get together."

Smiling faces... Students participate in school activities during the holidays. Senior Latoya Yates, junior Jodi Clark, and senior Rebecca Bennett sang at the Hampton Strret Auditorium for WHS's Christmas chorus concert.

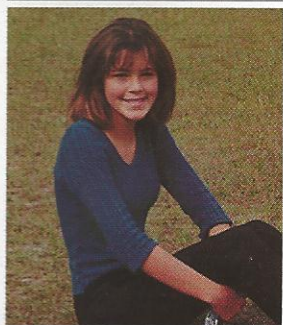

A Week in the Life of...

"Another Day in the Doghouse"

Person

Monday

Tuesday

Freshman
Kara Fox

I get up in the morning and rush out the door because I'm usually late for school. After a long day at school, I have to go to cheerleading competition practice. I see my life flash before my eyes as I am catapulted into the air, which usually makes me forget about my long day at school. When I finally get home I remember my homework and exhaustedly crawl into bed.

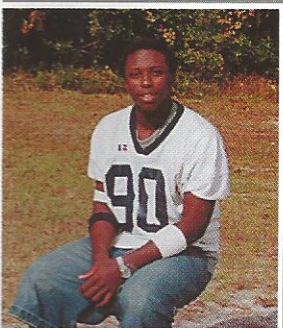

I wake up and realize my alarm was not just the sirens in my dream. I pry my eyelids open and hurriedly make myself presentable to go to school. I go to cheerleading practice for the J.V. and competition squads and scream my guts out. By the time I get home I'm so tired I can't do my homework so I just forget some of it. Oh well, only one more zero.

Sophomore
Sophia White

My alarm sounds off at exactly 6:00 a.m. I put on a pair of sweats and a t-shirt and go outside to jog for about 20 minutes. After jogging, I take a shower and get ready for school. This is the most boring day of the week, but it is also the day all the students are talking about the weekend. After school I have practice with a singing group called MoDef. After practice I go home, eat dinner, and go to bed.

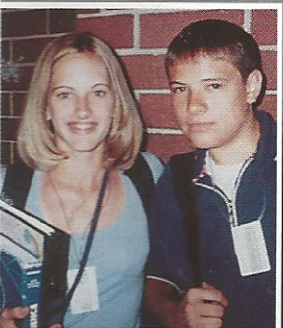

Tuesday is a pretty moderate day. After an okay day at school, I have cheerleading practice for an hour and a half. Then I go to Barbizon modeling/acting school, which lasts for approximately 3 tiresome hours. I get home around 8:30 and get my homework done, I try to be asleep by 10:00 or 10:30.

Junior
Shawn Tomlin

Today is always the slowest day of the week. I wake up, get dressed, and on the way to school I flirt with all the girls on the bus. When I get to school I talk with all my friends before the bell rings and find out what they did over the weekend. When school gets out I have to go to football practice in the miserable heat but it's worth it. After practice I go home and chill, then I do my homework and go to sleep.

I go to school and usually sleep through all of my classes except for lunch. On Tuesdays I am always really tired. When the bell rings, I feel relieved from my long day at school. I go to football practice for a few hours then I go home and get ready to go out with my friends. I try to be home early so I can wake up and go to school on Wednesday morning.

Senior
Tommy Morris

After I roll out the bed, half asleep, I go take a shower. I end up washing my hair twice because I forgot if I washed it the first time. I go to school, and have a boring day as usual. When the day ends I go home and rest a little while then get up and go to work. After working for about 2 hours, I meet Craig Stivender and we go hunting. When I get home I try to get some of my homework done.

I wake up to the horrible sound of the alarm clock going off in my ear, as I remember I have to meet all my friends for breakfast. I rush to take a shower, then I run out the door forgetting my homework in the house. I get to school on time and my day goes pretty well. I go to work again, as usual. I get home around 6:00 and go fishing, it seems to unwind me from the day.

Wednesday

Yah! I'm halfway through the week. I decided to do my homework tonight, or at least however much I can get done before soccer practice. After kicking the ball around for an hour or two, I come home and watch my favorite TV show and fall asleep on the sofa.

Wednesday is always the busiest day of the week. It seems like I have endless amounts of homework, and a million things to do at once. I have cheerleading practice, focus dance, choreographers practice, and singing group practice all after school. I have tons of things to do at home, not to mention homework. At the end of the day I am completely exhausted.

Well, I slept late this morning because we ended up staying out later than we were supposed to last night. I rush into the kitchen and cook myself something good for breakfast, and I barely catch the bus on time. When I get to school I have to run to class because I am already late. After school I hang out with my family, and I talk on the phone with my friends.

I have to wake up a little bit earlier to allow time to give my friends a ride to school. On the days I give them a ride we usually by-pass the school and skip the day. When school gets out, I go home acting like I am just getting out of school. I go to work for a while, then later on I go to a girls house.

Thursday

Oops! I forgot to set the alarm clock last night. Surprise! I'm late again! Yeah, yeah, yeah, same old stuff happens everyday. But I keep my head high, because the weekend is on its way! I also cheer at the J.V. game which helps boost my spirits.

Thursday is the longest day of the week. It is the day before all the tests, and also the day of the J.V. game that I have to attend. I have to cheer at this game and it finally ends around 10:00. I get home sometime around 10:15 and have to study for tests and do my homework. I usually go to bed around 12:30 on these nights.

Today I am happy because I only have one more day of school left. The best thing about Thursdays is I don't have football practice and I can go home early and relax with my family after we eat supper. When I get finished with my homework, I watch TV and listen to music, most of the time I fall asleep.

I wake up thinking it's Saturday. As my alarm clock rings I realize that it is Thursday and I don't feel like going to school but I know that I only have one more day. So I go to school and have a pretty interesting day. I don't have to work today, so when I get home I go hunting with Craig again because Tuesdays and Thursdays are the days we go.

Friday

For once I woke up on time. It's hard to oversleep when subconsciously I know there is a fun weekend ahead. I finally made it! At 3:07 I rush out the door to go home and get ready for the football game. Can you believe I really got up on time today?

After a long day at school, I go home and get ready for "ladies night out." That's when my friends and I find something interesting to do, in celebration of the weekend. We get home at about 12:00, and stay up half the night talking and laughing. "Ladies night out" is always a great start to our weekend.

At last! Today is the most awesome day of the week. I stay really alert and awake on Fridays because me and all the boys on the football team get pumped up before the "big game." If we have an away game we eat in the commons area before we leave. I don't get home until late on Friday nights. If we win our game I stay in a good mood all weekend.

Finally, this is the last day! I am up at 6:00 on Friday morning. I get to school and talk with my friends about our weekend plans before the bell rings, and my day at school goes pretty well. When the bell rings, I leave having plans for tonight. Later on, I meet up with my friends and do whatever we decide sounds the most interesting. I get home around 12:30, go to bed, and sleep late Saturday morning.

STOP!!

That is SO annoying!!

"Oh my gosh, that get's on my nerves so bad." Everyday these words could be heard coming from students' mouths.

Pet Peeves were a huge part in everyday lives. Many pet peeves were common, such as swearing or chewing loudly. Other pet peeves such as sniffing, and loud laughter were huge annoyances for others.

"I strongly detest when people, espically friends, are two faced," said junior Fraysse Lyle.

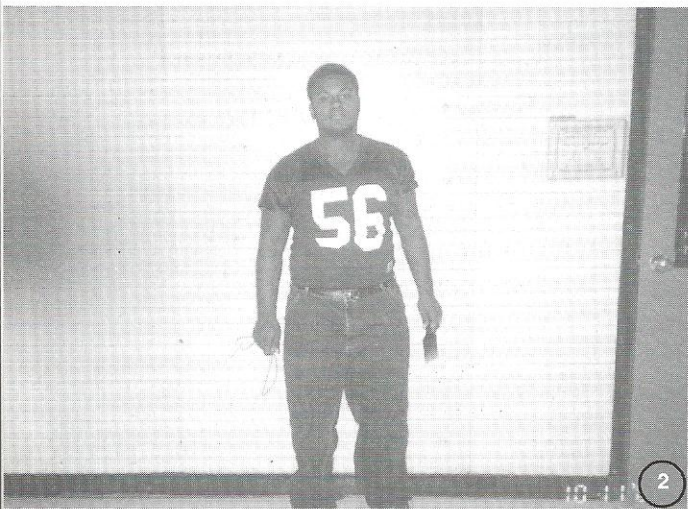

It seemed that so many daily activities bothered so many people. "The most annoying thing that anyone could do is smack their food when they eat," said sophomore Ashley Pinckey.

Many people lived for pet peeves, because it gave them something to complain about. "I like having a pet peeve because it gives me something to focus my frustrations on," said sophomore Krystle Bishop.

Other pet peeves were more personal. "I really have a problem with people invading privacy and when other people do it just to get on my nerves," said senior Leah Elkins.

Everyone had their own complaints; however, getting past the pet peeves seemed to be a challenges for all to overcome.

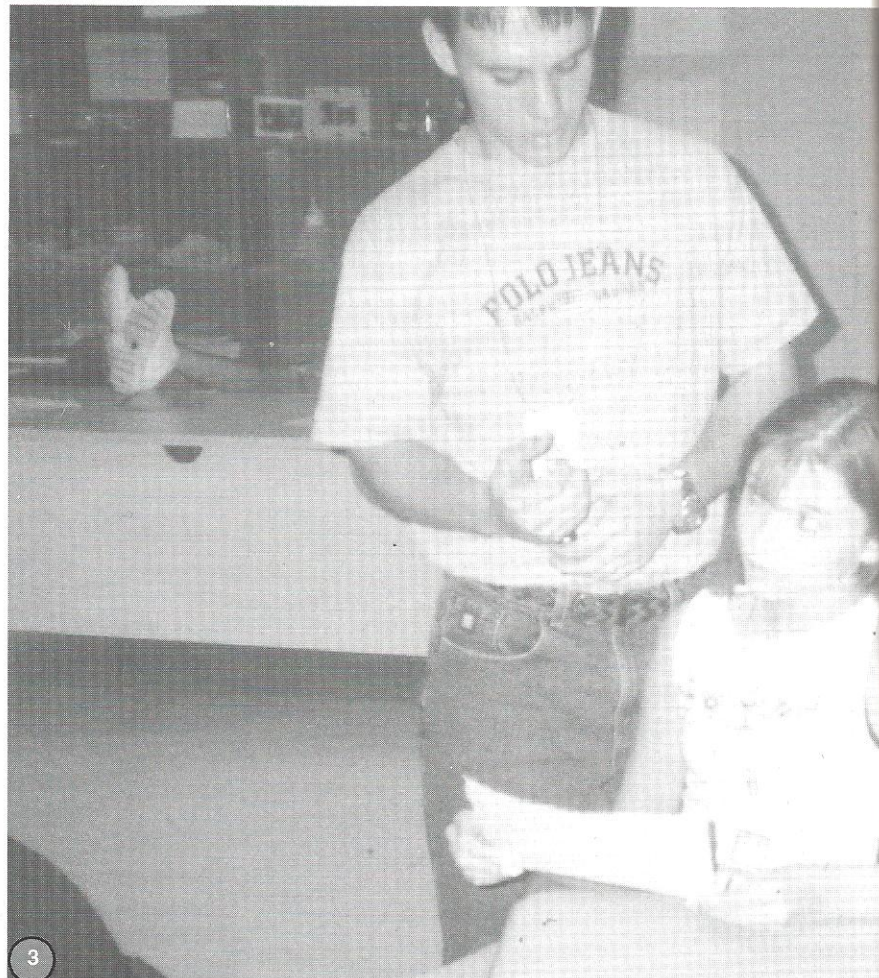

-Erika Kizer

1 Smack Attack! Annoying things bother everyone and for freshman Hunter Thomas, smacking is the worst. Everyone should have known better than to smack their food.

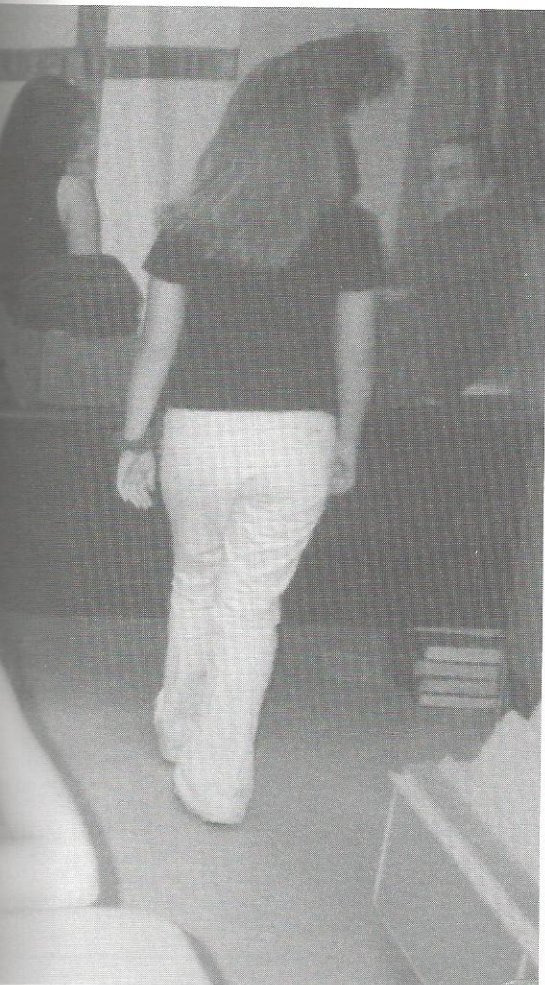

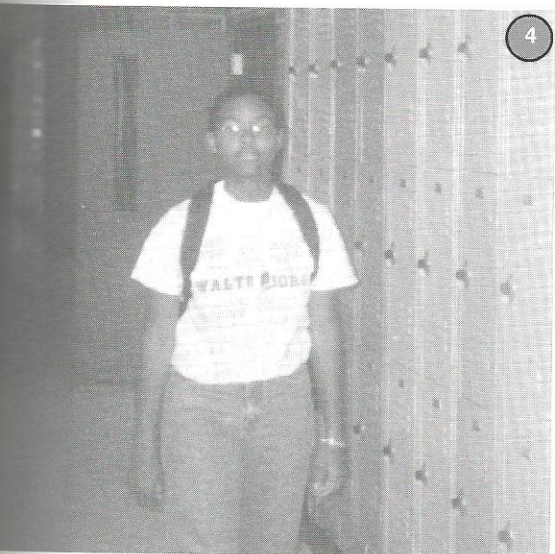

2 I'm too sexy. Sophomore Brandon Johnson's biggest pet peeve is with people who he considers, full of themselves. It felt nice to have self-confidence, but that did not mean it should be taken to the extreme.

3 Get Away From Me. What bothers junior Angie Reeves is someone standing over her. Invading someone's area, a no-no, should always have been avoided, it made one seem rude.

Ms. Manners. Sophomore Ashley Pinkey also has a major problem with bad manners. She thought that some eating habits appeared gross and should have been improved.

Road Rage. Road Rage is a common pet peeve, especially with teenagers. Sophomore Buist Bickley proved that he, like many new drivers had a severe case of road rage.

Personality

- A Message from the students of WHS

"I feel that your personality tells a little about yourself, I try to keep a positive image and always seem to find others who know me because of this aspect. Don't let anyone or anything put you down because life is something to enjoy."

Freshman, Yvonne Gant

"My advice to others would be to keep your minds focused on things that will take you to higher heights in life, so if you follow the yellow brick road to success, accomplishment is at the next stop sign!"

Senior, Raymond Terry

"Everyone I associate with has to have a good personality and a sense of humor. You can't always judge people by appearance or opinion. You have to know a person's personality before you can really know that person."

Junior, Cameron Rickenbaker

"I feel that it is important for everyone to have a good personality and to smile like me; I love to smile."

Senior, Rebecca Bennett

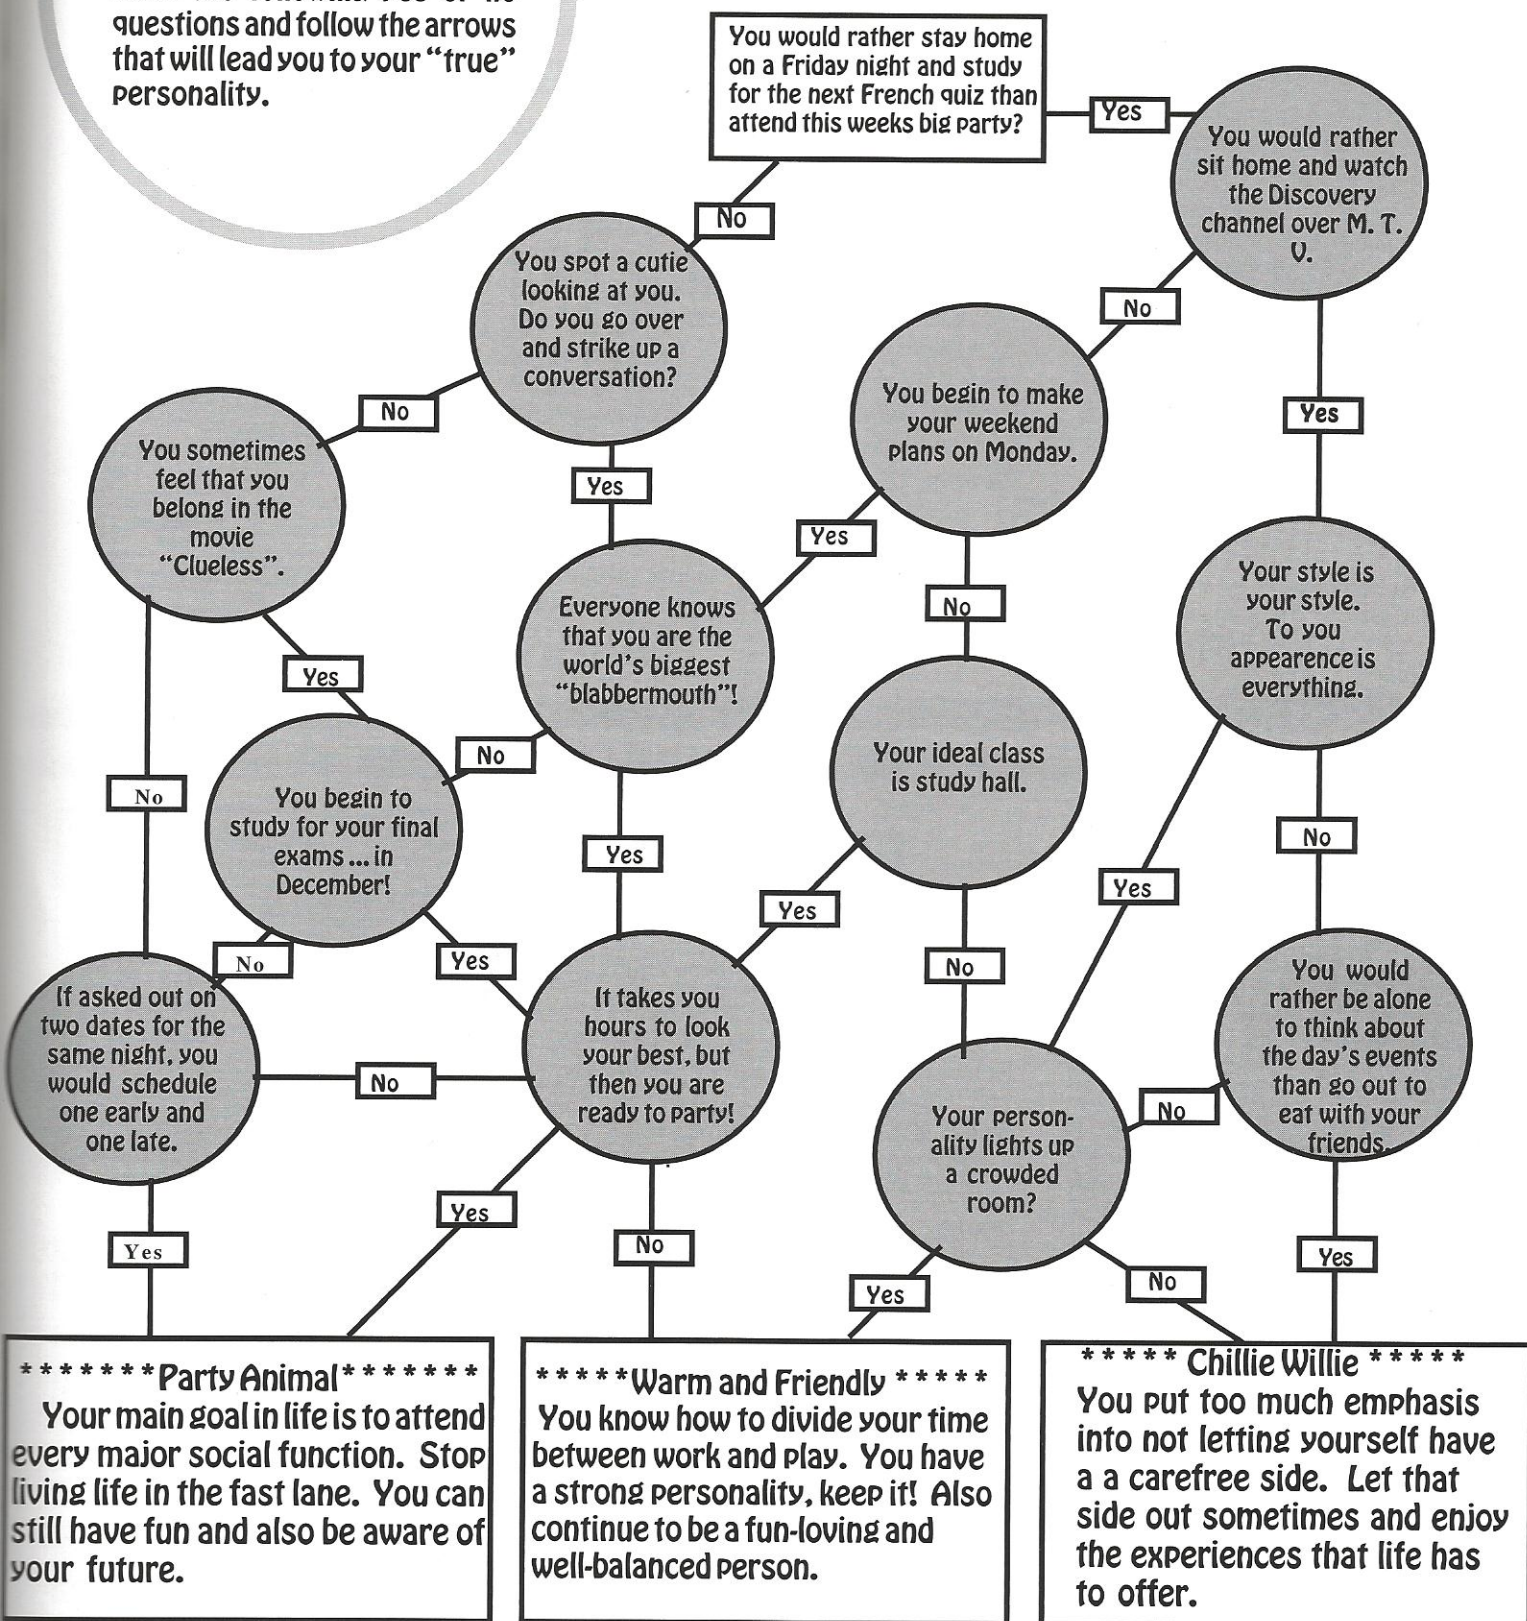

"It is important for everyone to have a good personality. This way they will know who their true friends are; those who share positive, caring, and loving personalities."

Junior, Nicole Elliott

Hard Decisions! Having difficulty deciding which movie to rent that night, sophomore Meredith Drescher browses through the Video House for the best choice! Fun-filled nights were mostly occupied with popcorn, friends, and comfy couches!

Movies

Lights! Camera! Action! Movies appeared to be extremely popular among teens. Whether they went out and watched a movie at the cinemas, rented a movie, or just watched it on the satellite, teenagers watched movies all the time.

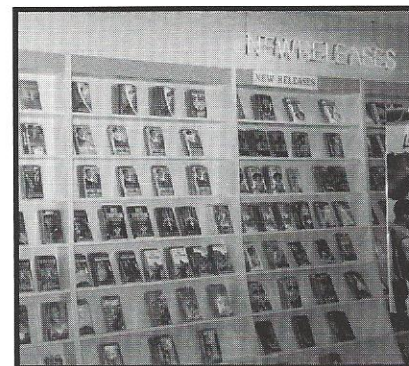

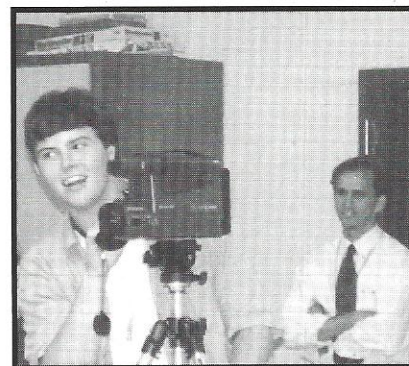

Different types of movies appealed to all teenagers. Horror, romance, comedy, and drama fit anyone's personality.

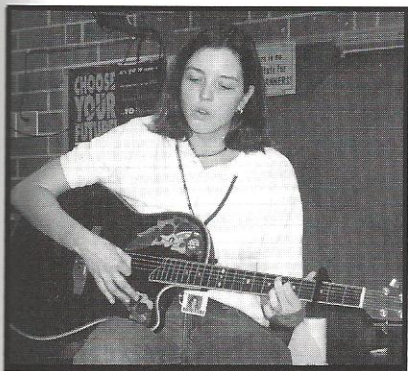

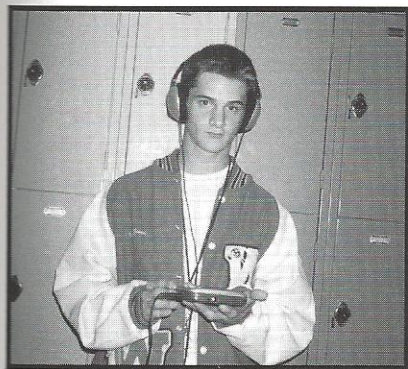

"I love comedy movies. I like to see this type of movie because I like to laugh while I watch them," said sophomore Andrea Richardson.

Movies helped lift up people's moods.

"When I watch movies and I'm in a bad mood, if the movie is good, then it kind of cheers me up," said sophomore Calen Brown.

Movies not only entertained they also inspired many.

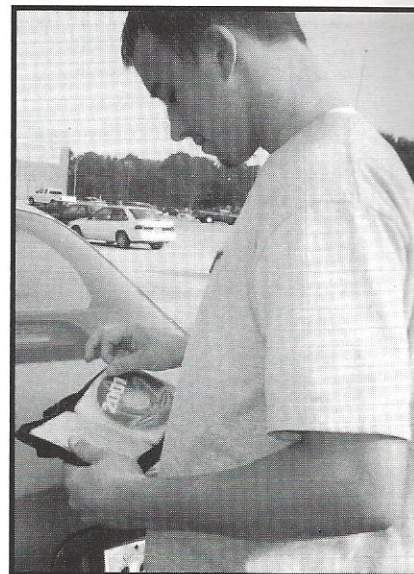

Music

Music, a form of art, an expression of someone's emotions. It gave teenagers a way to relate with what was going on in the world.

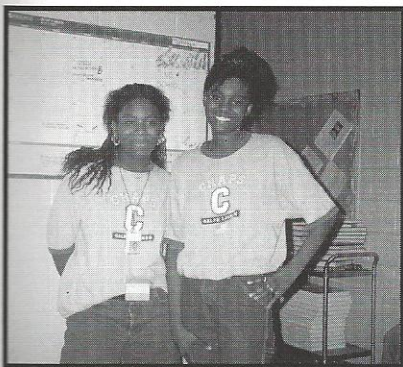

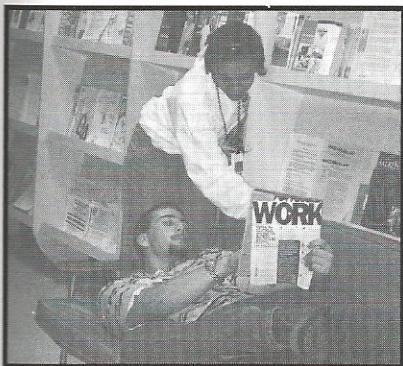

Music seemed to be everywhere. Teens listened to it at home, in their cars and watched it on television. Music was a large part of teenagers lives.

The many different types of music appealed to all teenagers. Whether they preferred alternative, country, heavy metal, oldies, r & b, or rap, some type of music affected teenagers moods. "When I am mad I listen to rap music because it helps calm me down because I realize that everyone has problems," said sophomore Rachel Hunt.

Music expressed emotions and related to teenagers. Music communicated thoughts and feelings without words.

Tunes to boom to! Deciding on a CD to listen to on the way home from school, freshman Chris Priester exits the parking lot with a good beat. Music was fun to listen to with friends while cruising through town, jammin' at parties, singing along with parents, or listening solo!

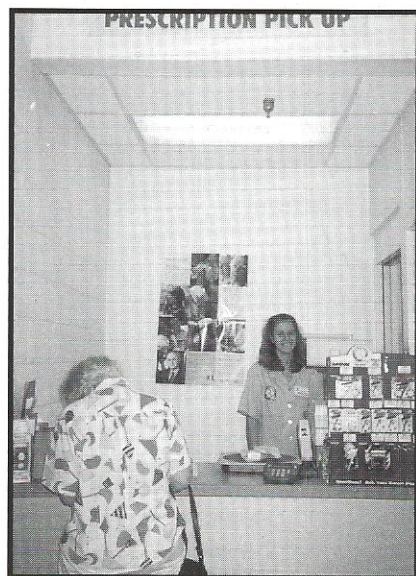

Money

Money seemed to really made the world go round for some. More and more students started working this year. Without it life seemed virtually impossible. Free? HUH? No one ever heard that word. Everything that looked or felt worth buying costed so much money. In order to have fun on the weekends there needed to be a substantial cash flow.

"I work at the K-mart pharmacy. I need my job because I have to make car payments, I need gas money, and I always need money on the weekends," said junior Kristin Thompson.

Jobs provided teenagers with their own money without having to beg their parents. Teenagers considered money to be their one way to show their grown need for independency.

-Lydia McCollum

Workin' hard or hardly workin'? At her part-time job at K-Mart Pharmacy, junior Kristin Thompson makes and saves money for extra things. She, like many other high school students, were responsible for making their car payments, paying for gas and insurance, and extra spending money.

Going to the Extreme

Regular sports are nothing compared to these...

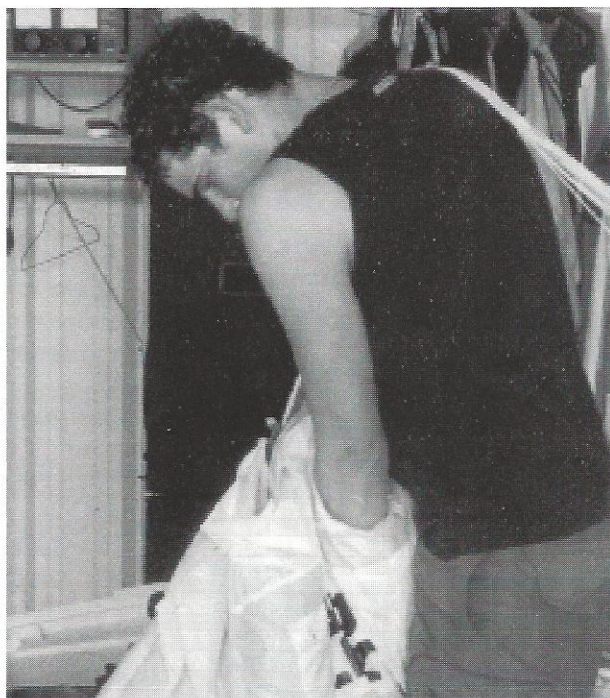

On your mark, get set, JUMP! Junior Wes West spent many hours practicing his favorite pastime, skydiving. Wes began skydiving at sixteen, and fell in love with it. The great feeling and rush that never bores kept Wes interested.

"(I have also) been interested in the unique people that are involved in this sport. (The) people are as everyday as you and me, but with different hobbies and a devotion to that hobby that is indescribable," said Wes.

Skydiving required extreme flexibility and balance. The adrenaline that flowed through Wes' body as he plummeted through the air gave a distinguished feeling.

"Viewers tend to think the sport of skydiving is very entertaining because of how different it is, and that is what people want to see when they watch sports- a change," said Wes.

Skydiving provided the thrill that many people searched for a whole lifetime, not knowing that the experience waited one jump and a parachute away.

Taking it to another level, teacher Roger Dixon spent many long weekends and endless summer days participating in various extreme sports. Along with surfing, Dixon sailed, mountain biked, deep sea fished, windsurfed, and snow skied.

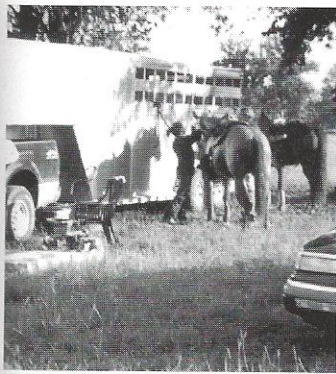

"What I enjoy most about these sports is the feeling of being insignificantly small. When you are out on the ocean and the waves are going off and the wind is howling, it gives you a sense of perspective," said Roger Dixon.

Excellent physical conditioning required frequent training. These sports allowed one to display their abilities to the fullest potential.

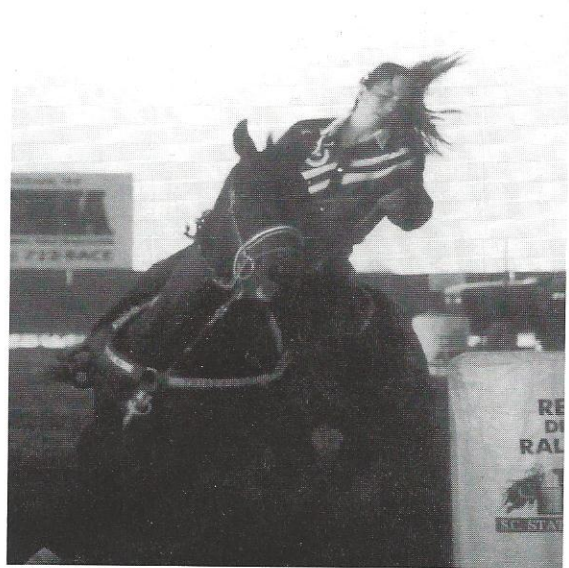

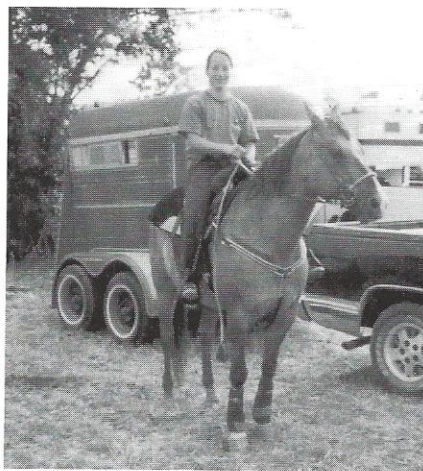

Competition provided a thrill for most sport participants, but Mr. Dixon liked it best when he sailed on the ocean alone or just with one or two buddies. "Competition ruins the spiritual aspect, and that is a huge part of it for me. These sports I do are just ways of getting close to the source of all things," Mr. Dixon said.

Sports: Windsurfing, snow-skiing, deep-sea fishing, and mountain biking.

Erin Driggers
Junior
Sport: Barrel racing

Ouch! Barrel racing caused many injuries, but Erin Driggers rode on.

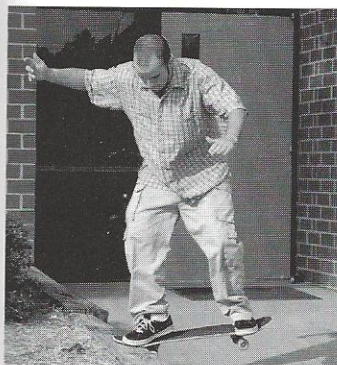

"The saddle horn once bruised one of my ribs. A horse stepped on my finger and broke it. A horse threw me into a pole and sprained my wrist. Two different horses fell on me one time, but I couldn't consider myself badly hurt," said Erin.

Erin began barrel racing at seven years old, but cared for horses her whole life. In order to be able to ride a horse well, a person needed to contain the strength to stop and turn the horse. Riding required coordination and excellent balance.

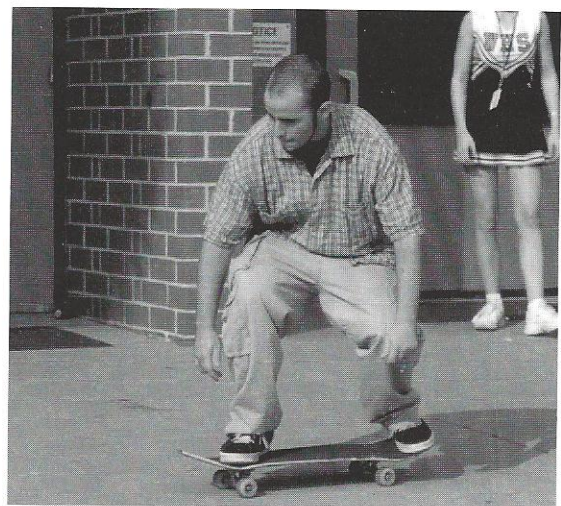

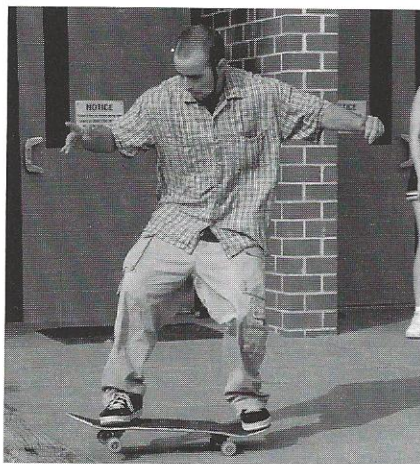

Erin qualified for the National Barrel Horse Association Youth World Finals. She placed third in the South Carolina second division.

"I love it, and I couldn't live without it- I've developed a need for it," said Erin.

Jacob Murdaugh

Sport: Skateboarding

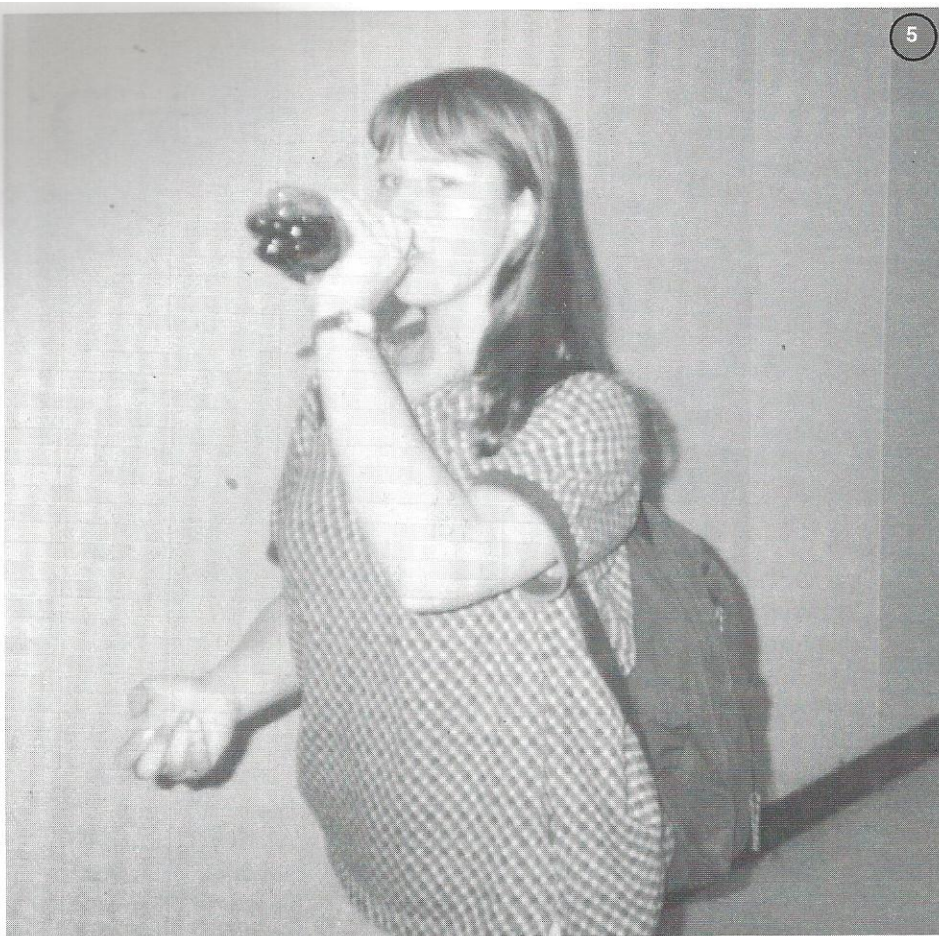

Crash! When skaters practiced on their boards, the sharp scrape of gravel could be heard as they planted their wheels back onto the cement after attempting a trick.

"I think people enjoy the risk that at any time you could fall and mess yourself up pretty badly. But the best part of the sport is the sense of accomplishment one gets when one lands a difficult trick for the first time," said Jacob Murdaugh.

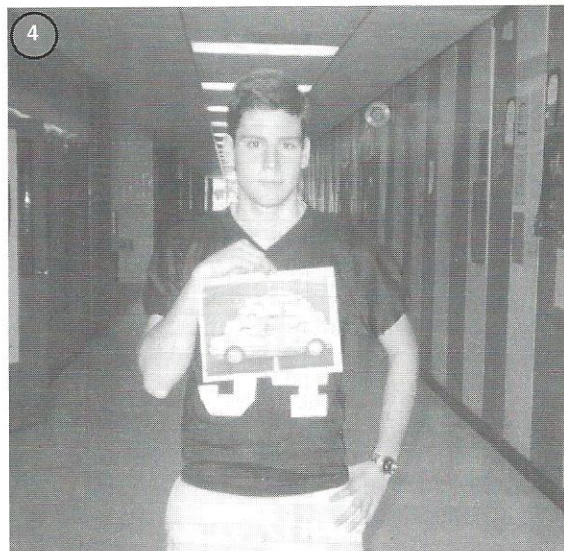

Although Jacob crashed many times, he never got seriously injured. The only injuries that he obtained are a few cuts and scratches, along with a little bit of road rash and a sprained ankle. Jacob started skating when he was fourteen, but he quit off and on throughout high school.

When he got in high school, he just "fell" in with the skater crowd, and it changed from just being a crowd, to being "a couple of great friends" who share the same hobby.

4 Va-room! Cars have always been a great pastime to indulge the afternoons in, but Freshman Taylor Smith made it an obsession. He collected magazines and pictures of cars like the one he's holding.

5 You've got the right one, Baby! Some students were obsessed with something as simple as drinks. Junior Angel Caraway drank pepsi everyday, and claimed she just couldn't live without it!

Top five ways to tell you are obsessed with someone

- 5. Every notebook you own has their name inside a bubbly heart on the cover.
- 4. Their boy/girl friend chews you out daily.
- 3. Dreaming about that someone.
- 2. Driving by their house in the middle of the night.
- 1. You can't stop thinking about them.

What do you thrive on?

Obsessions

Get away from me freak!!! What are you...obsessed?? Obsessions vary in all colors, shapes, and sizes. From football to cars, students thrived on many different items.

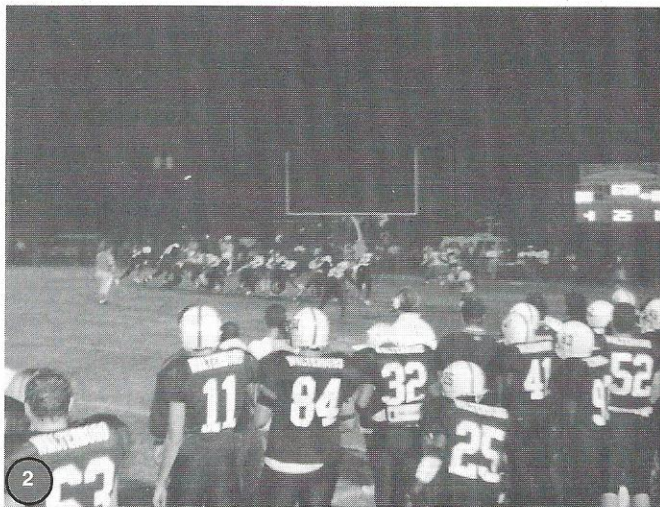

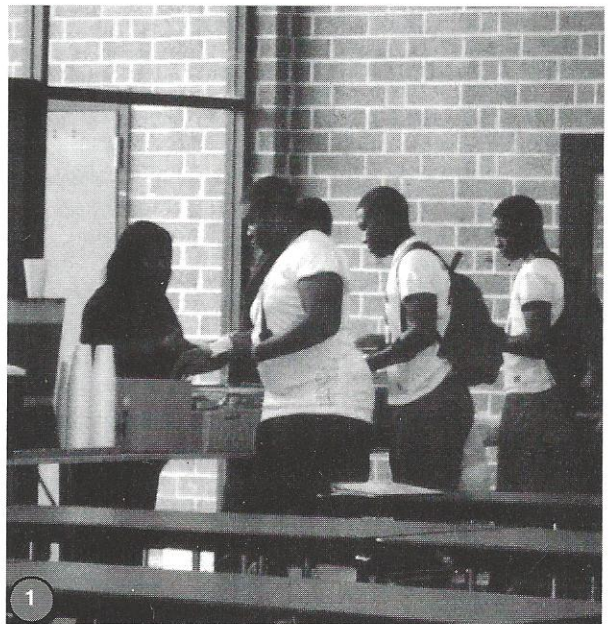

Varsity football player Keivy Rowses obsessed over the game. "It's awesome when you see all the fans, and you go to make a big play and hear them screaming. I've been playing football since I was little. This season I played for four weeks with a sprained ankle," said senior Keivy Rowses. The whole football team seemed to share this obsession.

Freshman Taylor Smith took a different approach on obsessions. "I like cars...everything about cars. They are very attractive." Taylor "handled" his obsession by subscribing to magazines. Taylor also said that an obsession "is something you turn to when you are bored."

Two-year band student Alicia Dowdy loved music. "I could name any song that one could sing." She handled her obsession by singing and dancing. "I love music because it tells a story about how a person is feeling.

Different people had different ideas on how to handle an obsession. Although some obsessions were unhealthy, for others, the obsessions only filled daily life.

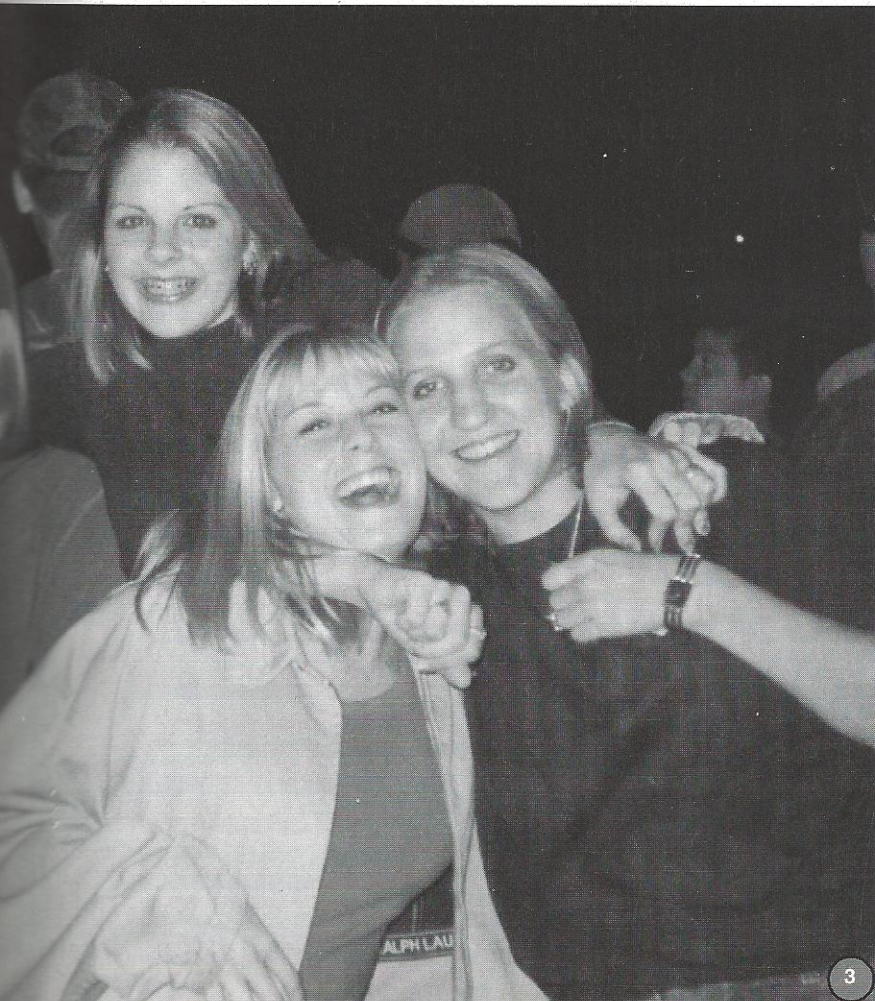

- Libbi Kinard

1 Football Fanatics! Many of senior Keivy Rowses' friends love to play football. Keivy called his love for football an obsession since he played for varsity for four weeks with a sprained ankle!

2 Boys will be boys! Almost every guy loves some sport. Many high school boys loved playing under the stadium lights every Friday night!

The Apple Doesn't Fall Far From The Tree... At her old home in Florida, junior Stephanie Regalado takes a picture with her parents before going to a Homecoming dance. "My parents are my role models because they always help me do what is best so that I can achieve all my goals throughout life," she said.

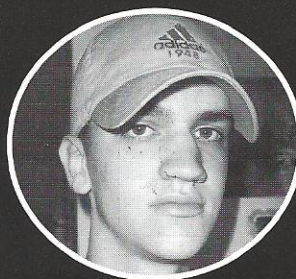

Family Ties. Sophomore Amanda Johns poses for a picture with her grandfather. "He has been my role model evr since I could say Papa. I don't know anyone half as intelligent has him," she said.

I Love My Daddy! Posing for a quick picture, Junior Heather Brown hugs her father, Steve Brown, while on a mission trip during the summer. "In my opinion, a role model is someone who stands up for what they believe in, even if it isn't cool," she said.

Who's Your Role Model?

"My role model is a friend of mine named Dawn Carter because she believes in being unique and accepting everything besides being like someone else."

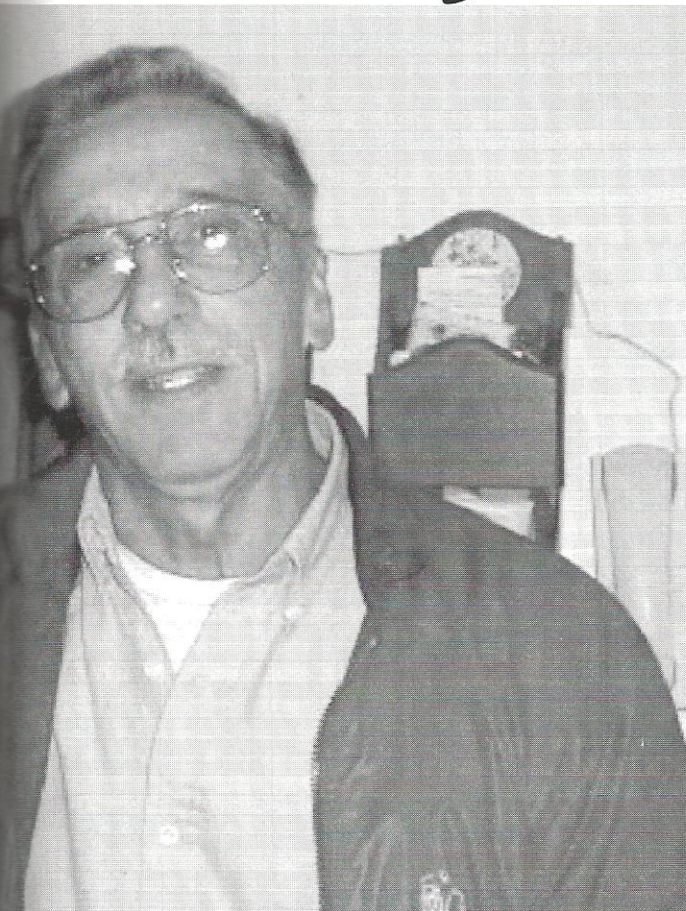

-Senior
Ben McMillian

"Haskell Fields is my role model becuase he inspired me never to give up, and he's his ownself and doesn't depend on others."

- Junior
Arnold Williams

Following the Model

"Did You Ever Know That You're My Hero?"

From supermodel to supermom, different types of role models could have been found. Most kids had people that they looked up to whether it was a super star or a family member.

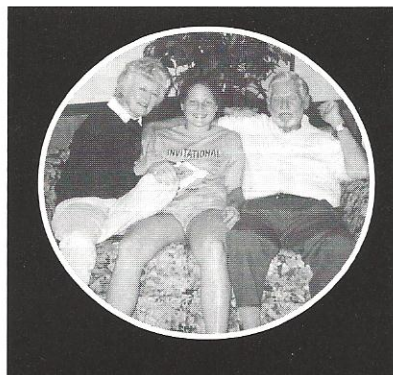

"A role model is someone you can look up to for support and that you can admire," said Sophomore Jenna Burkett.

Jenna has known her role model, her Aunt Ann, since she was a kid.

"My Aunt Ann is my role model because she is fun to be with and she loves children. We are somewhat alike," says Jenna.

Role models inspired the people that looked up to them. They also taught lessons without even knowing it.

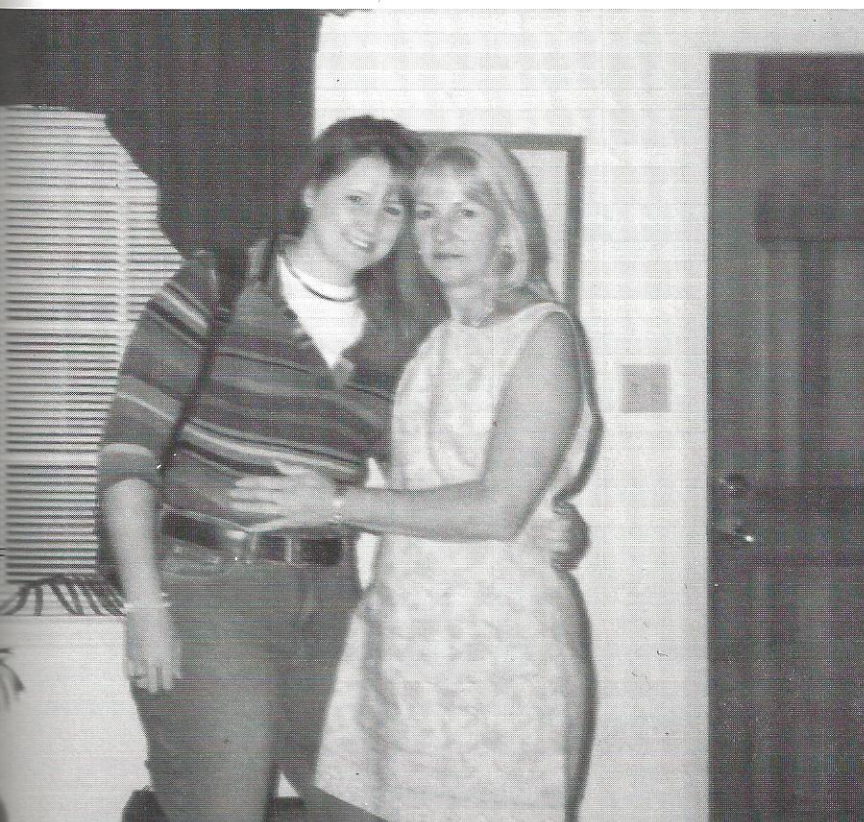

"My aunt has taught me not to worry about what other people say. She's different from other's her age.

She will do anything you want to do like go out on the boat or go touring, or just sit on the dock and watch the birds," she said.

Role models changed the lives of people because of their morals, beliefs, and opinions that made them different from others.

-Julie McMillan

Friends... Senior Tiffany Headen and her friend, sophomore Heather Craven take a picture of themselves. "Tiffini has always been there for me, and she has her life balanced out when it comes to school, family, friends, and religion," said Heather.

When I Grow Up.. Before the first day of school starts, Senior Lacy Pulis poses for a picture with her mother. "I look up to her because she has been through a lot and still has a positive outlook on her future," she said.

Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder

The Real Deal After Graduation

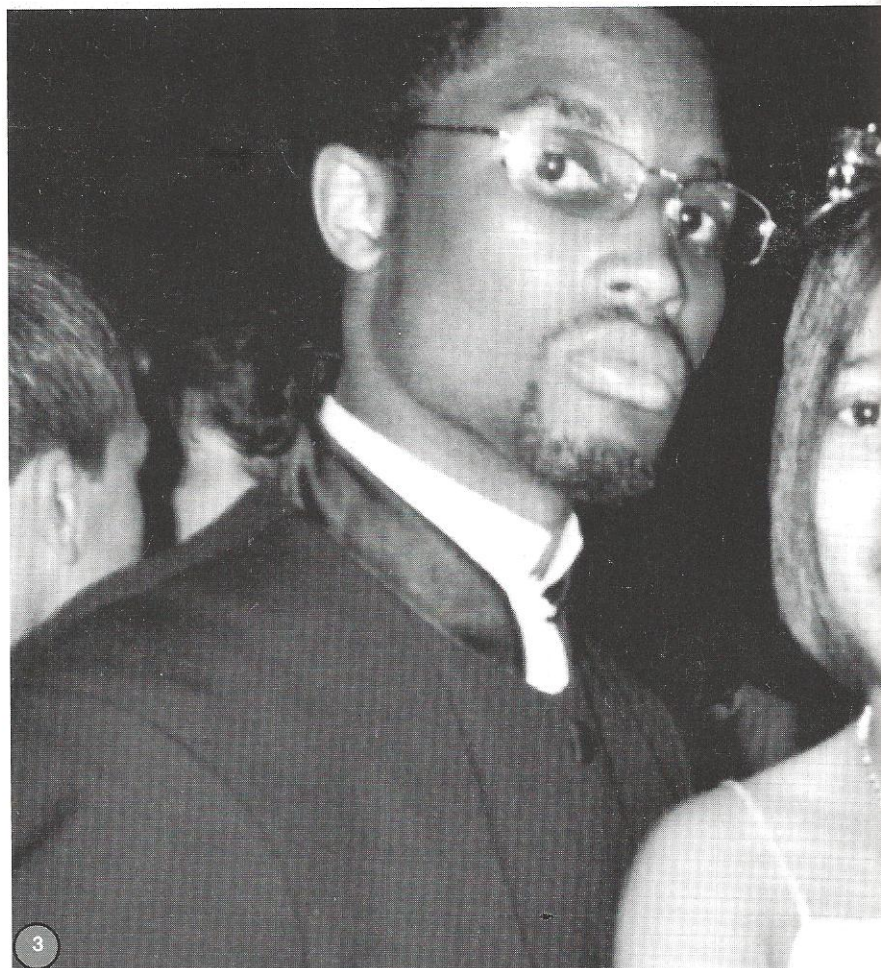

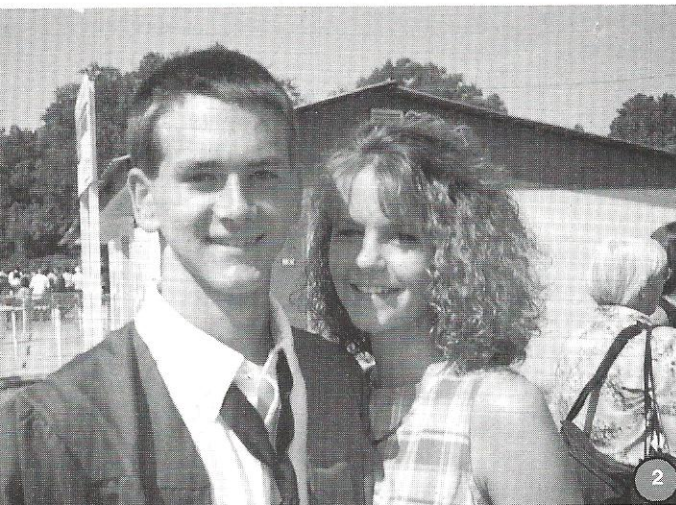

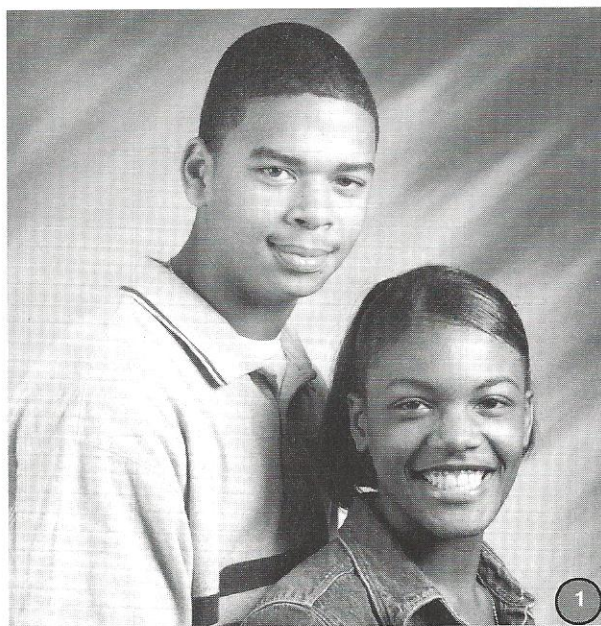

Parting is such sweet sorrow. Senior Andrea Robinson knew all too well about the pain that could occur when her boyfriend, Dwayne Frazier, graduated. While some worried about what would happen after someone in the relationship graduated, Andrea had no concerns. "I know that our relationship will last because we have that special bond," said Andrea.

Lindsay Ackerman, a sophomore, and her boyfriend Brian Logan had only one year together before Brian left for Francis Marion University. When Lindsay first realized that she and Brian would not see each other on a daily basis, it scared her. "I was so worried of finding out how it would be without him here because we were always together," Lindsay said.

Junior Tamara Spangler and her older sister Leah Ellen also shared a unique relationship. Both Tamara and her sister shared many common interests such as cheerleading and producing the yearbook. During the two years the two went to school together, their relationship grew stronger. "I started to realize that she wasn't just my sister, but my friend as well," said Tamara.

A huge part of growing up was making friends that would not always be kept, however, the memories that were made would last a life time.

-Courtenay Daniels

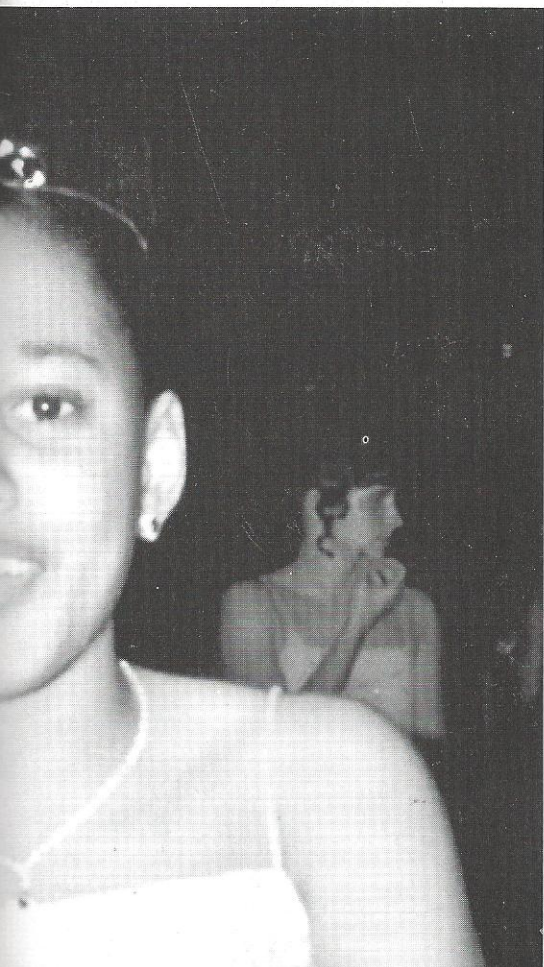

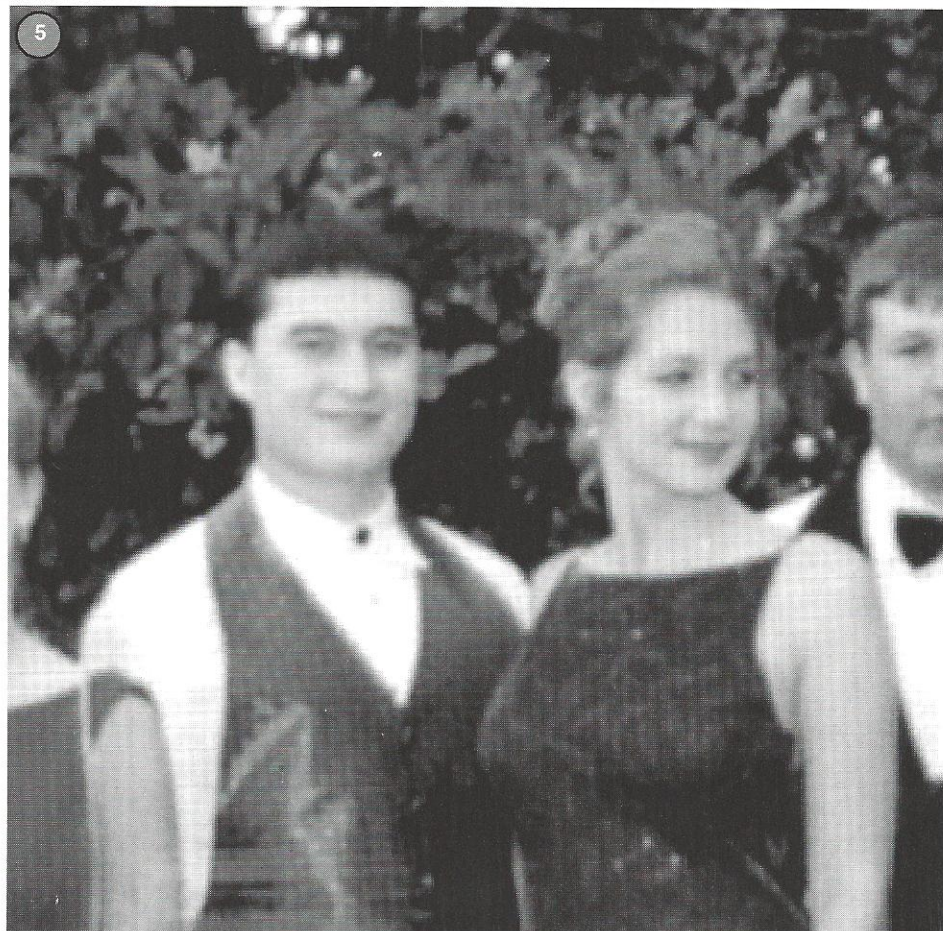

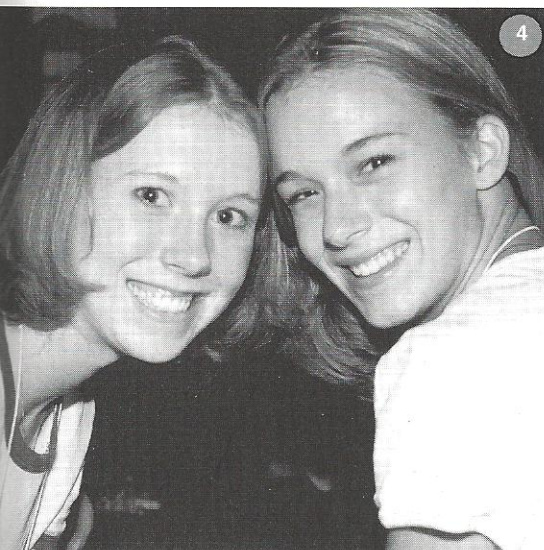

1 Bitter Sweet. What better way to remember the one you love than to share a precious moment. WHS graduate Kenneth Shider and Senior Latoya Bryant told everyone the joy of their relationship.

2 Memories... Graduation is the one thing everyone waits for. WHS grad, Brian Logan, and his girlfriend, sophomore Lindsay Ackerman, celebrated that happy day with bright smiles!

3 Always and Forever! Prom has always been the most precious night for many couples. WHS graduate Dwayne Frazier and senior Andrea Robinson take time to strike a pose at prom to remember their special night.

4 These are the memories. Junior Tamara Spangler and her sister, WHS grad, Leah Ellen Spangler, are happy to spend time together at church. Although they were very close, it was difficult to keep in touch a lot of times after Leah Ellen moved to college.

5 Ready to Rock! After a pre-prom dinner, WHS grad David Kauffeld and junior Fraysse Lyle humor their parents with a picture! They had an awesome weekend and summer together, but they really cherished the memories when he left for college in the fall.

Good Morning Students! Beginning everyday with a smiling face, Coach Strickland welcomes his United States History class. He always had a silly joke and witty comments!

Thinking through it! Completing her classwork, Junior Brenna Burkett finishes the final problem. As a new member of the National Honor Society, she was determined to keep her grades high.

Investing in the Future...

Hands on Training

"The Thunderbolt Career and Technology Center is an excellent learning experience for students, and prepares students for the transition from school to work," said senior Trey Murdaugh.

At the Thunderbolt Career and Technology Center, down the road from Walterboro High, many students gathered each day to learn more about possible career opportunities. "The classes are fun and inspiring, and it teaches me career skills," said sophomore Gamaiel Williams.

Some students seemed to have a better time at the Vocational School than in their regular classes at the high school. "My favorite thing about the Vocational School is that the teachers are very nice. When you talk to them, they treat you as adults and not as children," said sophomore Shanese Middleton.

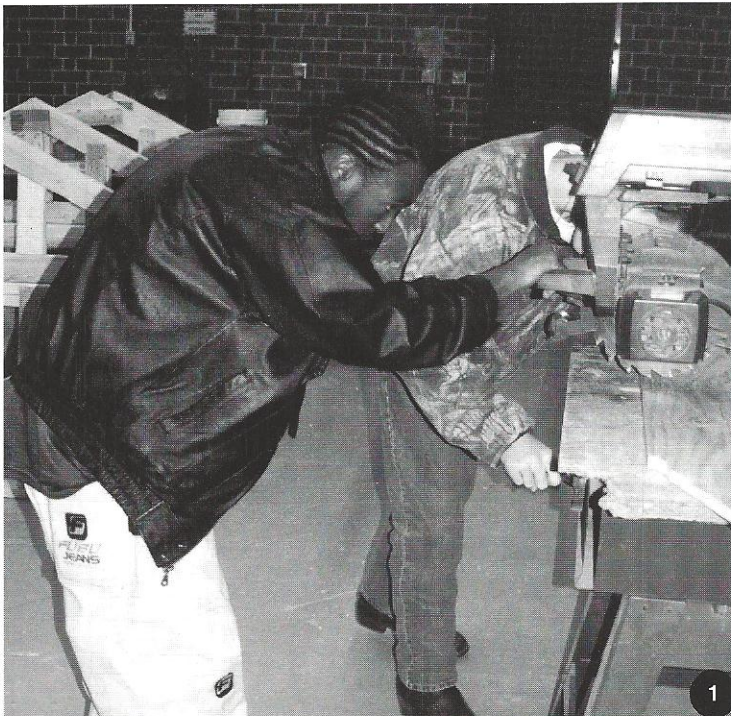

All of the classes at the Voc offered hands-on training, including health occupations, masonry, and culinary arts. "In health occupations, we talked about a lot of medical terms used everyday," said sophomore Heath Youmans.

Each student considered pursuing a career based on the class they were taking. The Thunderbolt Career and Technology Center allowed students to get a feel for the career in which they were wanting to pursue.

1. Careful Fingers! While working on a project for Mr. Wrighten's industrial technology class, sophomore Desmond James starts cutting boards for a construction project the entire class is busy working on. Desmond always put one hundred percent into his work. He may one day be building your house!

2. Culinary Creativity. Rolling it up, freshmen Daniel Deal and Dwana Bostic prepare to make dinner rolls. They used all sorts of utensils for shaping their rolls and cookies. Culinary Arts was beneficial to everyone who took it. The skills learned in the class could be used in many future professions for the students. Girls, remember that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach!

3. Don't Slip! In Mr. Wrighten's class, sophomore Franklin Price cuts a board for a project that has been assigned. Earlier in the year, he helped construct a doghouse for Mr. Wrighten. Franklin enrolled in the machine tool class hoping to maybe find a class that interested him.

4. Creating Electricity. As senior Ben McMillian shows a freshman focus class how electricity works, he plays the role of a temporary teacher. Ben knew a lot about electricity and helped out with the inexperienced in class. Outside of class Ben spent his spare time practicing in his band named XO-Dust.

"We do really cool projects everyday. I have had a lot of fun at the voc."
-Brandon Singleton

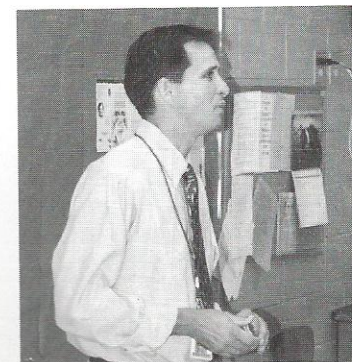

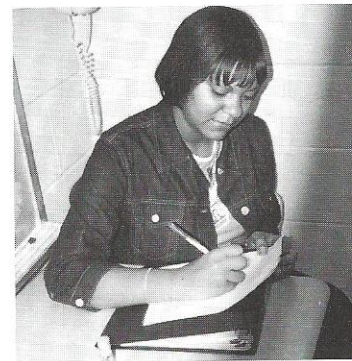

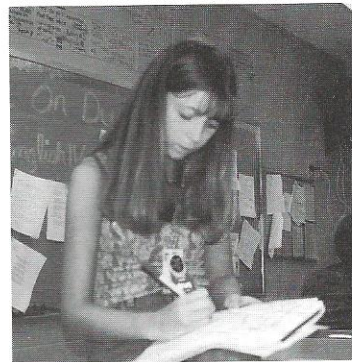

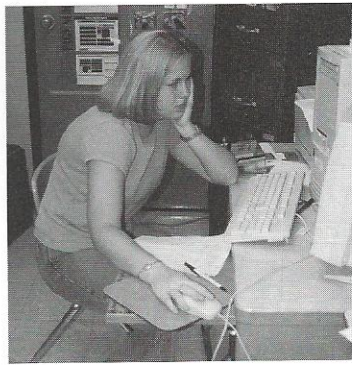

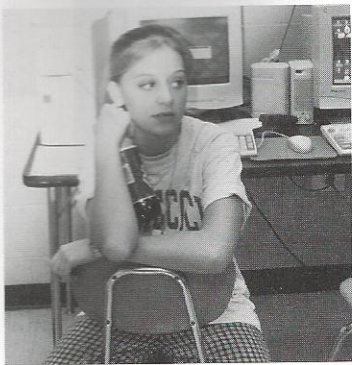

"The vocational center is awesome! The teachers are nice and extremely layed-back."

-Lydia McCollum

"I have taken a lot of classes at the voc like machine tool, welding, auto mechanics, and tech. edu."

Overworked & Underpaid

Recording the memories for all to see

All play and no work. The 2000-2001 journalism staff had a heavy work load but also found time to joke around. Everyone worked together to try to get the job done so they would not miss a deadline. Tempers kept to a low, even though everyone remained stressed to the max. "If you can not handle pressure you need to stay out of this class, but we are always looking for people who are willing to work hard and give 100%," said sophomore Celeste Simmons.

Journalism prepared the students for working in the real world. Along with this class came all the responsibilities of a real job. This class teaches me to cope with deadlines, stress, and promptness," said junior Courtenay Daniels.

Some journalism students attended the Carolina Journalism Institute during the summer at the University of South Carolina, an educational experience for the students who attended. The camp taught the importance of high school yearbooks and newspapers. "I did not enjoy being in class all day at journalism camp, but in the end, everything I learned made it worth going," said junior Shantel Middleton.

Journalism students worked all year long to bring the students at WHS the best yearbook and newspapers ever.

"I appreciate when I look in our yearbook and it shows how hard we worked," said junior Morgan McDaniel.

A lot of hard work and determination went into these literary works, but the journalism staff prided themselves in setting the memories that will last a life time.

-Angela Reeves

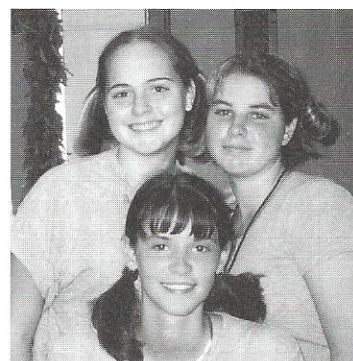

Hunting for the right ones! Sophomore Rachel Hunt organizes Josten Yearbook order forms. Rachel proved to be quite the organizer. She used her skills to advance in the class.

Workin' up a sweat! Sophomore Julie McMillian cuts squares of starry, shiny background paper to use for mugshots. After working on the project for two days, the staff decided not to use the background. That is the way it goes in an ever changing class!

For 100, what is copy? Editor-in-Chief, senior Gini Girardeau, plays a game of Journalism Jeopardy with first year journalism students. All editors were the "teachers" during the first week of school!

Top 5 Phrases heard in Journalism

5. Do they not think I have enough to do?
4. Didn't you see the reserve sign on the computer?
3. Why hasn't anyone sold ads?
2. Everybody sit down we need to have a meeting!

"I like journalism because you practice social skills and develop new ways of writing. These skills help contribute to my future in being a psychologist."
-sophomore Alexis

"Journalism teaches real world things that can't be taught in other classes. It teaches lessons such as responsibility, teamwork, stress management, and writing skills that can't be taught in any english class."

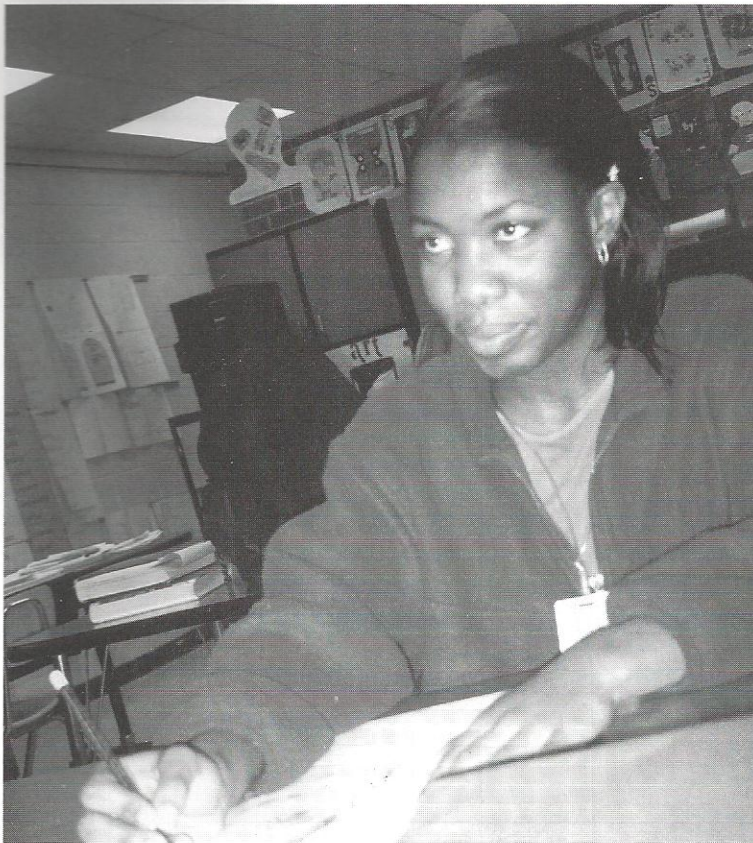

"This class has taught a lot about being responsible. I suppose I've picked up some leadership skills, because the first year students ask me for help. Luckily, I've gotten a lot more patient with people."
-senior Jacob Murdaugh

"I like the teachers in journalism class. They are easy to talk to about anything and they are always willing to help you with your problems."
-sophomore Ericka Kizer

Eyes Wide Open... Studying her sketching subject, freshman Tommie Chisolm works hard at absorbing every detail of the figure she is drawing. Sketching people and objects was a skill that was mastered in art.

Drawing Dreams

Art Students Showing Their Creative Side

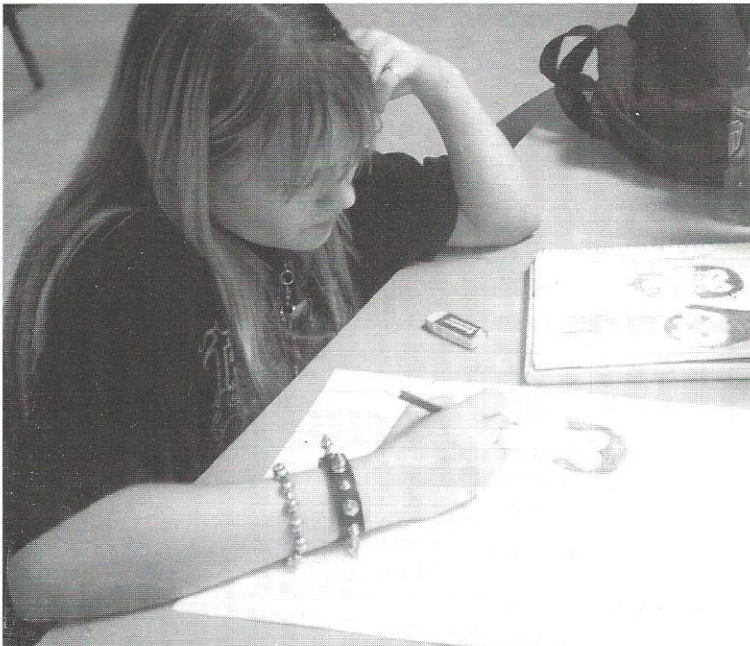

The second period bell rings, class ends, and a student meanders their way down a crowded hallway to one of the two huge rooms on the second floor. Students looked forward to going to these rooms. "Most are students are so advances and interested that they are working before the bell rings," said art teacher, Mrs. Marilyn Zeilke.

Art students made difficult decisions about challenging projects. "Art is not an easy one hundred. The most important thing about the class is being able to let your creative side show," said sophomore Mary Caroline Wilkinson.

Art played the role as a stress reliever. It gave students a chance to change their real problems into works or art, leaving the norm and entering a world of creativity. "I love art because I can take my problems and draw my emotions," said sophomore Randon Davis.

The students stayed very busy while taking the class. They worked on self-portraits, perspective drawings, pointillism, and other various projects. The students drew murals to add a little more life to the halls. Their pride showed throughout the halls of the school.

-Lydia McCollum

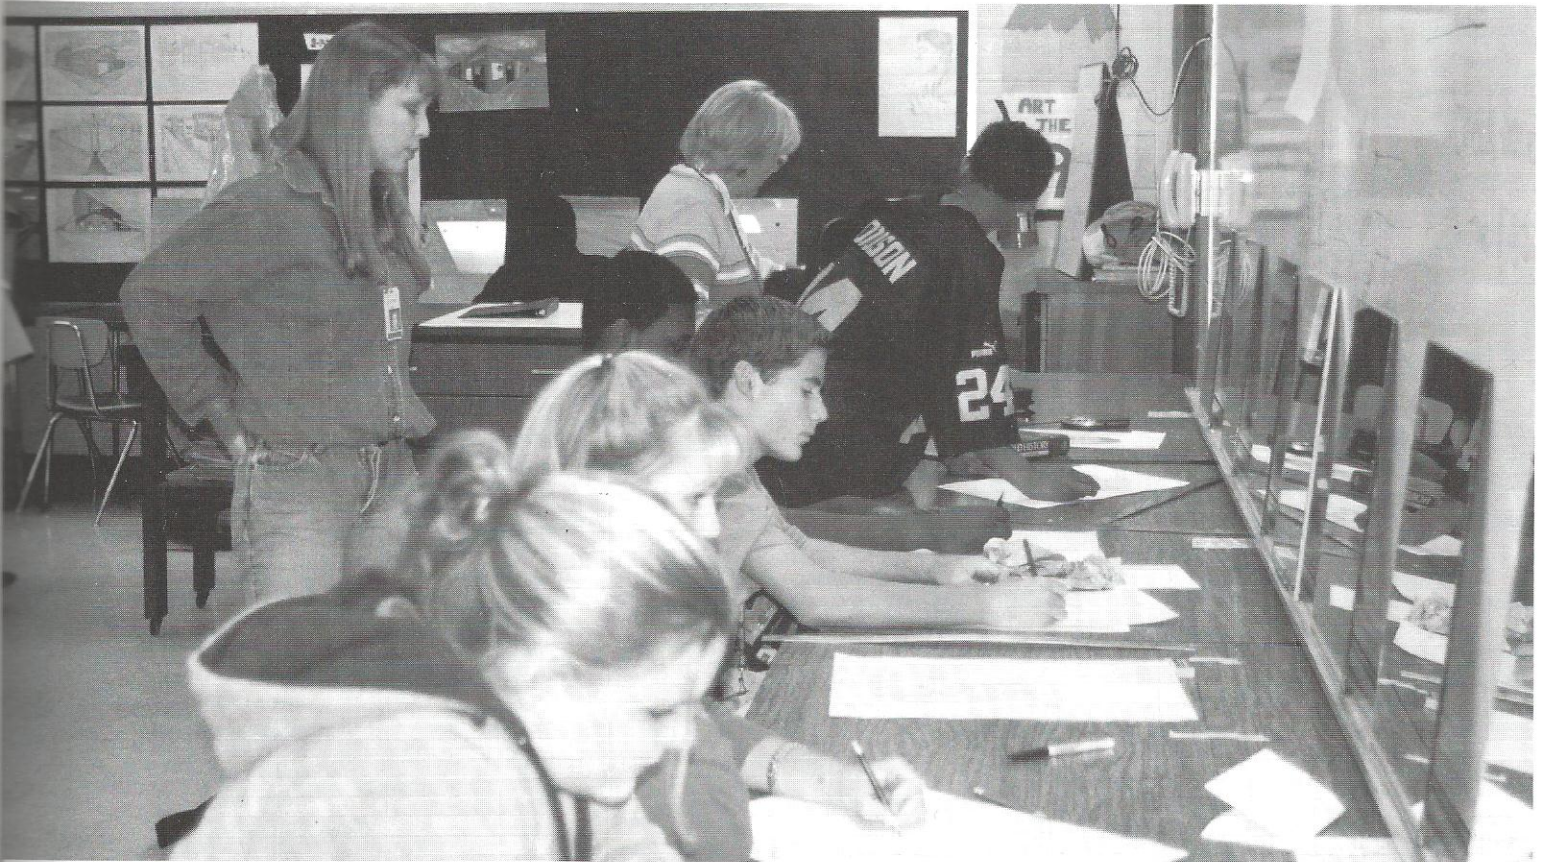

Trick or Treat. Sophomore Sabrina Clem works hard at preparing a drawing of a vampire and a jack-o-lantern. Halloween proved to be a big inspiration for many art students.

Steady Hands... While sketching in art class, senior Regina Gant works hard at drawing steady and straight. Drawing straight lines proved to be a challenge for many art students.

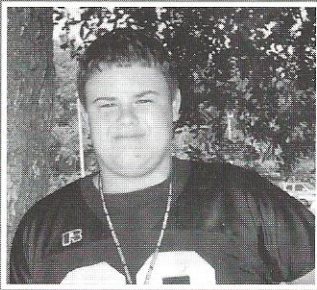

Lined up to draw lines. Senior Lacy Litchfield checks the work of first and second year art students. The art students were using mirrors to help them draw. Many different techniques were used to draw in art.

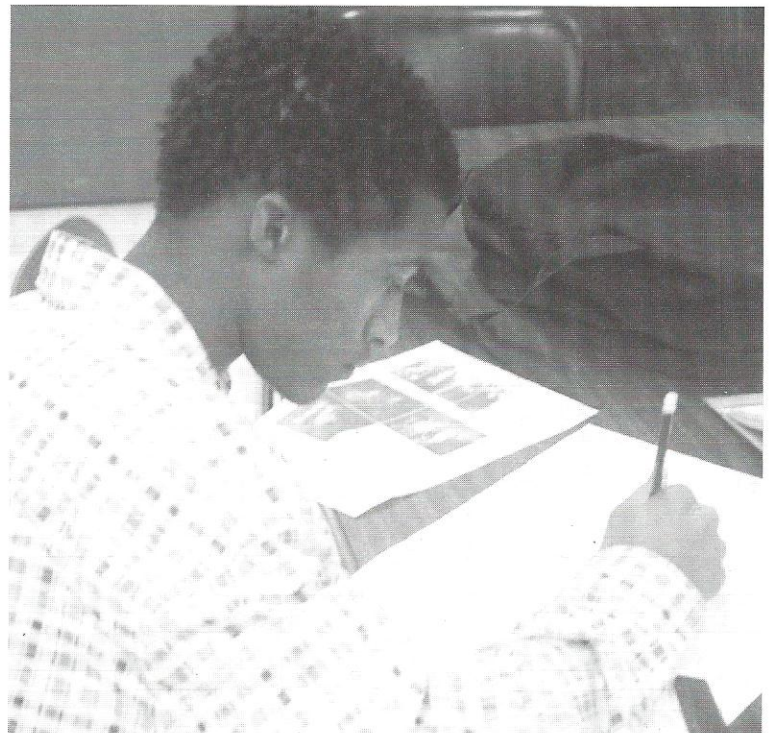

What makes art worth taking?

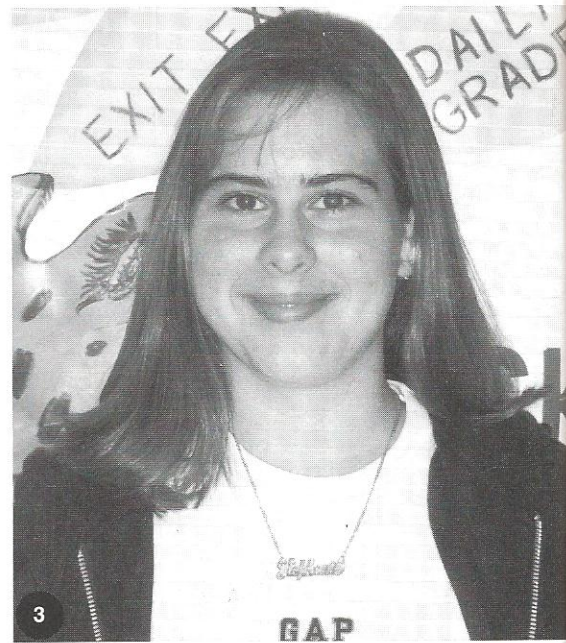

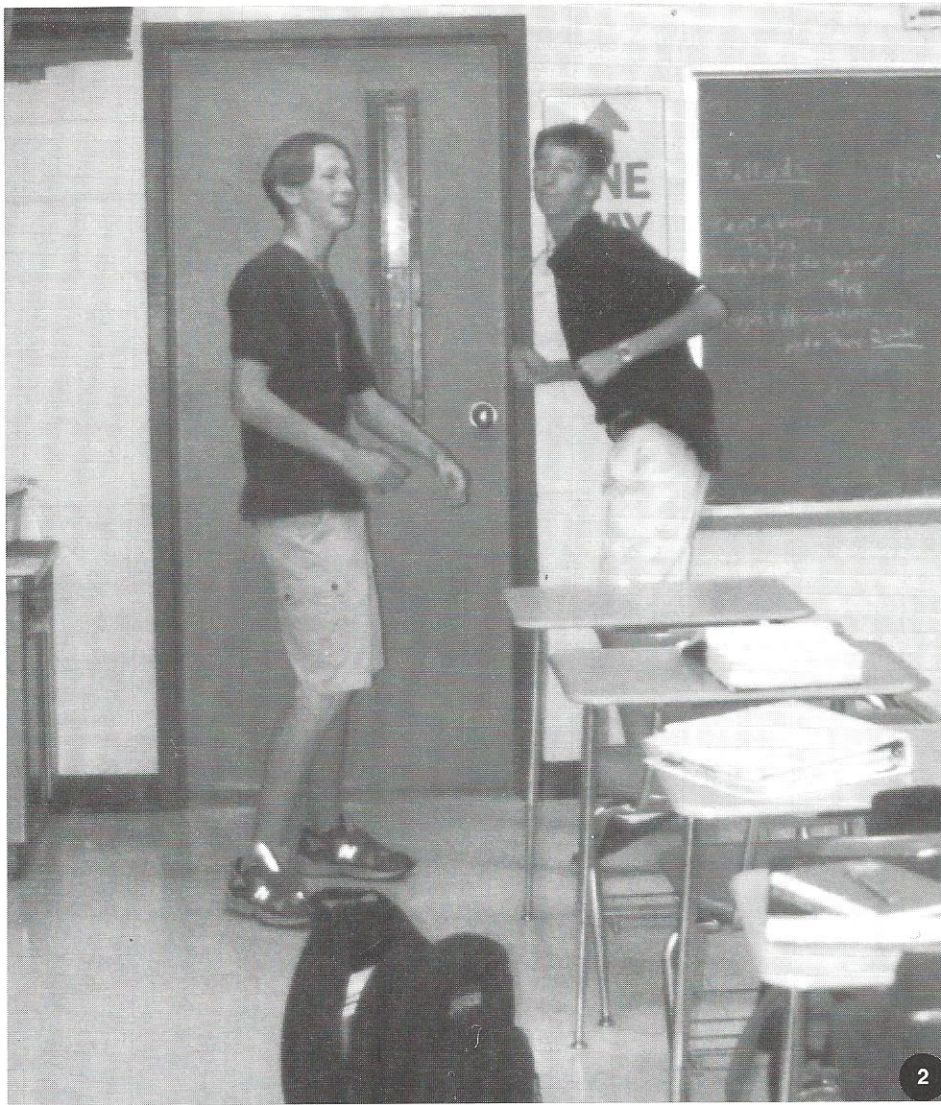

"Art is worth taking because you are able to learn new ways to look at things and then learning easy ways to draw them. I don't think that art requires skill at all. You just have to be able to look at things creatively."

- junior Lance Anderson

Whistle while you work... Sophomore Stefon Brown completes his drawing in Art class. Most art students found art to be an enjoyable class, which was a welcomed break from academic classes.

Which One Goes Where?

1. Sitting Under the Shade Tree. Relaxing and learning, Junior Brent Coker studies for an AP History test. He was an excellent student and very dedicated!

2. Silly students! Acting a little wacky, juniors Will Smoak and Downs Hamilton add some excitement during class. They were very smart, but mostly silly!

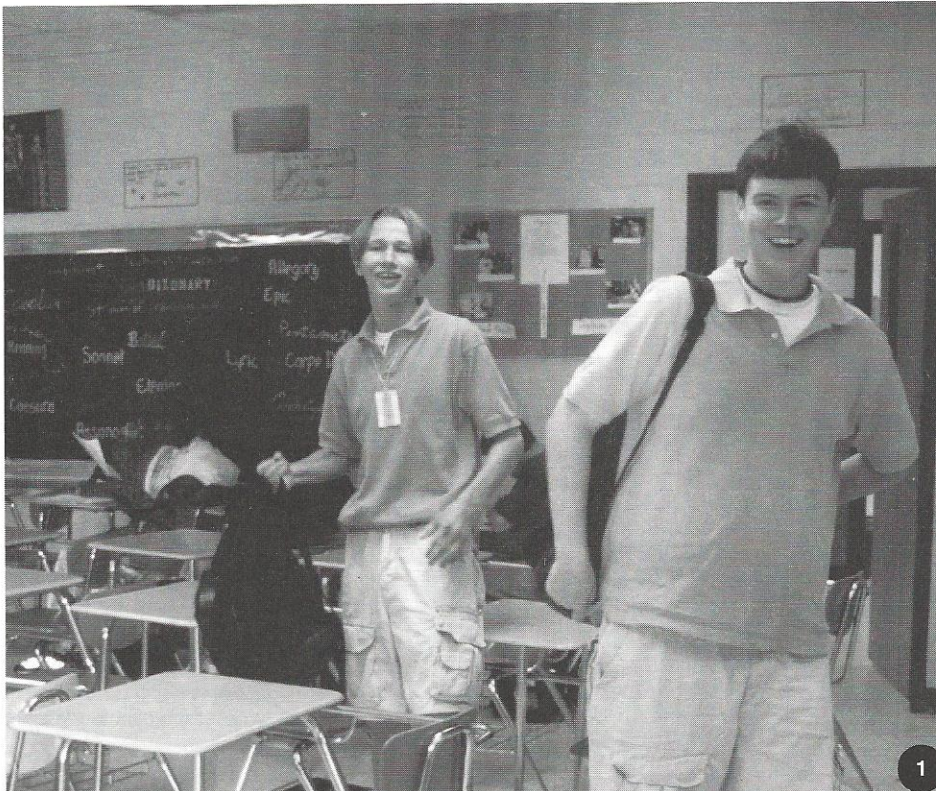

3. Focused on the Future! Junior Stephanie Regalado is proud to be in Advanced Placement classes to better her education. She also participated in Natoinal Honor Society.

4. Advancing the world! Preparing her students for an AP Calculus test, Mrs. Goff works through the problem. She was a great teacher with a wonderful sense of humor.

5. What did you say? Looking back to help one of his students, Mr. Smith teaches his U.S. History class. Most students enjoyed the challenge of his class!

6. Standing Alone. Advanced Placement Biology teacher Mrs. Finney-El studies an experiment alone. Although she was qualified and ready to teach, not enough sudents signed up to keep the class open!

7. Smart Students! While expressing their similar fashion tastes on twin day, juniors Will Smoak and Ryan Berry leave class to study hard. The two were really good friends and great study partners for Mr. Smith's advanced placement U.S. History class.

Nerd! Geek! Brain! Many students were afraid to take on the highly demanding requirements of advanced placement classes. These classes required hard work and extra attention study-wise. Junior Stephanie Regaldo, a new student, enrolled in Coach Smith's advanced placement history class. "Sure Advanced Placement classes are strenuous, but they're cool. You just have to work extra hard because in the end it all pays off big. All you have to do is try your best," said Stephanie.

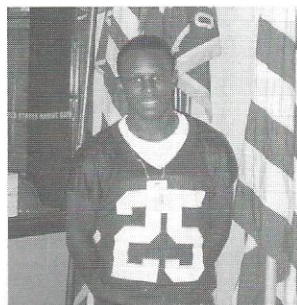

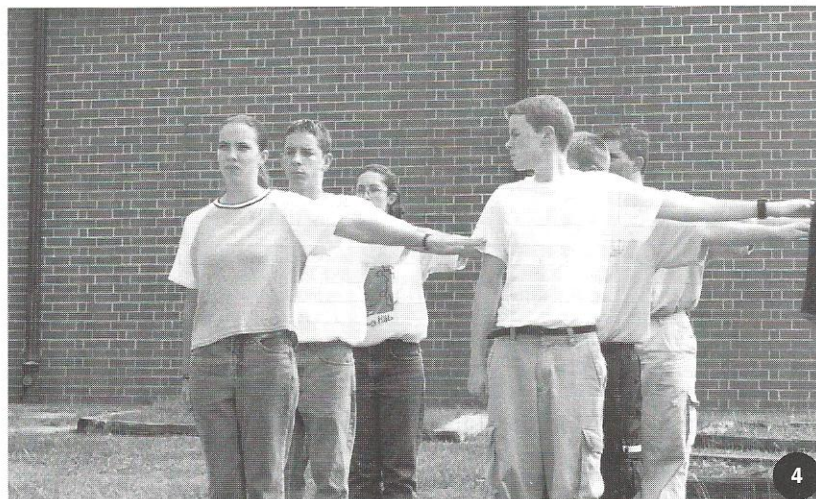

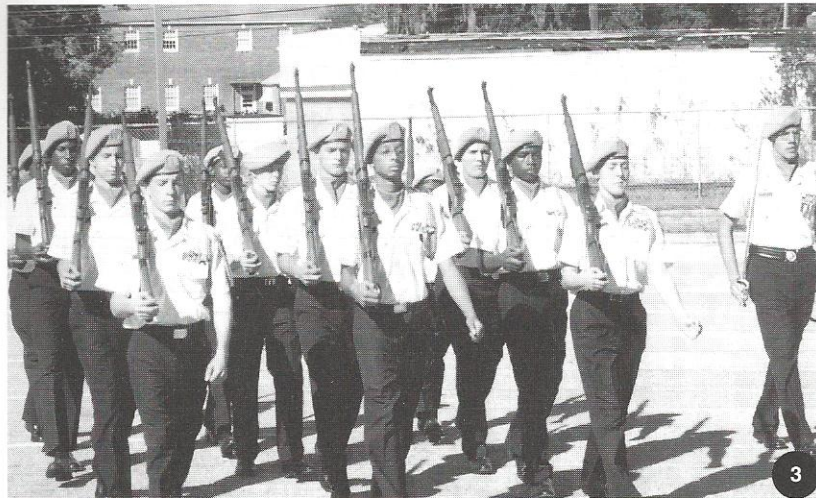

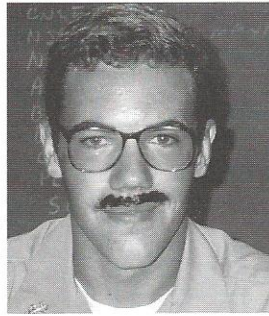

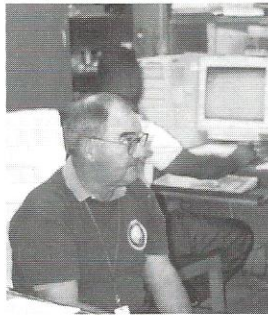

Stephanie advised underclassmen to take the course if they qualified because it helped her to prepare for college life following her graduation. "Many students are ready for college life because they have the discipline and time management skills needed to be successful. I try to create an environment where the students feel free to express themselves without fear of being wrong. Sometimes they feel a little too free, but that's cool," said calculus teacher Sandra Goff.

Mrs. Goff, along with four other teachers at Walterboro High: Roger Dixon, Janice Blocker, George Smith, and Arlene Finney-El, shared tasks and established a firm foundation on which advanced minds continued to learn and to grow.

The students ventured forth into a new form of education and were sure to be guaranteed a brighter tomorrow.

"In my opinion there is no bad reason to join NJROTC. You learn so many life related things that there is no bad reason!"
-freshman Johnathon Craven

3.. Forward March! In full uniform, the cadets practiced after school for the routine to begin the football game. They also were responsible for escorting the Homecoming candidates this year. The cadets raised the American and Naval flags before the Walterboro home game crowd at the beginning of every game.

4. All eyes on me! Paying full attention to their commander, NJROTC students learn new skills. Commander Armetrout was well-respected by all students! Cadets were even asked to knock and wait to be addressed before entering his office. Even future leaders of America have to have someone to follow. Where else would they learn to lead?

Step Up Cadets

Left...Left...Left,Right, Left. The sounds of NJROTC cadets rang through the air and spread over the student parking lot almost every afternoon. Students diligently marched across the cement practice field in preparation for drill meets.

"A good reason to join the NJROTC is that it develops informed and responsible citizens, and it also teaches self-discipline," said senior Melody Roberts. The cadets agreed that self-discipline played a major role in being a NJROTC participant.

Many dedicated students played a part in drill meets. "Drill meets are competitions where schools come together to compete. There are armed drill teams, unarmed drill teams, rifle teams, academic teams, and color guards," said freshman Johnathan Craven.

"Pride, Honor, and Respect" were the words printed on the NJROTC walls, and the cadets were taught just that. "This year I have learned the key things to becoming a good leader," said sophomore Eric Jordan. Leadership does last a life time, and the cadets of today will someday be the leaders that some look up to.

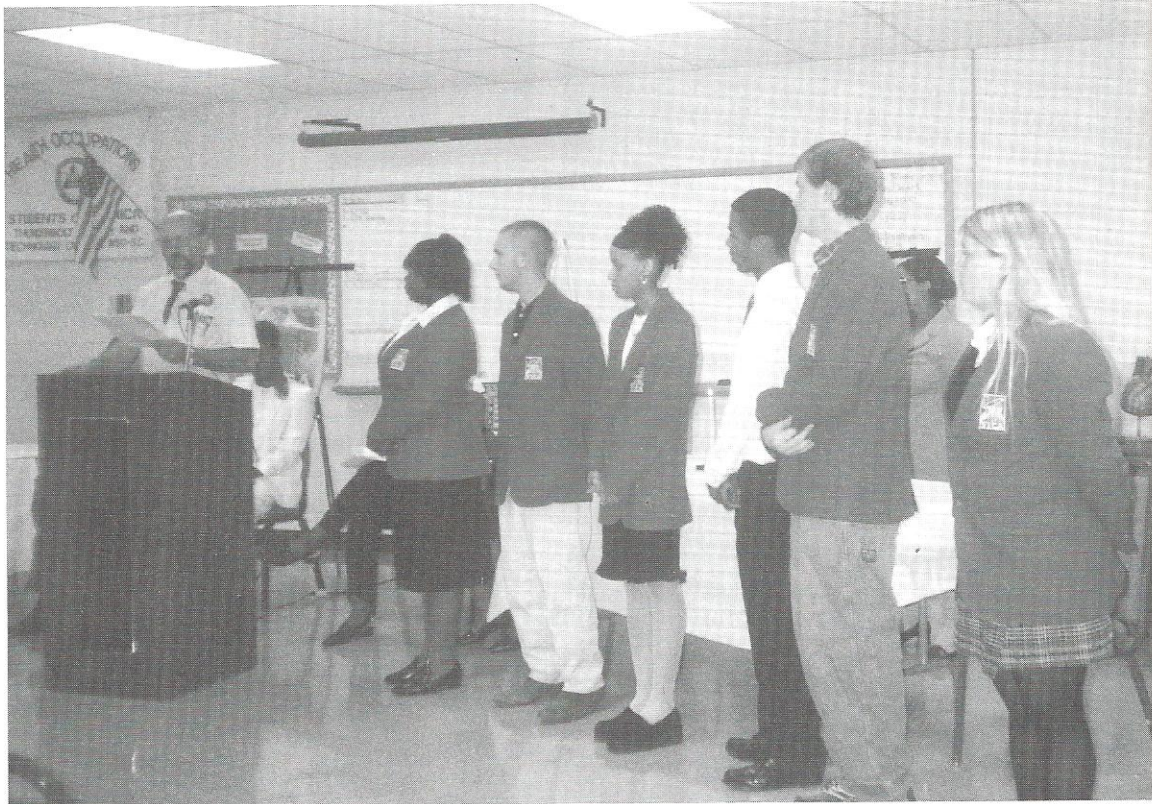

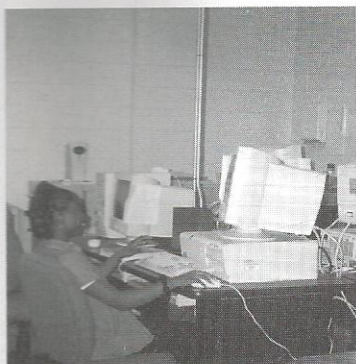

-Libbi Anne Kinard

1. Armed and Dangerous! Marching and following commands, NJROTC students follow directions completely. They were really skilled with the firearms. Do not worry, they were NOT loaded! During the year they participated in drill meets at North Charleston and many other schools. Drill meets and other activities were held at Walterboro High for schools across the lowcountry.

2. Attention! After school, the dedicated cadets practice for improvement. Almost everyday after school, the students could be found practicing, and they also dressed in full uniform some days at school. They were even graded on how well kept their uniforms were. Cleanliness is next to godliness. Shoes must have been shined and clothes must have been pressed in order to impress others and to keep your grade up!

Students Preparing for the Outside World

Taking the Future by the Hand

Want to be a millionaire? Computer jobs provided well paying jobs. Students looking for a job in the computer world could be offered a great experience with Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA). The class taught challenging computer skills and helped prepare teenagers for jobs in the real world.

"Advice that I would give to other students is to take part in the fun and preparation for the future," said junior Cathleen Goodwin.

Besides having fun and working with computers, FBLA members also had community service projects. The March of Dimes and Letters to Santa, two of their major projects showed kindness of the organization. The Letters to Santa went to needy children in every elementary school in the county.

"We all individually write the Letters to Santa. It's not easy and it's really time consuming," said senior Marietta Hefner.

The class had fun and exciting opportunities. FBLA participated in competitions and got chances to learn new computer skills and met new people. "I recommend that students take a part in FBLA and have some fun!" said junior Alicia Ford.

Future Business Leaders of America helped the members prepare for a better tomorrow.

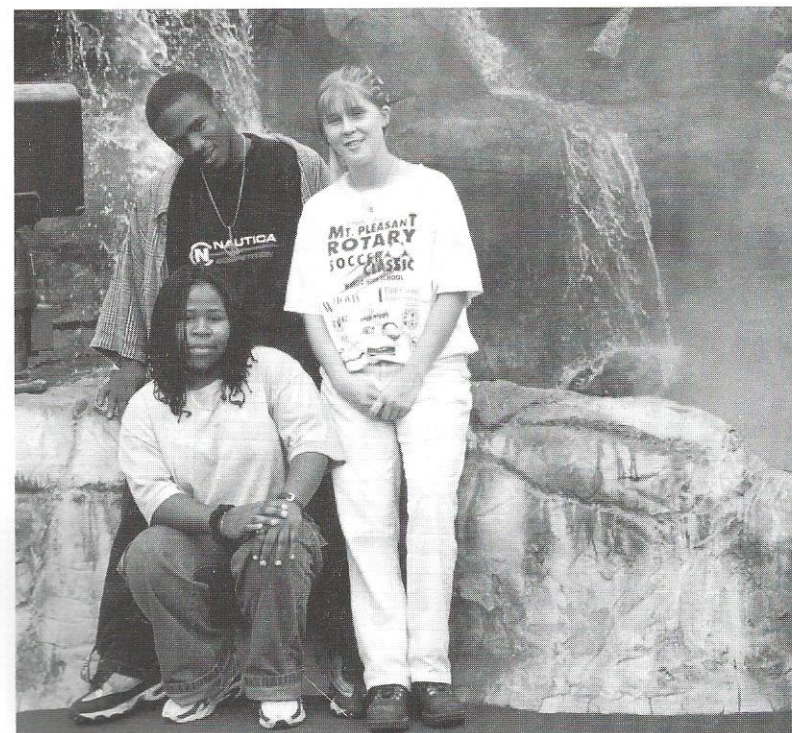

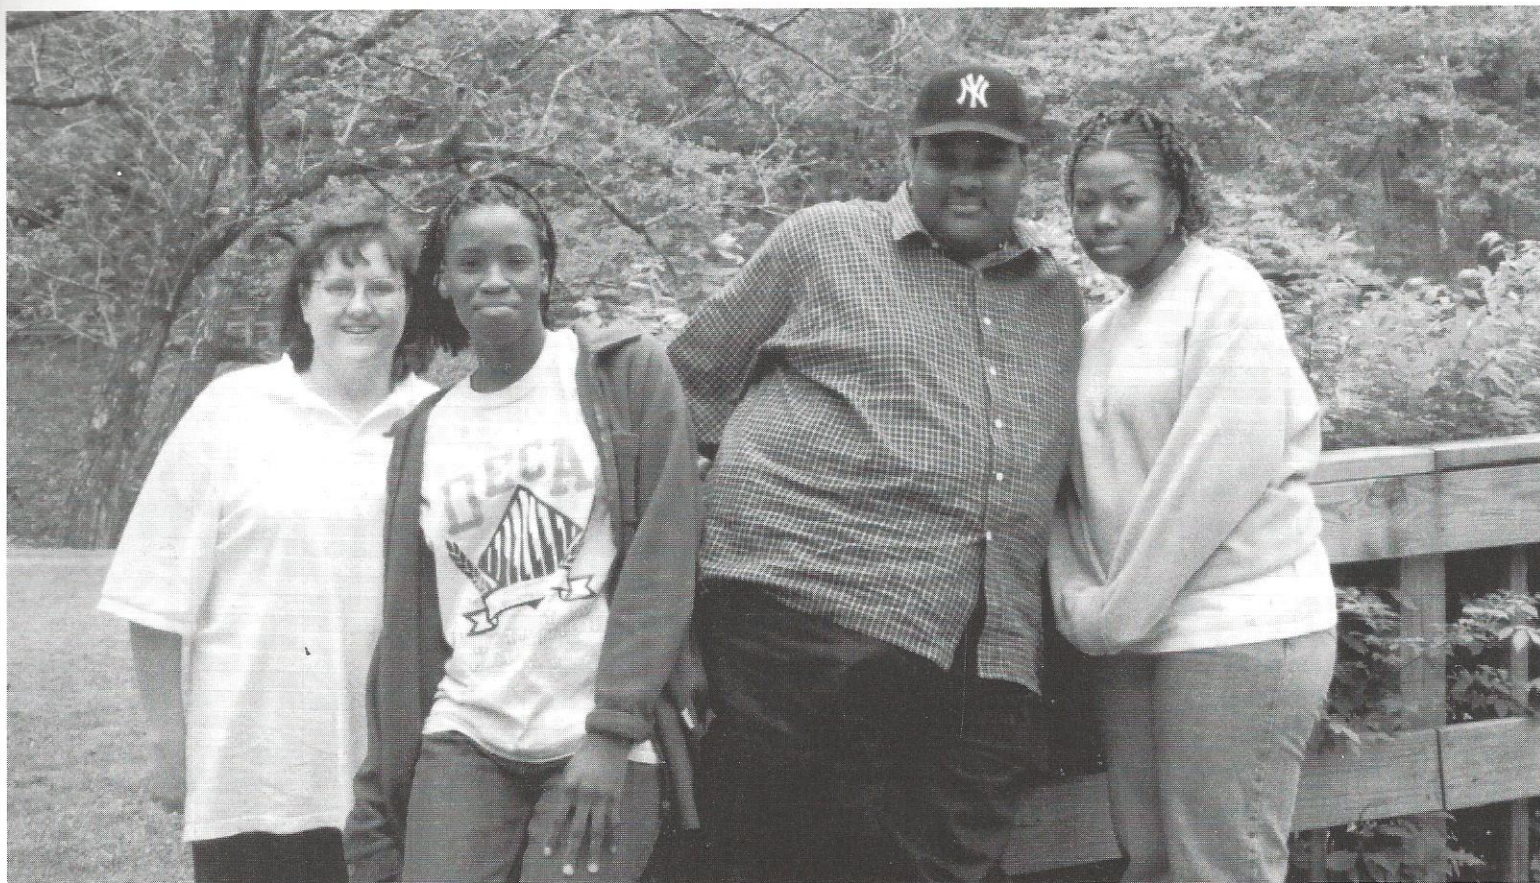

-Lydia MaCollum

Just Hangin' around! Having a little fun, FBLA president senior Dustin Bursteiner and a guest at the induction ceremony take a quick picture before the ceremony began. He found FBLA to be a fun experience.

Party time! FBLA members discuss plans for the organization while eating cake and socializing. Food and drinks were provided during every meeting.

Walking through the woods! On the way to Louisville, KY for the National DECA Leadership Conference, DECA members stop in Cherokee, North Carolina. The group needed a nature stop and some beautiful scenery besides the interstate!

Just Havin' Fun! While on a DECA trip, seniors William Gibbs, Jessica Moore, and Robin Aiken play mini-golf in Myrtle Beach. Although DECA was a school organization, they always had a lot of fun!

What do you enjoy about DECA?

"DECA is like a game of personal choices. It gives you an idea of what the world is going through buisness-wise and introduces technology.

-sophomore Misty Reardon

The Road to the Future

DECA members get a head start to persuing their career

DECA, an organization that lead many teenagers to a bright and prosperous future. Not only did it supply students with education, but also interesting activities.

"The things I enjoy most about DECA are the trips and the opportunities to meet new people," said senior James Millen Jr.

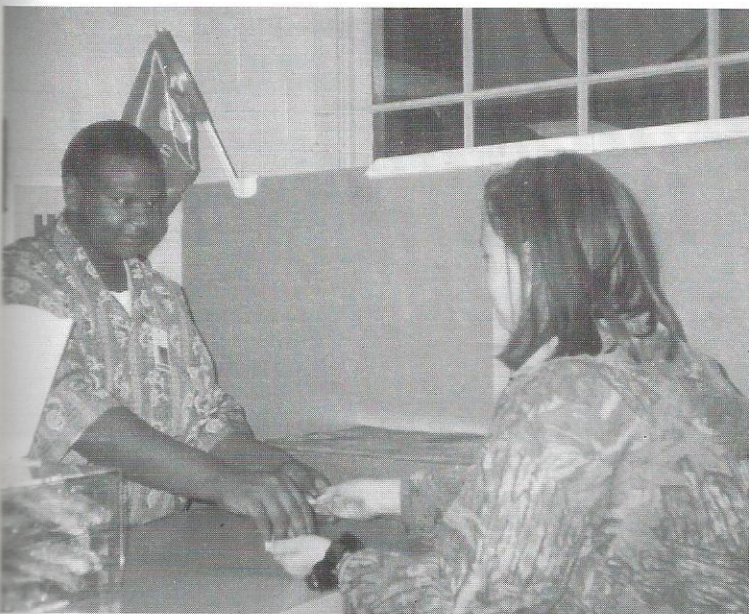

DECA could not only be known for its fun trips, though. The members of DECA could be given appreciation for the student store. Members ran the student store, which sold items from poster board to candy. The student store appeared to be a huge success by the line outside the door everyday after school!

DECA also competed to show their talent in the marketing world. The organizaton had three main competitive events in which members participated: DECA Fall Leadership Ralley in Columbia, DECA District Competiton, and DECA State Competition. If the team placed at state, then they qualified to go to Nationals.

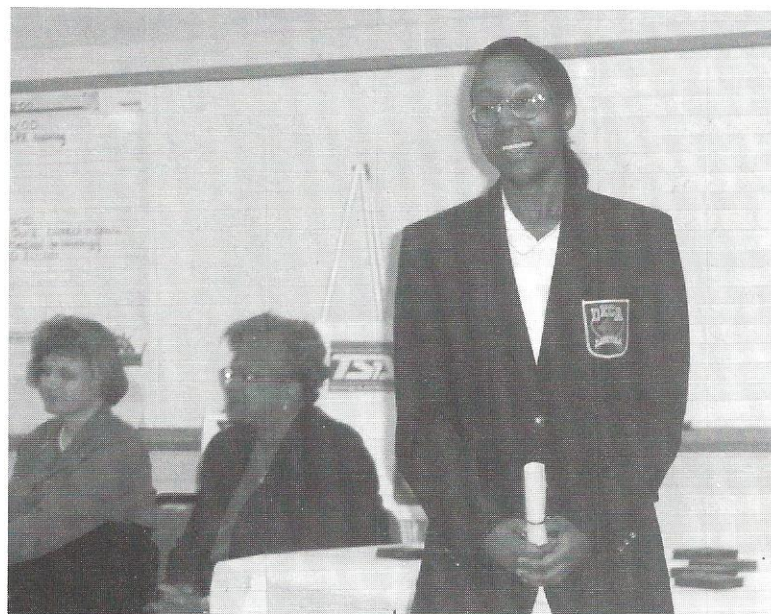

"DECA is really exciting and fun. All you need for DECA is a passion for business and a little common sense," said junior Crystal Long.

Some of the DECA members had plans to make something of DECA by possibly majoring in business and running their own company. No matter what a DECA member did with their education, the experience they gained could be thought upon as a huge success.

-Lindsay Ackerman

Say Cheese! Before the induction ceremony at the vocational school, a few DECA members take a picture to capture the moment. The excitement and anticipation was at a max, and they were ready to go!

Giggly Girl. Junior Elaine McNeil smiles and laughs with her fellow DECA members. There were many new members inducted for the 2000-2001 school year.

Even trade! As everyone knows, DECA operates the student store in the commons area after school. They sold items such as candy, cookies, and pizzas, which were very popular with students and teachers. The sales helped raise money for their meetings.

Honor Thy School

*Scholarship, Service, Leadership,
Character*

The National Honor Society played a major role in the lives of many students. Members spent many hours doing projects for their community. "To stay in NHS, I have to maintain a 3.7 GPA, have a clean discipline record, and complete at least forty hours of community service a year," said senior JD Neal.

Special events NHS participated in included Adopt-a-Highway, the Halloween carnival, the Asthma Fair, and put on a Powder Puff football game. "I was so excited about playing in the powder puff football game because this was my first year playing and I learned a lot about the game," said junior Ashley Ulmer.

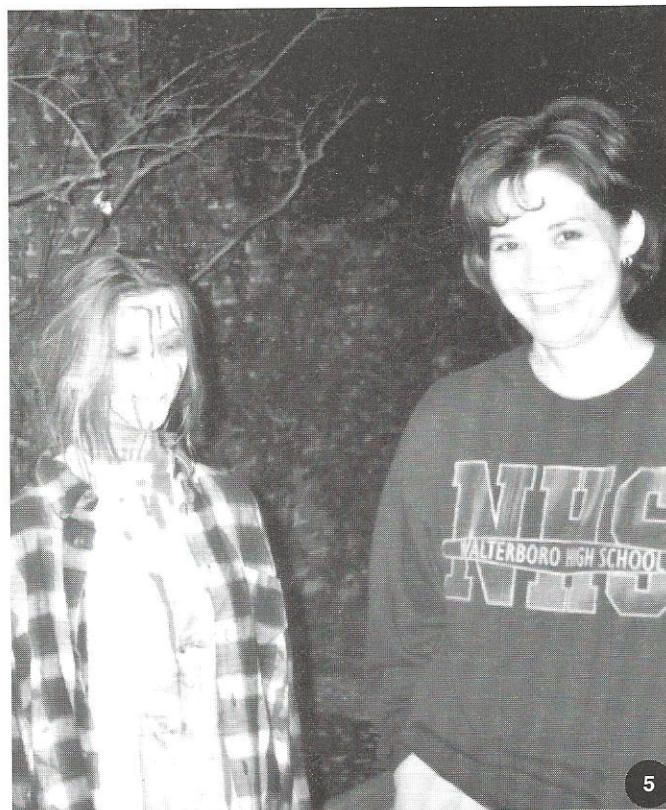

The NHS meetings informed everyone in the club about their financial situations, accomplishments the others members made, and the members discussed vital information about the club. "All of the sponsors and club officers are really sweet and understanding. We have respect for each other, but we can also joke around during the meetings," said senior Sophia Barnes.

National Honor Society members took pride in the extra time and effort they put into their community service. "Relay for Life was very enjoyable and it was great knowing that I helped in trying to find a cure for cancer," said senior and president Joseph Hamilton.

"Community service is my favorite part of being in NHS because I love feelings like I've really helped someone in need," said senior Madia Brown.

By being in NHS, students built character and became leaders. Through their academic abilities, these chosen students were able to affect lives by reaching out into the community.

Which One Goes Where?

1. Smile for the camera! Enjoying the Halloween Carnival, junior Krystal Thomas dressed up like a corpse. Sharon Courtney helped at the carnival, it took place on Main Street. A lot of NHS members attended and the night was full of scary costumes and fun.

2. Big hugs now! As junior Crystal Francis stands, A.I.E. Gator gives a hug. Tons of love were given to little children at the Halloween carnival. NHS members were so happy to help the children and play with them on Halloween. The kids had a lot of fun!

3. Behind the scenes. The bulldog and Walter-burrow entertained the little children at the Halloween Carnival. Erin Driggers played the role of the bulldog. Guess who played Walter-burrow?

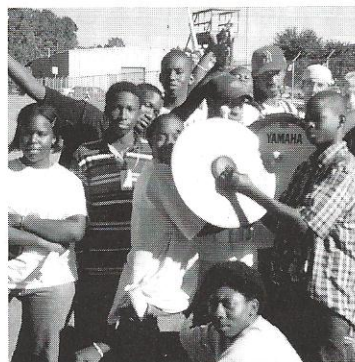

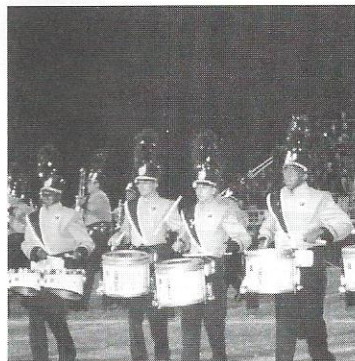

4. Helping with children. At the women's fair, NHS members, senior Cindy Crosby and junior Erin Driggers sit in a circle to play with the children. Their job was to babysit the children. Along with senior April Bullock, they had a lot of fun with playing games. NHS helped out a lot in the community.

5. Scary Faces. At the Halloween Carnival this year, junior Krystal Thomas dresses up like a corpse. It took place down on main street. A lot of NHS members attended and the night was full of scary costumes and fun.

6. Painting Smiles. At the women's fair, senior Courtney Gant pleases a child by painting her face. Many kids were real pleased to have NHS members come babysit them. Painting faces really brightened up many kids life.

7. Accepting Their Honor. Anticipating their first year as NHS members, the candidates proudly accepted their responsibilities. Along with all the fun and games, they were expected to do forty hours of community service and be a role model to everyone in the community.

Adventures in Imagination

The Band of Blue Joins the Millemium Celebration

"The Band of Blue is better than ever! This year's show was so the bomb! We are going to be kicking it in New York as champions!" said freshman Tijuan Mitchell.

Tijuan took the opportunity to reflect on the band's performance this year at state contest in Irmo, South Carolina.

"This year's show was possibly the most exciting, breathtaking, and the best work the band has ever put forth," said freshman Lindsey Robertson.

The theme originated from the animated series Fantasia 2000. The band practiced long and hard to prepare for competition in October. The band finished second in the state contest on October 28, 2000 with the highest score ever. "This year's show was a lot of hard work, but after all the practicing you get the hang of it. I really loved marching and enjoyed this year's show." said sophomore Kyeshia Robinson.

"The puppets and the colorguard's new look gave the band an added effect," said freshman Shanta Bright.

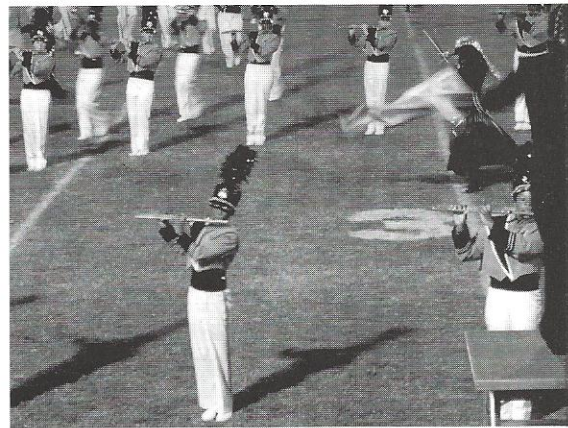

After months and months of hard work and practice on their Disney's Celebration theme, the band added another feat to add to their reputation as glorious performers. They have held the lower state champions of South Carolina for the past twelve years. They also showed their talent by performing in the Macy's 2000 Thanksgiving Day parade.

Band acquired a rare sense of greatness. They saw the invisible (positive attitudes), believed the inevitable (Walterboro getting noticed for something great), and achieved the impossible (improved the school's image!)

-Harry Brown

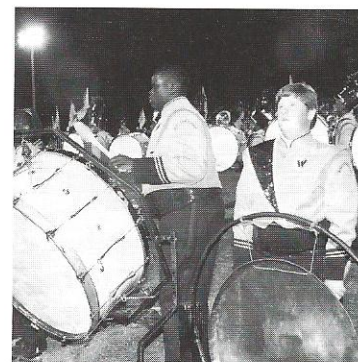

Marching Pride. Band of Blue brass players condense and almost perfect block showing off their hours of hard work and precision practice. The steps of these band students seemingly resembled those of mighty soldiers marching after a proud victory.

I can't hear you! In an incredibly precise and instant halt, the Band of Blue dazzles the crowd as they reach volumes never heard before. Their accurate pitch and amazing sound left their viewers in a daze!

We got Spirit! The Band of Blue shows team spirit after a Friday night performance. The team was led to a victory with the support of these additional cheerleaders.

Top 8 Things To Show You Are a Band of Blue Member...

8. You practice all summer and weekends just for a piece of wood with some metal on top. (The state trophy).
7. You walk in step with all of your friends.
6. Your idea of a good time is to get together with your friends and talk about band.
5. Your section leader comes up with a motto that is banned from the halls of WHS.
4. You sometimes "accidentally" call Mr. Bill Young "Daddy".
3. You've been in the band room at 2 o'clock a.m. one too many times.
2. You can assemble your instrument, get dressed, and go to the bathroom all in 4.5 minutes.
1. You know that the words, "Do It Again," do not actually mean that you will do it again only once.

"I chose to be in band because I loved to watch them perform at the middle school. I thought it was amazing and beautiful to see how they put music and marching together. Now I have the opportunity to influence another who may even watch us as we dazzle New York!"

-Sophomore Deidre Bright

"I had a yard sale to earn extra spending money for the Macy's Trip. I made about $15 to $16 per hour. Who wants to be cheap in New York?"

-Freshman Jennifer Kauffeld

"I think this year a lot more people were more dedicated than last year to the band's performance. Even though we lost, this year was one to remember!"

- Junior
Brenda Jackson

"I felt like this year's show had the potential to be a winning tool. The band worked hard to achieve possibly the most exciting, breathtaking, and robbed show the Walterboro High School Band of Blue has ever put forth!"

-Sophomore Drew Allen

A Singing Sensation

Chorus Students Take It to a Higher Note

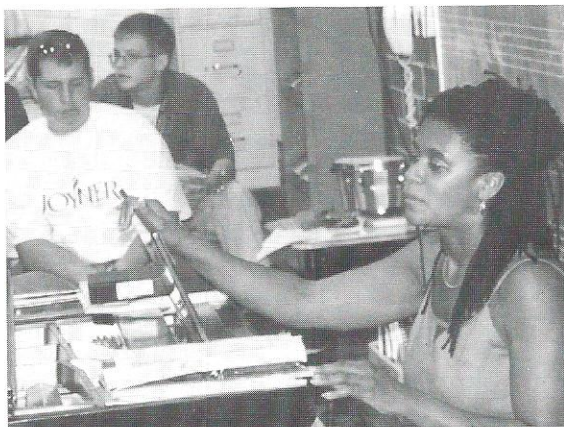

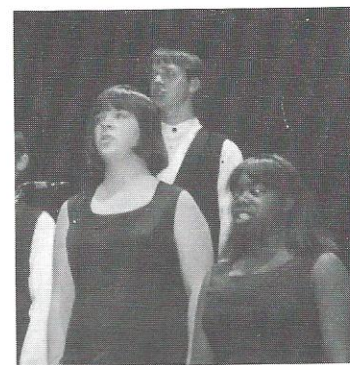

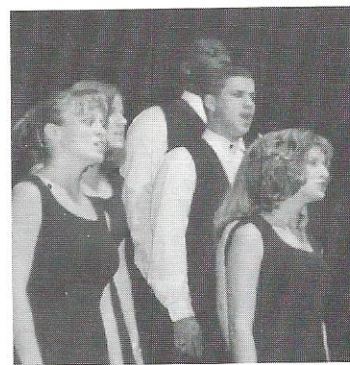

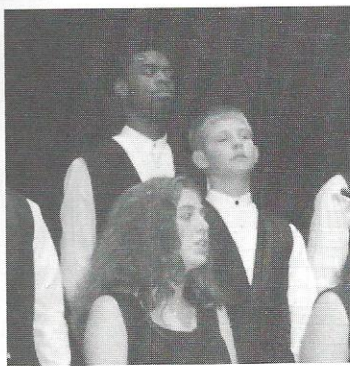

Doe, Ray, Mi, Fa, So, La, Ti, Doe! Music played a huge part in senior Jessica Koth's life. Inspired by her grandmother, Jessica became interested in music at an early age, which lead her to contribute hard work and dedication to the chorus.

"My grandmother is from Hawaii, and she is really into music. She's encouraged me to pursue singing and playing the piano," said Jessica.

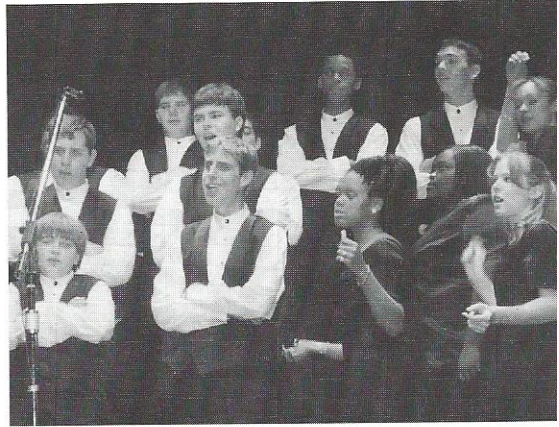

Jessica first started singing in school choruses in the third grade. She continued singing throughout her school years and landed several main roles in the spring musicals, including "Brigadoon" and "Meet Me in St. Louis."

"I've had great chorus teachers. My chorus teacher in the third grade was wonderful, and I love Mrs. Drawdy. She's like my second mom. I look up to her, and I want to become a chorus teacher to younger children some day."

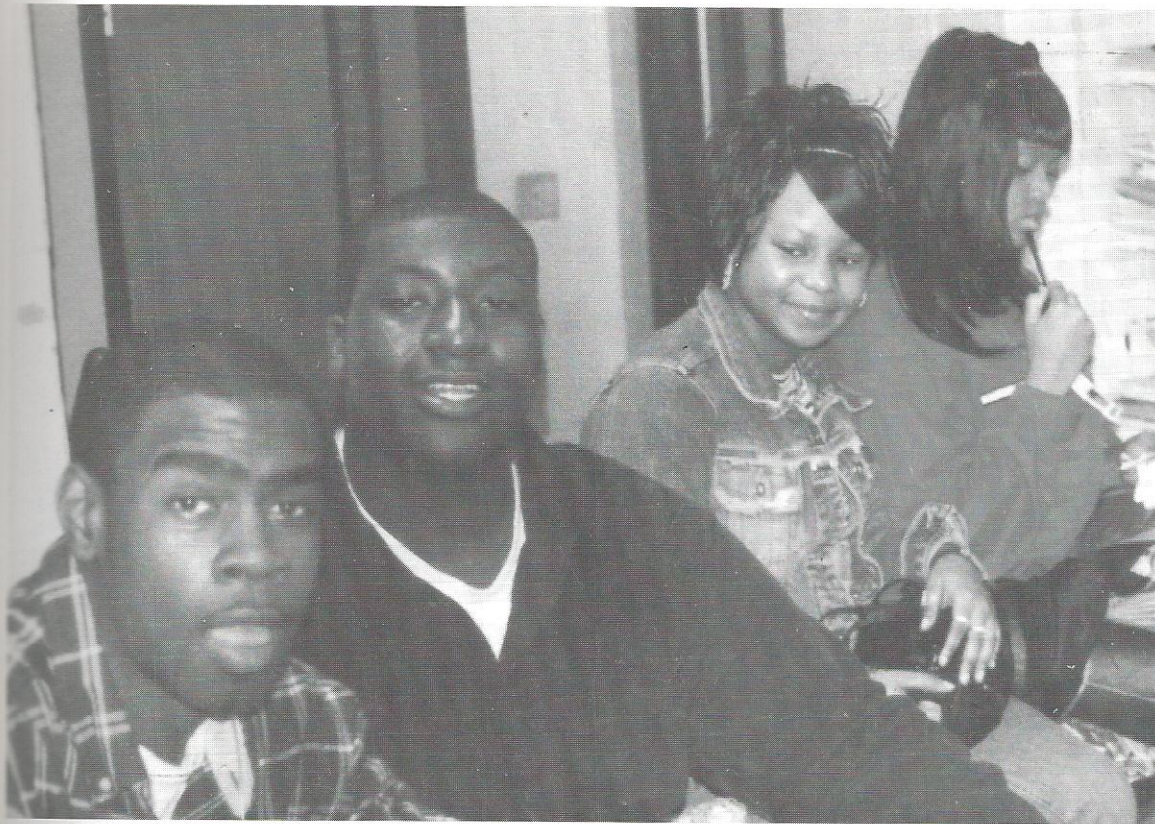

-Lydia McCollum

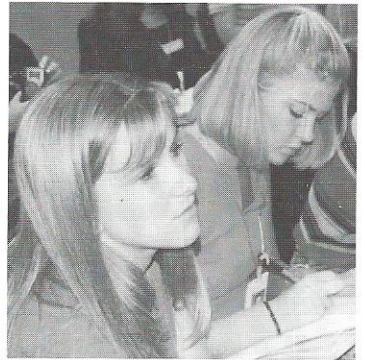

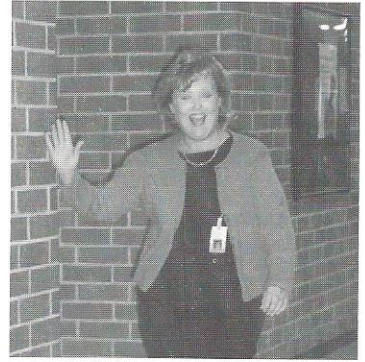

Listen up! Lenora Helm, a guest speaker, teaches the chorus new techniques for proper singing. The chorus used the new singing styles frequently throughout the year.

Sing your heart out! The Blue Notes class sings and dances away during their performance at the Christmas concert. The class blew the audience away with their powerful voices during the concert.

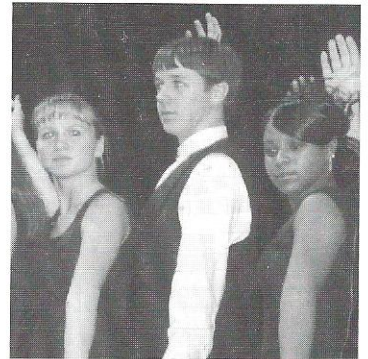

Chillin' like a villain. The Walterboro High School singers group takes a break out of their day to discuss their upcoming performance. The Christmas Concert turned out to be a great success.

Top Five Reasons To Take Chorus

1. "I love to sing."
2. "I heard it was a lot of fun."
3. "My friends were taking it."
4. "Mrs. Drawdy is awesome."
5. "I wanted to meet some new people."

"I have been in chorus for three years. It's not a hard class, but it takes dedication, and everyone has to be willing to work as a team."

-junior Sarah Lucas

"I love chorus because I enjoy singing, performing in plays, and meeting new people. It's also a learning experience."

-senior LaToya Lates

"I love teaching the chorus, but the credit has to be given to the students for the success of our program."

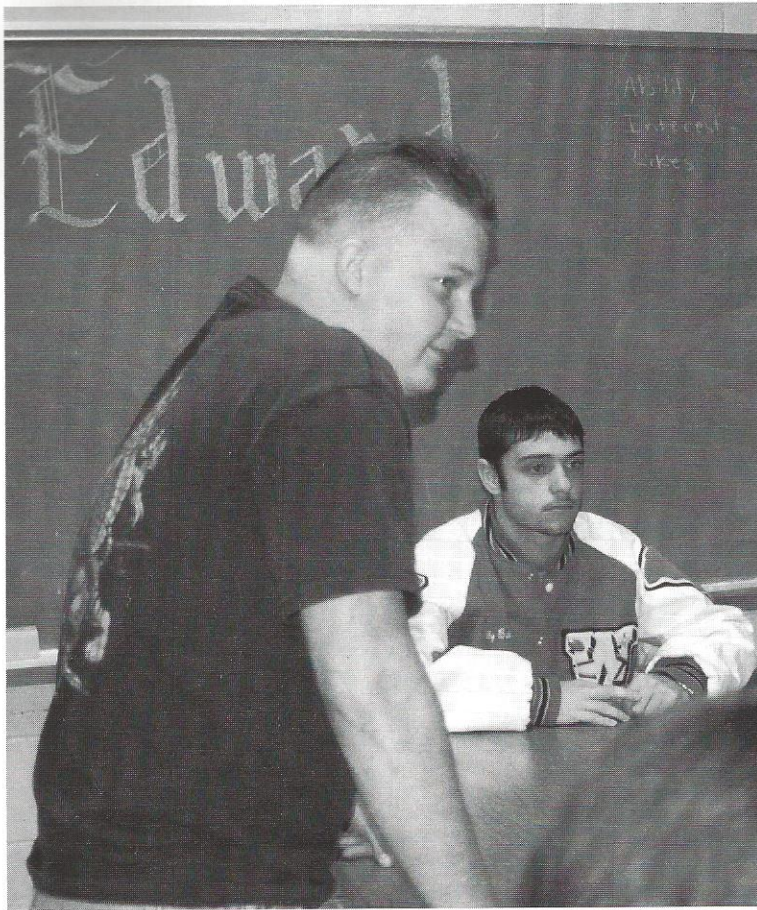

-Stephanie Drawdy
Chorus Director

"Chorus is a lot of fun. I'm glad that I decided to take it my first year. I'll definitely take it again."

-freshman Sharon Ellington

Listen Carefully! In order to understand the problem, the mediators listen carefully for every detail. Listening and understanding was very important for progress!

Help is on the Way...

Peer Mediators do all they can to lend a helping hand!

Can't we all just get along? Peer Mediators worked hard to stop the violence. When someone came to them with a disagreement, the mediators helped solve their problems. "It helps people keep an open mind, but for those who come in with no intentions of bettering themselves as a person, there is nothing we can do for them except offer our advice," said sophomore Erin Way.

Erin Way chose for peer mediation to be a big part of her life. Erin's experience came from five years of being involved in mediation. Students in mediation upheld confidentiality vows in order to keep trust within the school. She enjoyed helping people with their problems and hoped there was a chance for her to help others.

The job of a mediator helped people who disagreed on a subject so that violence would not be involved. Mediation did not always seem very important to some students, but it was an important part of the mediator's lives. "Some students do it just to get out of class, but we can tell who is seriously there and who isn't," said senior Lucas Nettles.

Mediators inherited a tremendous responsibility by taking the oath of confidentiality. They prepared for anything at anytime, and they worked hard to help WHS become a better school.

-Angela Reeves

Working it out! Figuring out a solution, seniors Billy Ballard and Samantha Flatten think together! Working together was a good way to find the best solution!

Solving Problems! Sitting together for support, seniors Chris Greene, Alexis Blakeny and Marcus Koth listen to the problem. They all tried their best to be open-minded and optimistic!

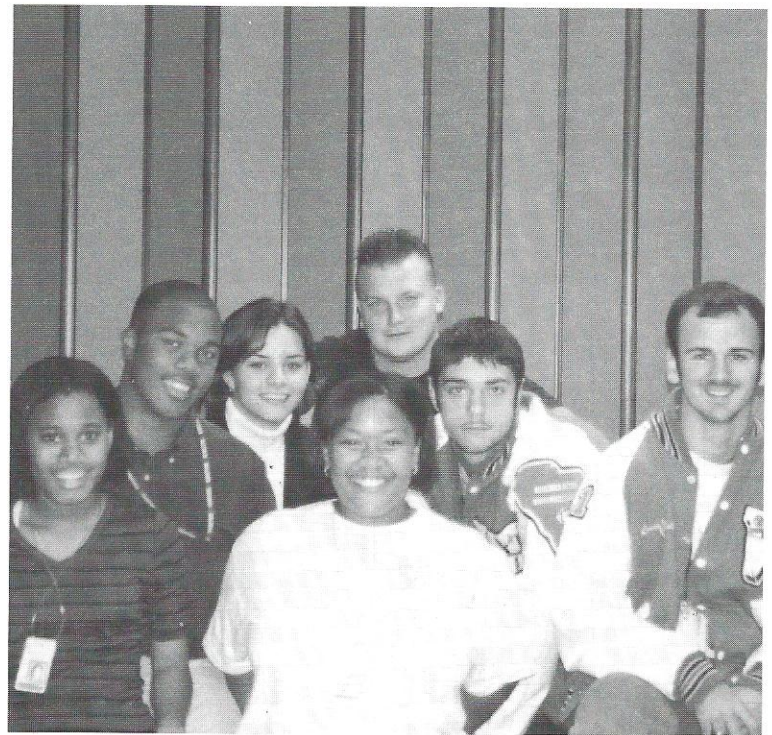

All together Now! Learning new social skills, these peer mediators team up to make a difference at WHS. Thanks to their hard work, many arguments and fights were prevented and put to an end.

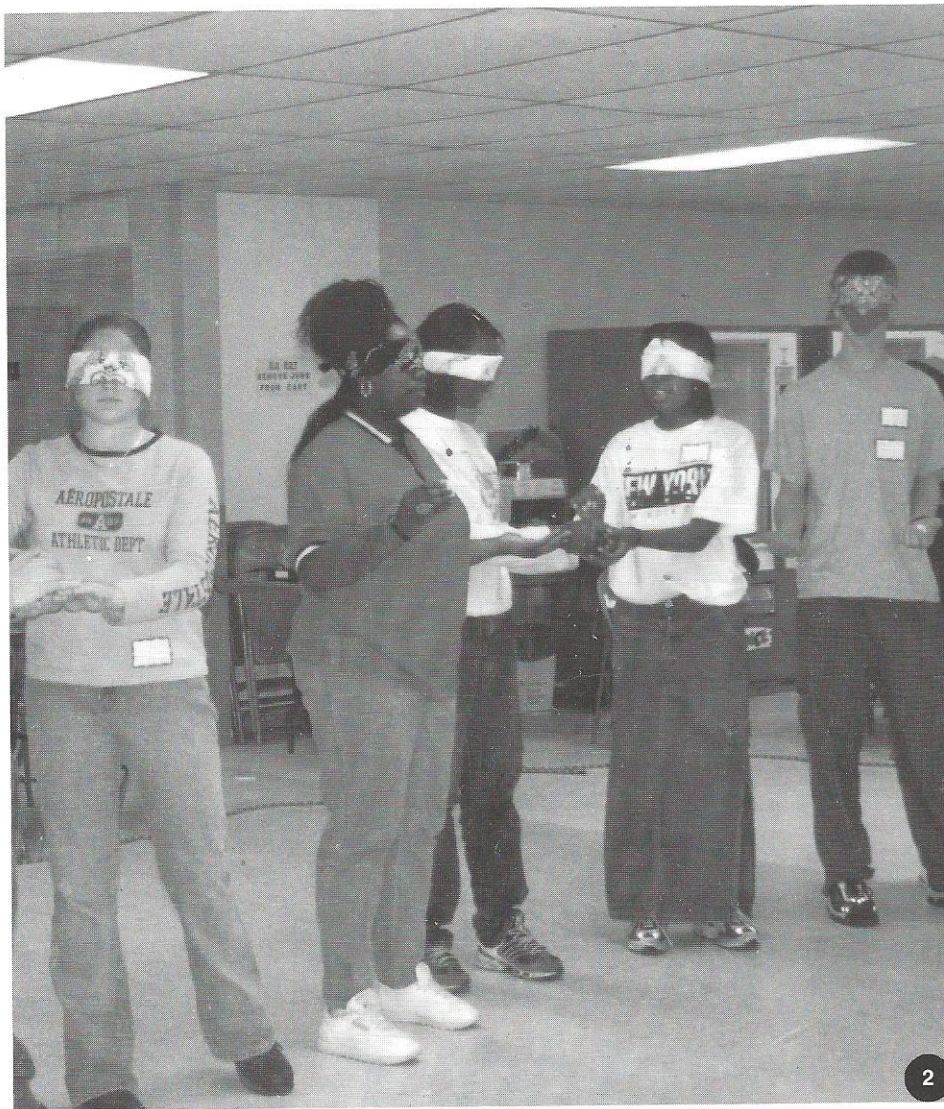

How might peer mediation help with your future plans?

"Mediators are role models for the students and leaders that help the students concentrate on their education and not unnecessary conflicts."
- senior Samantha Flaten

A quick pose! Proud to be positive, a few mediators get together after a session to chat. After helping others get along, they needed some time to socialize among themselves.

1. Lost In Reality. Blind-folded, students use teamwork to retrieve a ball, representing their futures, from a center ring. This taught them that teamwork is the only way to achieve all that the future holds for them.

2. Teamwork: The Universal Language. Students form a chain to help pass each others futures. They found that success can be achieved at a much more efficient pace if they worked together.

3. Happy to Help. Senior board member, Ashley Ulmer, pauses to capture the moment. She has been in the group for two years.

4. Speaking Out. Juniors, Jacqui Henderson and Nathan Breland join in a group discussion about improvements to be made in Colleton County. The group broadened the students perspective of their community.

5. Standing Alone. Veronica Jarido, a sophomore, decides what direction to travel in order to reconnect with her partner. She learned that communication and teamwork is important to a thriving community.

6. Head Students In Charge. Ashley Ulmer (left) and Erin Craven (right), both juniors, share a smile.. The girls supervised activities and helped out when needed.

7. Molding Minds of Might. (left to right) YLC chairman, Linda Harrell, coordinator, Jill Harriett, and fellow board member Ladine Nettles discuss the group's next activity. The women were a part of the backbone of the group. Along with several others, their board was in charge of planning the groups activities. "The program was designed in the best interest of the students. We are dedicated to their future and the future of this county," said coordinator Linda Harrell.

Lending a Hand Through Leadership

Students Get Involved!*

In the mist of a society falling steadily, community leaders have come up with a solution. They formed a group of juniors and sophomores to undergo training that may someday benefit the community economically and socially.

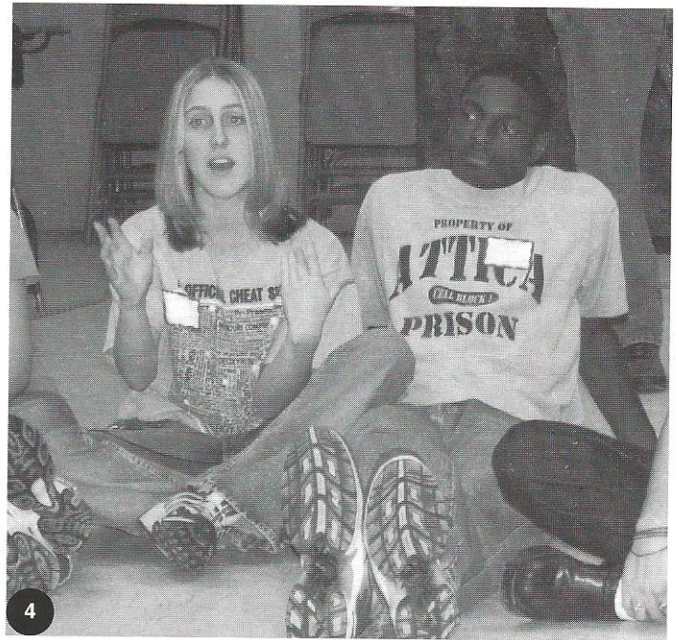

"YLC has shown me how to be successful in life. When I joined the program, I was nervous, but I'm glad I did. We were involved in a lot of activities that helped to enrich the community," said junior Ashley Ulmer.

Ashley served as a senior board member in Youth Leadership Colleton. She entered a year ago and has continued to, concentrate her efforts to its purpose; to broaden its members horizons, occupationally speaking, and the outlook of this county with the hope that they will return to the community as leaders in the near future.

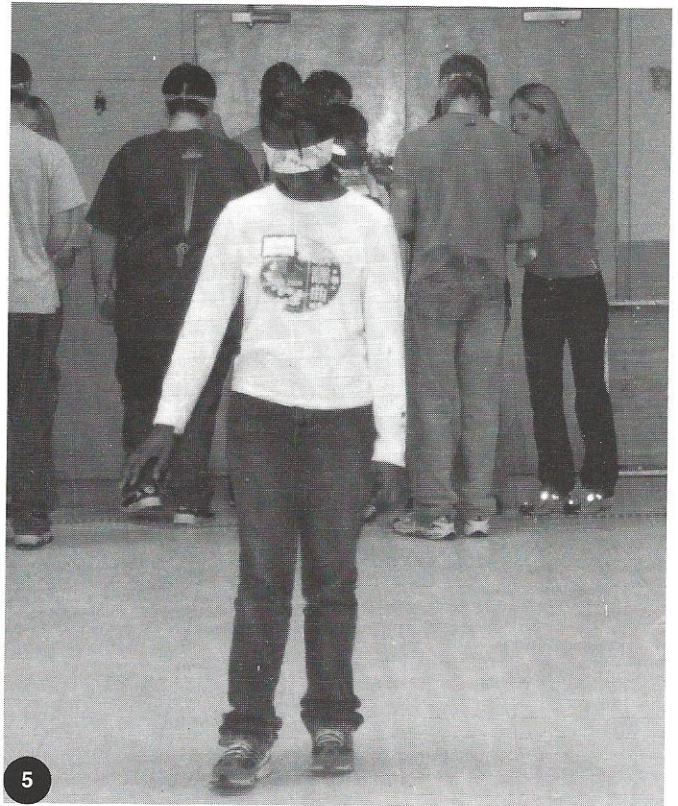

"I am glad I got the opportunity to take part in this program. My favorite activity has been mentoring the younger students. When I was younger there weren't many teenagers to look up to," said Ashley.

In addition to its Save Our Children tutoring project, the students visited the State House, toured medical and industrial facilities, and took part in the activities. The program has changed their lives and instilled in them a lasting desire to make the necessary changes to improve their county's economy.

"I love little kids, and being a Pediatric Physical Therapist will be a very interesting and rewarding career," said sophomore Christine Harris when asked about her future career choice.

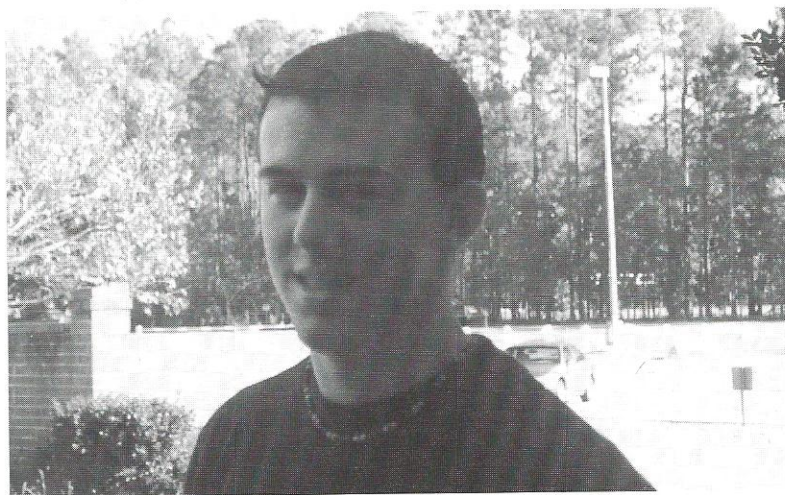

The medical field, Christine's number one career choice for as long as she remembered, drove her forward. Slowly, over the years, she acquired pediatric and physical therapy as the branch in the medical field that she wants to pursue.

Christine planned on attending Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston, because they maintained a great physical therapy program.

Making plans to roll in the dough... Senior Dustin Burgsteiner took different courses, like Intro to Computer Programming, Master Word, and Power Point, in order to prepare him to become a computer technician, a career that would give him a chance to make good money.

"I'm planning on going to Orangeburg Tech because of the excellent facilities courses that it offers for my future career," said Dustin.

When it came to future careers, senior Travis Hansen knew exactly what he wanted to do. He planned majoring in business administration or marketing so that he could one day become a business administrator.

"The marketing course and DECA that I took during my senior year have really helped me focus in the business direction by expanding my knowledge of this future career," said Travis.

The main influences for Travis' decision were the money and leadership possibilities involved in this career, and that pointed him in the direction of business.

"My friends are the main influence on my decision to become a psychologist. They always come to me in times of need because they know I will always be here for them, and that has given me the reassurance to pursue a career in the psychology," said senior Alexis Blakeney when asked about her choice of career.

Peer mediator, Alexis, took a psychology class with Mrs. Allgood. She had been planning on going to USC-S, located in Spartanburg, to follow out her dream career.

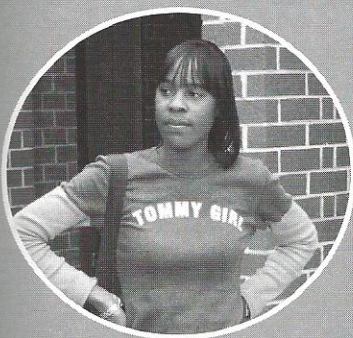

Moving up in the world...

Ready to face the challenges of colleges and careers...

Kim Davis

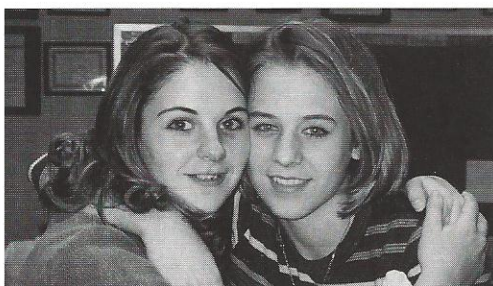

"When my best friend, Tyeshia Pinckney, and I graduate from high school, we plan to attend USC (Columbia) and become roommates because I can depend on her for anything."

Tyeshia Pinckney

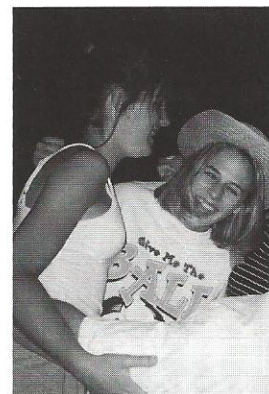

"My best friend Kimberly Davis and I have this strong bond that we plan to keep forever. I want to room with her because I have faith that she will keep up her end of the bargain when it comes to the responsibilities of a roommate and friend."

University of South Carolina

"I can't wait until I go to USC next year. Sophia and I will have a blast together! All I have to say to those Clemson fans, though, is watch out for the Gamecocks, because we are coming back in the year '01!"

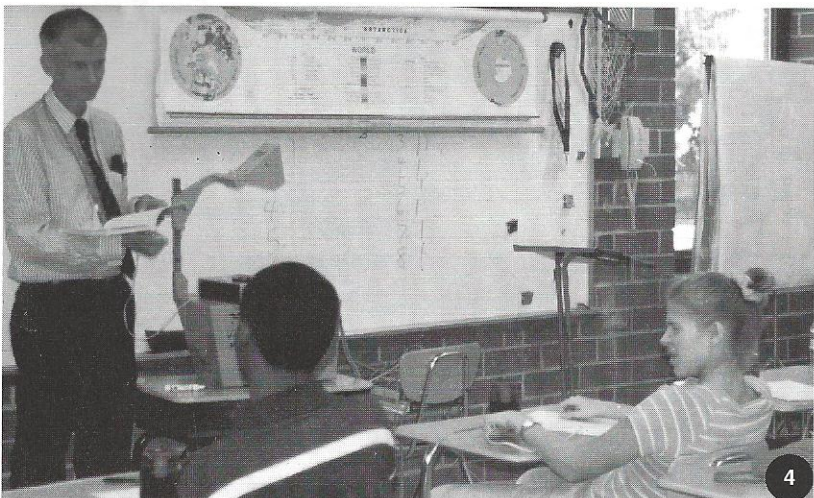

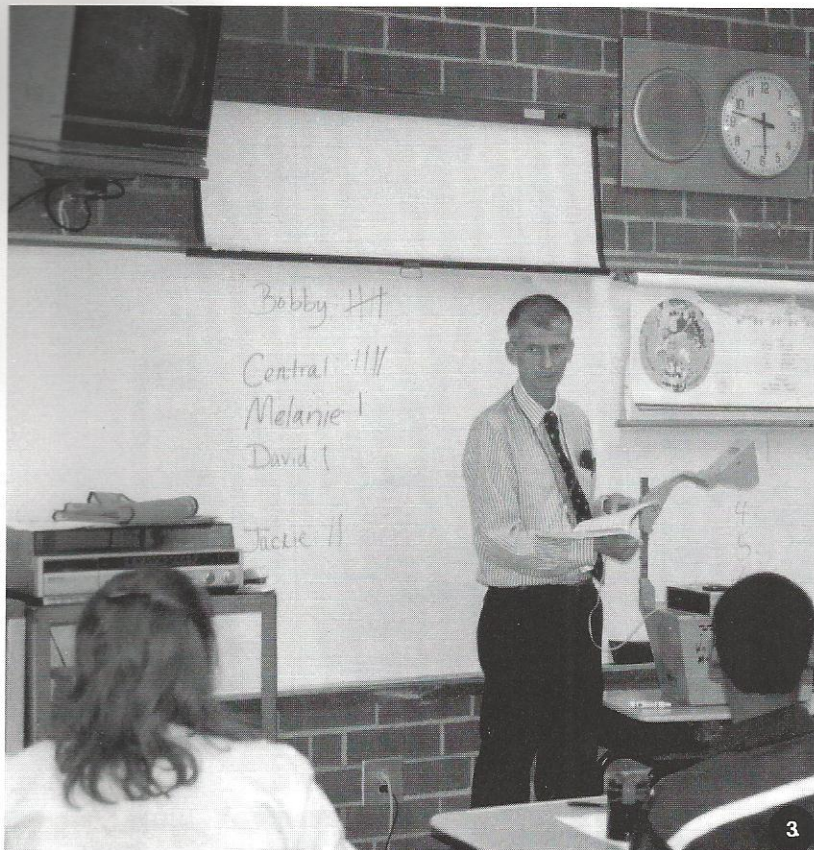

- senior Gini Girardeau

Seniors Gini Girardeau and Sophia Barnes made plans to attend college at USC in Columbia together.

"I'm looking forward to graduation day so that I can finally leave Walterboro and get a chance to be out on my own," said senior Lucas Nettles.

2. Who, on June 30, 1967, became the first black astronaut?
3. Whose election campaign slogan was Autlzo?

3. Keeping Score. Making practice fun, Mr. Smith plays games to keep the team members interested. Fun and education combined into one, made each practice enjoyable. Having been chosen to be a member of the academic team was a great honor!

4. Right or Wrong? Keeping it fair, Mr. Smith answers a question from junior Central Williams. The students liked to ask Mr. Smith questions also to keep him mentally in shape. By doing that, everyone learned many different interesting things. Everyone learned many interesting trivia facts while being a member of the academic team.

1. Don Meredith, 2. Robert H. Lawrence, 3. Barry Goldwater, SR.

Is That Your Final Answer?

Students Make it big on the Academic Team

Who is the father of Geometry? Most would not have known the answer to that question but the members of the academic team did. The academic team proved to be a very challenging organization to be a member of. The members took two 50 question tests, and the top ten scorers qualified to be on the team.

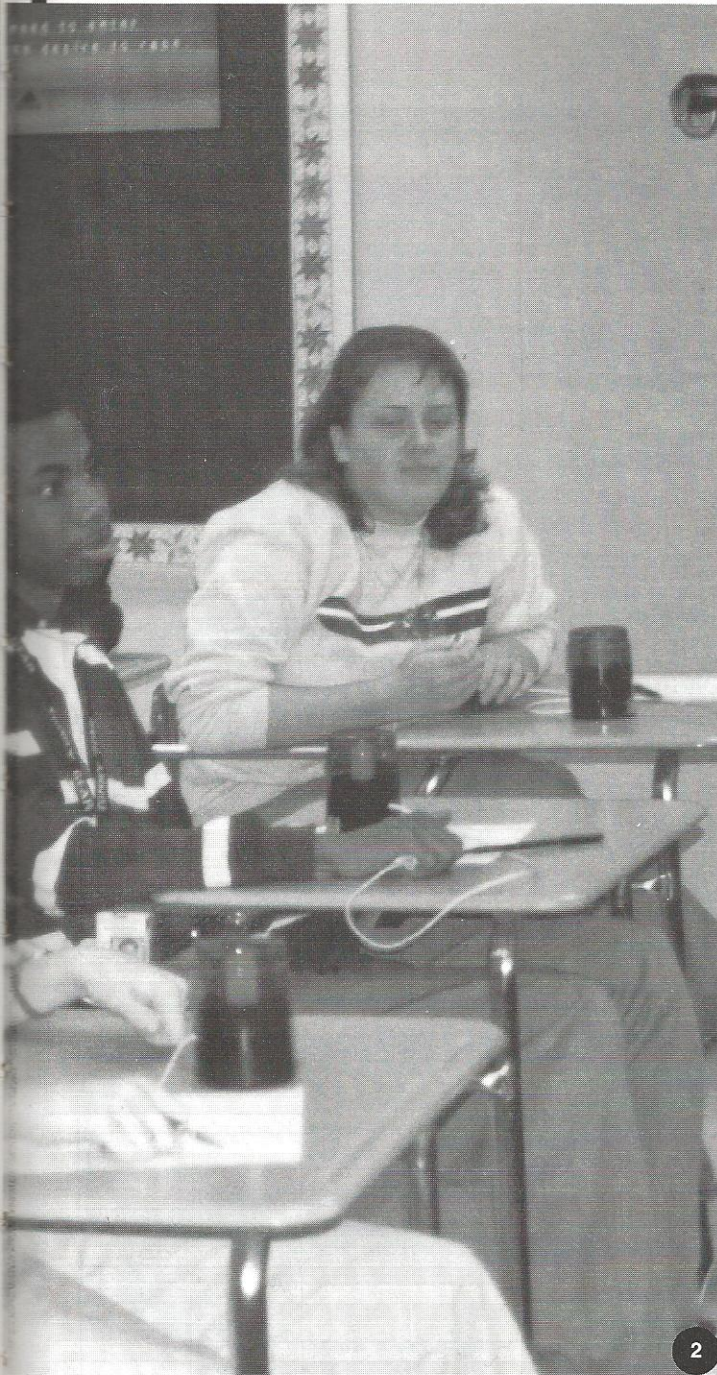

Every Thursday the academic team met in Mr. George Smith's room to prepare for the meets. "I think the questions at the meets are difficult, they aren't things you would talk about everyday," said junior Shantel Middleton.

The meets occurred once a month at different high schools. "Being on the academic team helps me to think quicker on a daily basis," said senior Lucas Nettles.

The academic team helped to place and better different skills in some members lives. "Being on the team has helped me to refine my leadership skills as captain that will be useful to me in the future," said junior Melanie Winningham.

Things that students learned by being on the academic team could have helped them do better on the SAT, get into a better college, or possibly win them a million dollars on Who Wants to be a Millionaire!

An American Tale

Is it all that it's cracked up to be?

Imagine being two seas and a continent away from home. Imagine friends, family, and all the comforts of home; now imagine them gone. Imagine being in a new country with new customs, a new language, and an entirely new way of life. This may sound like something that would take a lot of adjustment, and it is.

Luiz Rebello was a foreign exchange student from Brazil. After he lived in Walterboro for three months, Luiz still felt uneasy about being so far away from home. Luiz, greatly surprised by the many adjustments that he had to make, agreed the United States and Brazil had many similarities. The change seemed to be a great one even though he had a hard time making friends.

"What I miss most about home is my friends and going out to night clubs with them," Luiz informed the journalism staff.

He found the football games to be his best memories of the United States. Football games generated a lot of Luiz's classmates, so he found them to be one of the most interesting things in Walterboro.

Luiz chose to stay in the United States for the duration of his ten month visit. He realized that maybe he could try harder to make friends.

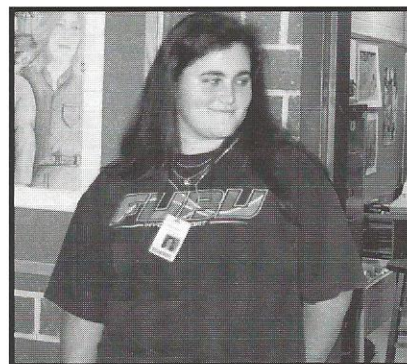

-Shantel Middleton

Make a Funny Face Foreign exchange student Elena Kaschubatz makes a funny face. Those who knew Elena knew that she was quite the class clown. She went out of her way to make classmates smile. She was known around school for her personality.

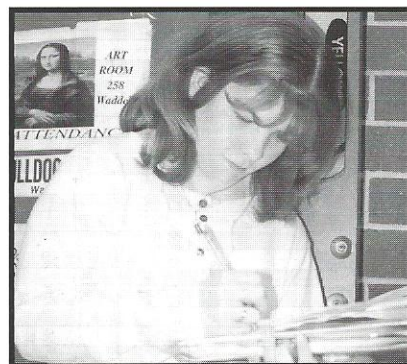

"Elena is very nice. She draws pictures for her friends that show the world through her eyes. She tells us about her culture. Best of all she is down to earth just like me. We are from two way different places, but we have so much in common."

-Rebekah Webber

"Elena is a very outstanding student. She adds a different aspect of the culture of the United States. She is not only learning about the United States, she is becoming part of the United States with every moment she spends here."

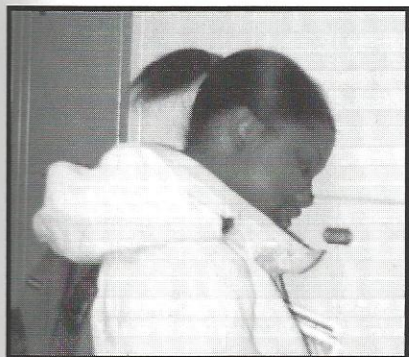

-Alicia Faulk

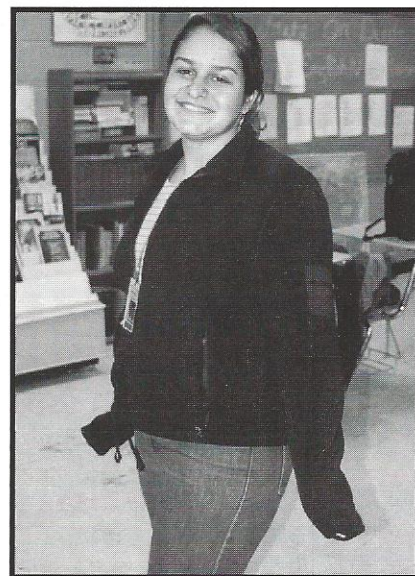

"Bianca is a really sweet person. She taught me that people from other countries are just like us, Americans. They go through the same issues and deal with the same problems that we do. She's taught me that kindness takes you places in life."

-Melodi Wiggins

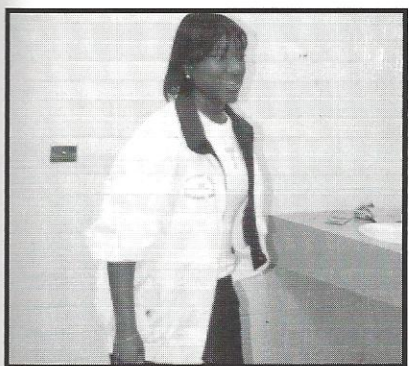

"My friendship with Bianca has grown greatly since we had classes together. Her kindness and care have helped me to make it through most of my hardest days this year. She is truly a great friend; I will miss her when she goes back."

-Tyneshia Stephens

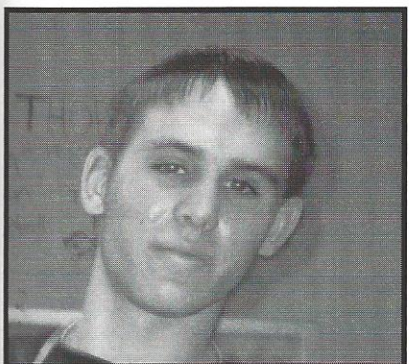

Ah, don't be shy. Bianca Ferreira flashes her award winning smile. Bianca's friends became fond of her smile; some of them wrote an essay about wanting to live in Brazil if all the people there would have friendly smiles like Bianca.

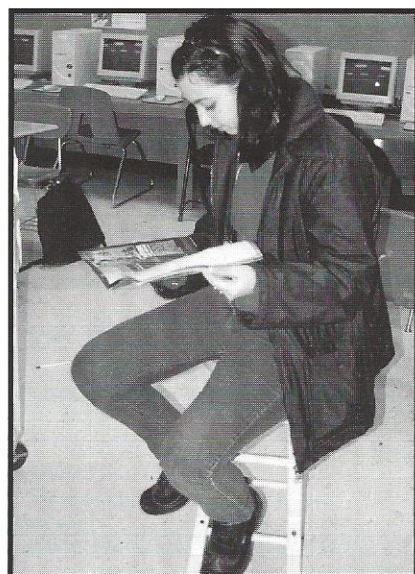

"Ana has been my friend since the day she walked into my most boring class. It is fun watching her learn more US customs. She sometimes finds things we do everyday unusual, but she respects our customs. She is excited by the things we have to offer here."

-Klesha Fennel

"I ran into Ana one day in the halls, and she is one of the coolest people that I have ever met. She is funny and friendly. I have never seen her be unkind to anyone. She is very much like the ideal all-American girl, only not American."

-Joe Iademarco

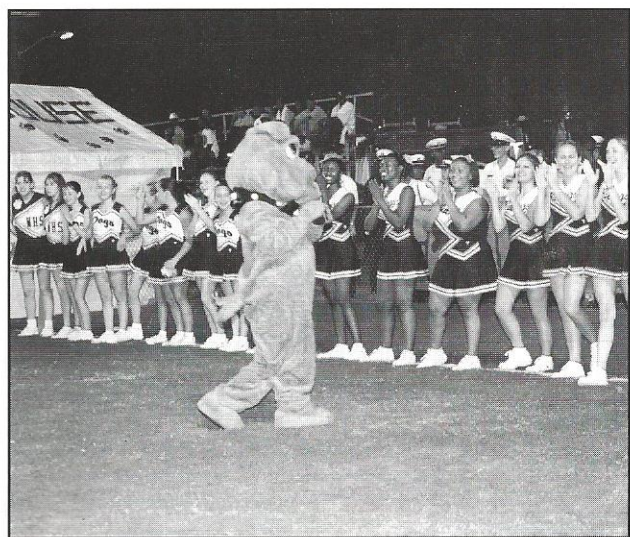

The all-American girl. Ana Milivojevic quietly reads a teen magazine. Ana enjoyed reading, though the language barrier created a problem sometime. She spent a great deal of time looking at the ads and quizzes that were found all over American teen magazines.

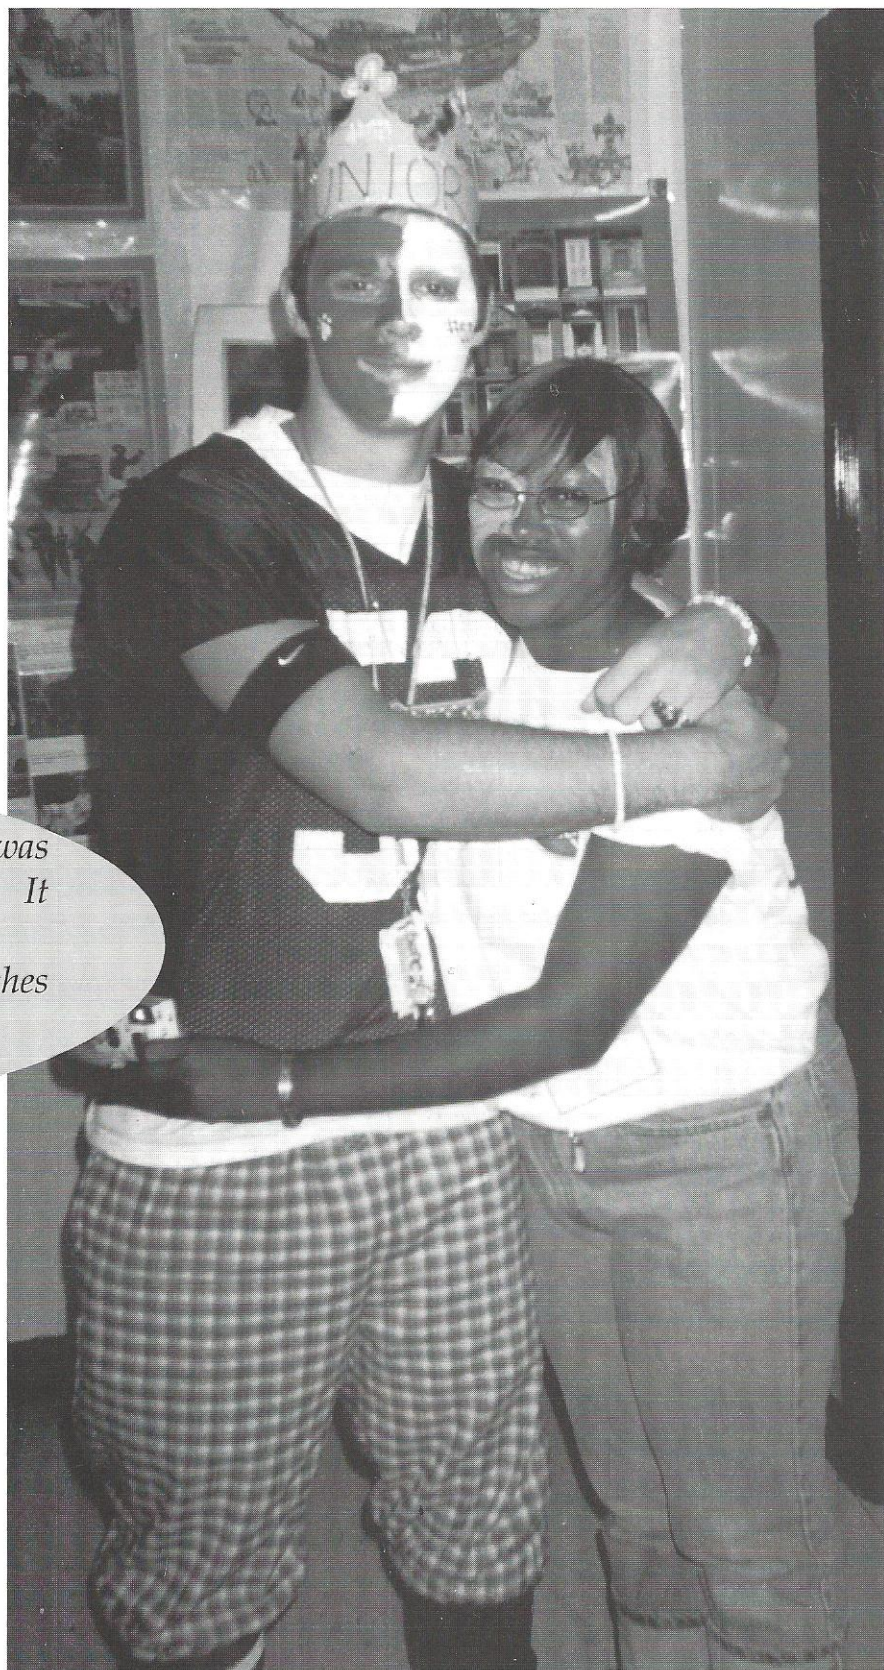

"My favorite memory from this year was winning mock homecoming queen. It was fun acting wild and crazy and dressing up like a girl, even if the clothes were REALLY tight!"

-senior Micheal Bostic-Jones

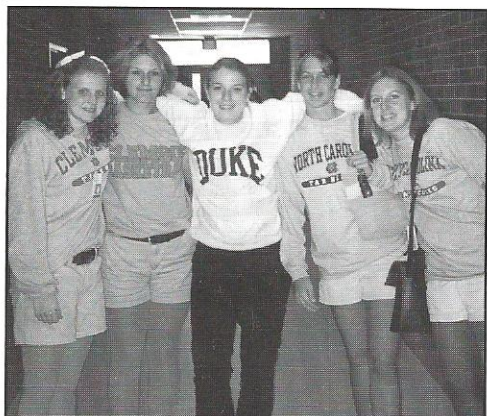

Shake it fast... Junior Erin Driggers does a little dance in the Bulldog suit to get the cheerleaders pepped up and ready for the game against Berkeley. Erin wore the suit to most of the games all season, getting tons of laughs and attention from the faithful fans.

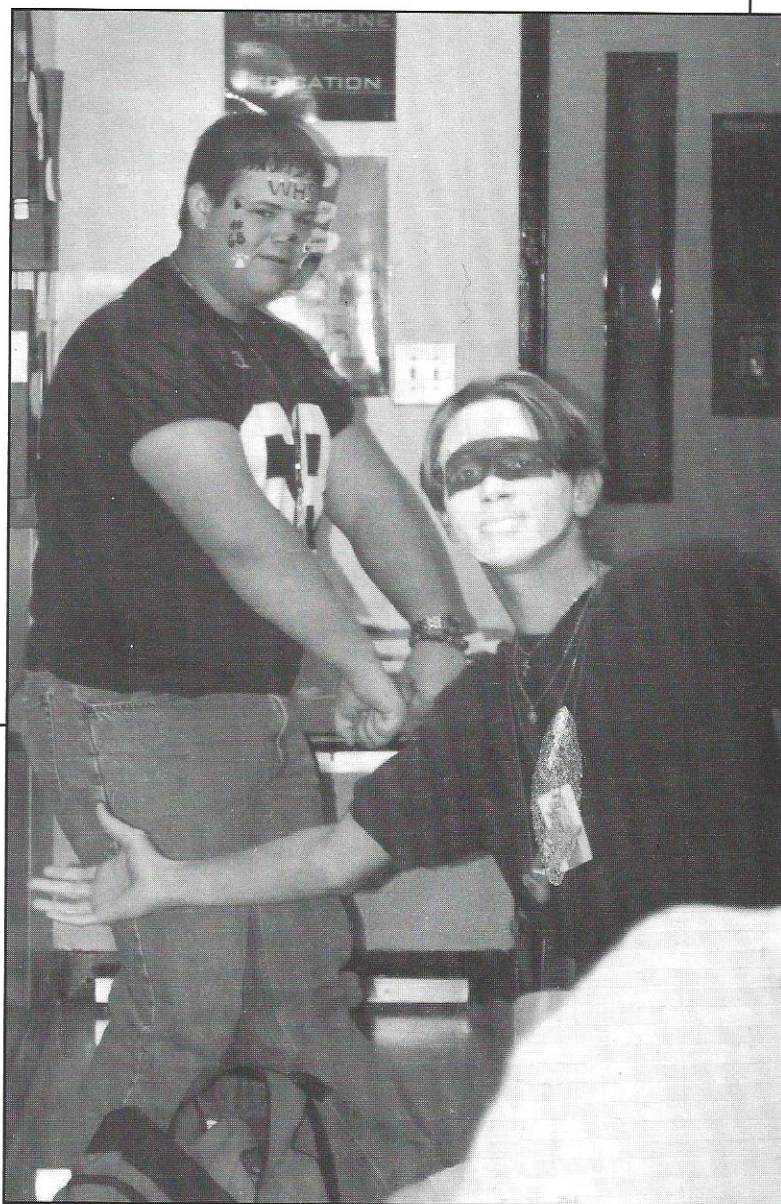

Showin' their Dog Spirit... Juniors Jowe Nettles and Shushanna Taylor take a second to pose before the big game one Friday night. Jowe helped lead the dogs that night to their victory over Battery Creek.

Showing blue in the Face

“ A friend is one who reaches out for your hand... and touches your heart. ”

-Unknown

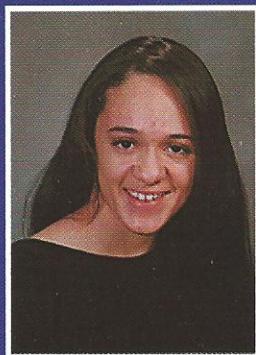

Muscle? What muscle? Juniors Lance Anderson and Will Smoak try to impress the ladies by displaying their school spirit. These two friends could be found goofing off and playing around whenever they got a chance.

Hail to thee! The well-respected chorus give their annual singing of the Alma Mater and the National Anthem the night of homecoming. Later in the year they sent many people to the All-State tryouts in hopes that some of them would make it.

How nasty IS YOUR CAR?

Hayley Chassereau

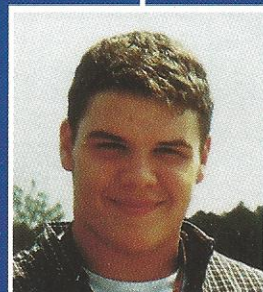

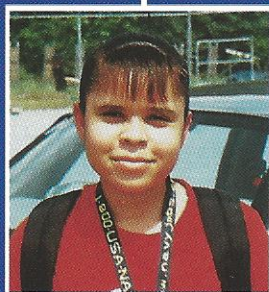

"My car is a 1996 Grand Am. It is very nasty. I have food and paper in the side-door pockets, and I also leave clothes and shoes in my car every day."
-Lareatha Crosby

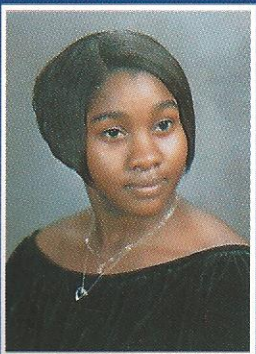

"I have a gold Toyota. I like to keep it clean, but most of the time it stays pretty dirty. The outside of my car though, stays clean."
-Jamaal Gant

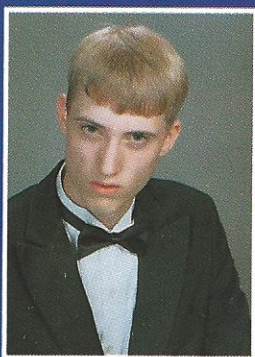

Thomas Compton

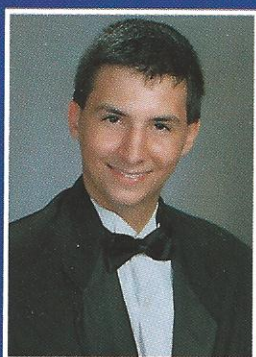

"I live in two different houses, so I have a lot of clothes in my car. My car is not very big so there is not much room for the trash that I keep in there."

Pucker Up...

First Kiss

LOCATION: COLD, DARK PLACE LENGTH: LONG TIME: NIGHT PARTICIPANT: ALEXIS BLAKENEY

“It was in the dark this summer and cold outside. J.J. and I were standing by the car, and we just kissed. It was a long and passionate kiss.”

LOCATION: MOVIES LENGTH: GOOD ENOUGH TIME: NIGHT PARTICIPANT: CRAIG STIVENDER

“Heather Herndon and I were at the movies. Afterwards, we walked outside, and I gave her a good kiss goodnight.”

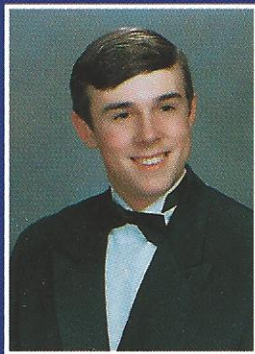

LOCATION: UNDER OAK TREE LENGTH: UNSURE
TIME: DAYTIME PARTICIPANT: MICHELLE MCMILLAN

“My first kiss was in the 7th grade with my first boyfriend. We were at school under the oak tree waiting for the bus.”

WHAT WOULD YOU CHANGE ABOUT YOURSELF?

WHAT WOULD YOU CHANGE ABOUT YOURSELF?

WHAT WOULD YOU CHANGE ABOUT

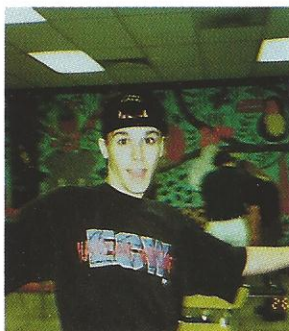

WHAT WOULD YOU CHANGE

WHAT WOULD YOU CHANGE ABOUT YOURSELF??

WHAT WOULD YOU CHANGE ABOUT YOURSELF??

"I would make my head smaller, and my ears bigger so my head wouldn't look so big. I also wish my butt was bigger."

-Josh Berry

"My height, I would like to be 5'5" or 5'6". I would also like to change my weight, at least be 10 pounds lighter than I am now."

-Chimere Brown

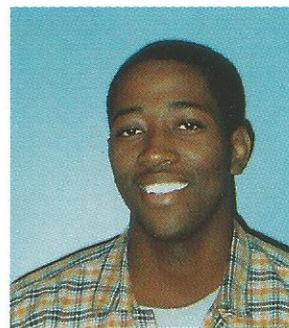

"I would change my height because it's harder for short people to make it in sports these days."

-Ronnie Broach

"I would change the size of my ears because they are so big and everyone notices them."

-LeAndre Nelson

WHAT WOULD YOU CHANGE ABOUT YOURSELF? WHAT WOULD YOU CHANGE ABOUT YOURSELF?

We've got spirit. During the pep rally the J.V. and varsity cheerleaders show their support as the football players walk through the tunnel. Pep rallies were one of the ways that everyone liked to show their spirit.

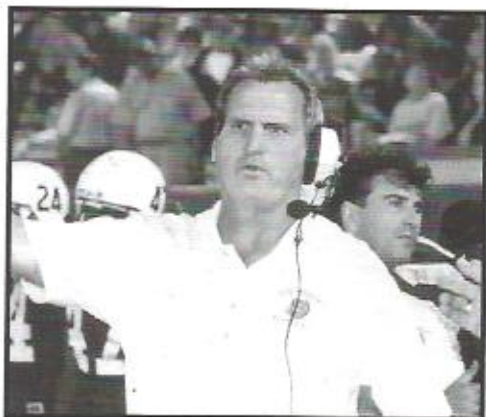

"Volleyball is a great sport to play. The rush of spiking the ball is what keeps me going."

-senior, Tavera Edwards

A show of Victory

“Winning isn’t everything. It’s the only thing”

- Vince Lombardi, legendary Greenback Packer’s coach

Jump Ball. A varsity basketball player tries to reach higher to put the ball in the hoop while fending off three Ruffin players. The basketball team gave each and every game all the effort they had.

Hands on hips, smiles on lip. During a cheer, varsity cheerleader, Amanda Johnston shows her enthusiasm at a football game. The cheerleades loved showing their spirit and got the crowd hyped.

REAL MEN WEAR BLUE AND WHITE

Varsity Football
Rocks the Doghouse!

The crowd yelled, the band played, and the stadium lights hummed. Packed stands and hundreds of people surrounded the 100 yard long field. The crowd roared and the band struck up as the real men ran out on the field wearing blue and white. The Friday night game had not even started yet, but the vibe of victory already hung in the air.

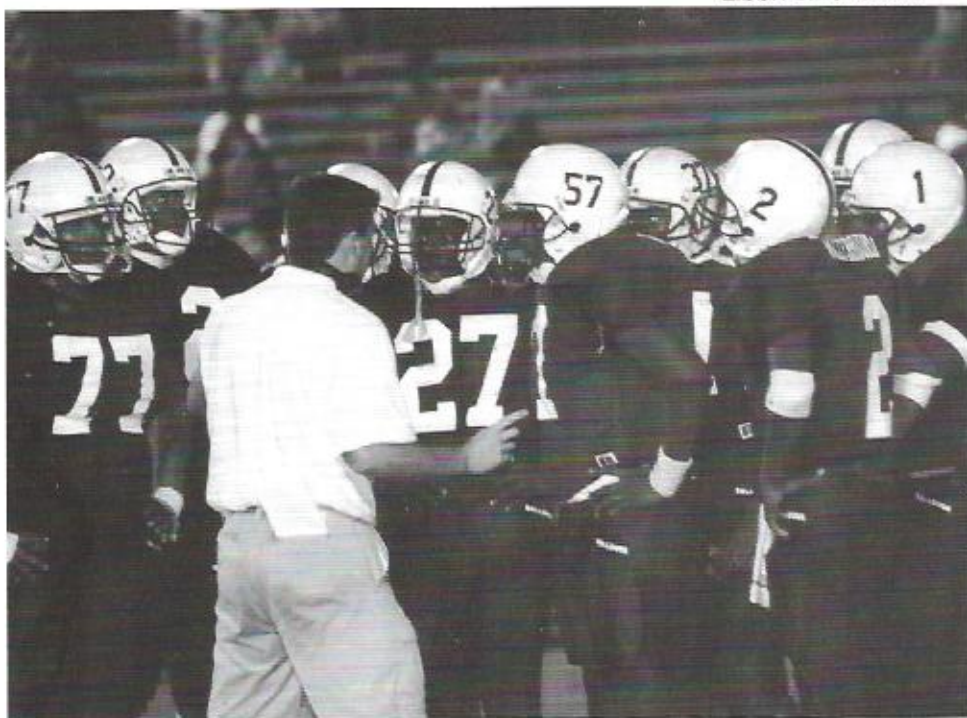

"My favorite part of playing football is Friday night. That is my pay day," said junior Sha' Ron Jenkins. "Our football team was one of the most respected teams in the state. We had to earn that back."

Playing football meant dedication. Football was a very demanding and time consuming sport. But football gave back as much as it took. Most of the team learned respect, dedication, and sportsmanship.

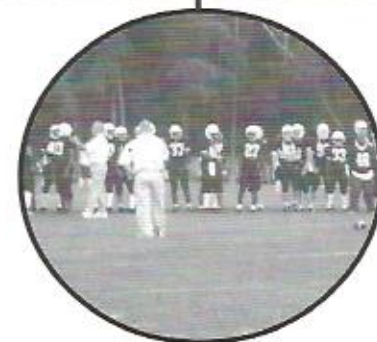

"Sportsmanship, to me, is being under control and having respect for coaches, players on your team, and players on the other team," said junior Chris Washington.

Each season brought new challenges to face. Every Friday night the dogs got out on the field giving it all they had. In the end, they showed the fans that all of the hard work and dedication really did pay off.

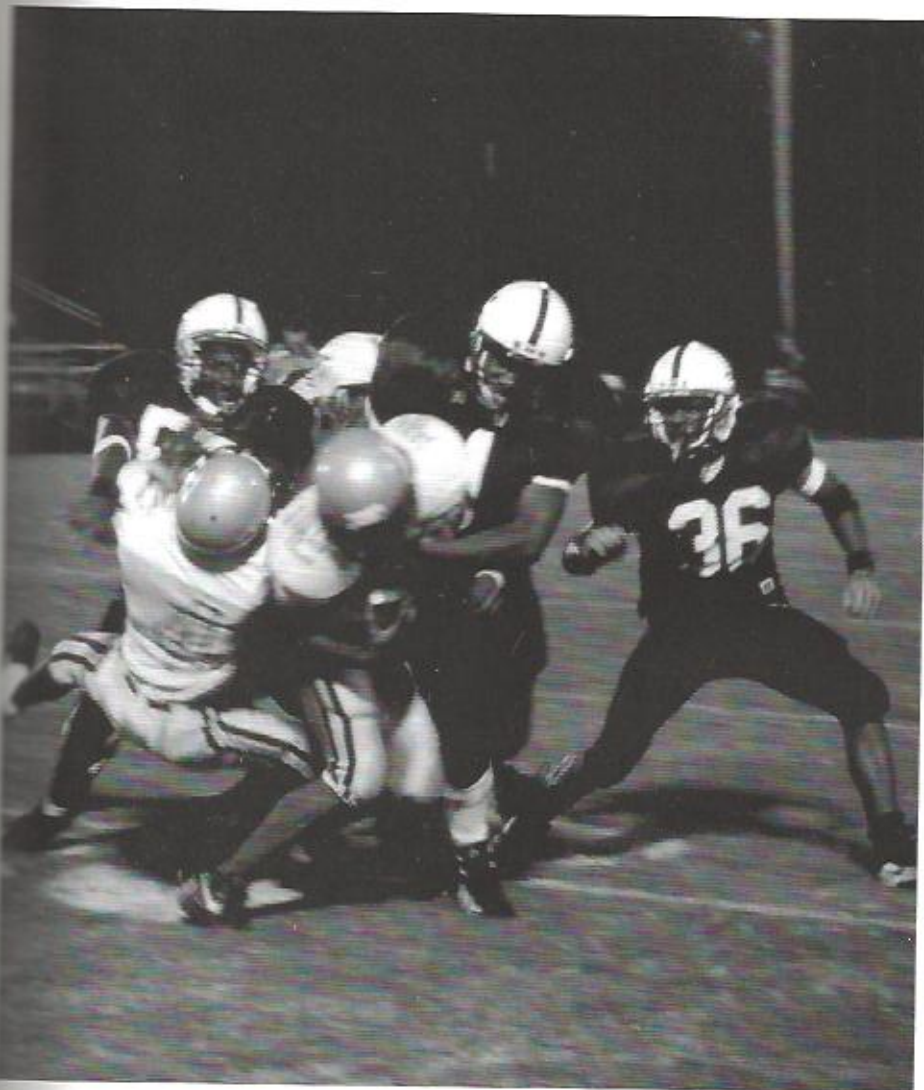

-Libbi Anne Kinard

Time Out! During a quick time out, Coach Razonno instructs the players during a home game against Battery Creek. He must have said the right thing because the Dogs won the home coming game nineteen to seven.

Stop'em, Dogs! Four of Walterboro's players put a stop to Battery Creek during the heat of a home game. Defense played an important role in Walterboro's winning status during the 2000 season.

Friday Night Blitz

It is Friday night. My blood is boiling, and all I can do is visualize what I want to do to the other team that has come to our house to play us. Every team knows how hard it is to win in the dog house.

During warm-ups, the other team comes out on the opposite side of the field, on our grass cutting up and making jokes, and all we can do is glare and wait for the chance to crush them.

The time is upon us. Everyone crowds up in the doghouse under the northern most field post. All we can hear is people screaming, cheering, and the band playing our song. We can't see anything because of the smoke. The next thing we know, the paper rips, and we are in the middle of the field jumping up and down hollaring even though we can't hear ourselves because of the band and the fans. A few minutes later we are on the field cracking helmets with someone we hate, but have never met.

That is a typical Friday night. I have to say my favorite part is the rush you get when you see the other team, hear the noises, and smell the mixture of grass and sweat.

Coaches' Corner. Many coaches and players enjoy a pre-game meal while discussing the up-coming game. Coach Riley made many important decisions concerning the Bulldogs' future.

Hands on Action! Hoping to advance the Bulldogs, junior Sha' Ron Jenkins takes a fall during a home game. He considered home games payback for all the time and effort he put into the season because they were so spirited.

Bulldogs celebrate an undefeated season

After three hours of moaning, loud yells, grunts of pain, and feeling the sweat pour off their steamy bodies in the hot afternoon sun, the whistle blew to finally end practice. The JV football players realized that it finally paid off by the result of their undefeated season.

"I've played for four years. Football relieves stress, and it is fun," said sophomore Dustin Douglas.

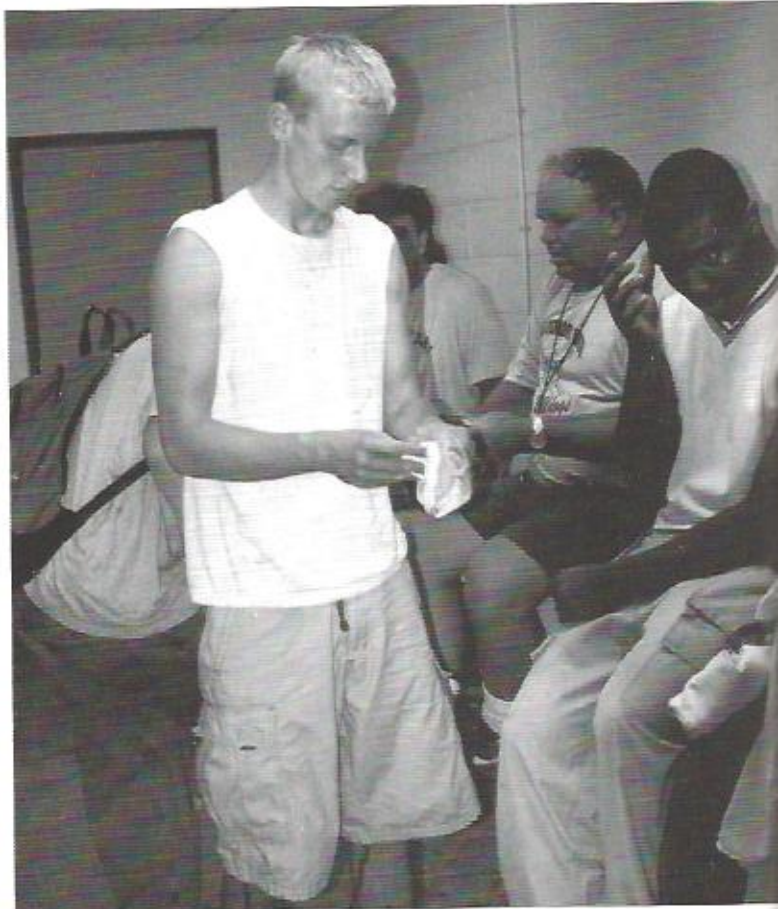

The football team recorded the final scores on an actual femur bone from Mr. Herndon's prize cow. By the end of the season a long list of victories ran down the side of the bone written in blue. The bone was used as a motivational tool. "It inspired the players to give it all they had and not allow other teams to come into their doghouse and take their bone," said Coach Polk. In one winning game the players even carried the bone out on the field in celebration of their victory, but like every team, bulldogs worked for their victory.

"Gasteroles and plyometrics are the hardest drills to me. They create stress," said freshman Lucius Culpepper. Dedication and willingness were two key factors of being on the JV football team. Players put forth hours of strenuous activities to show their excellent abilities.

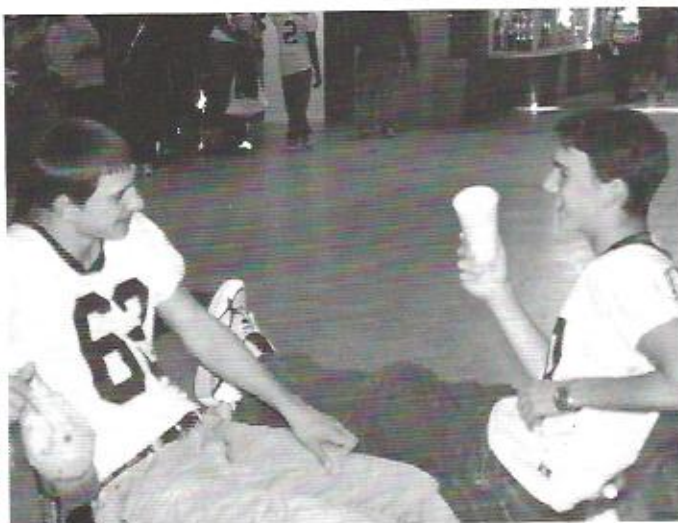

"No one compared to our Junior Varsity team this past year," said sophomore Drew Martin.

The Dogs dominated Walterboro High and their entire conference.

1. Wrap It Up. As sophomore football player Drew Martin unwraps his ankle, he wipes the sweat off his face after a hard day of practice in the burning heat. Before practice games, players wrap their injuries to ensure a safe day of football. Sophomore Drew Martin prepared for a game by making a trip to the "wrap-up room."

2. Food Before the Fight. While discussing plays for the night with another player, sophomore Will Germroth eagerly chows down before the game. The players ate pre-game meals to get them pumped up every Thursday. Some of their favorite dishes were green beans, fried chicken, mashed potatoes, and rolls. A balanced diet and proper nutrition helped to make the players safe and healthy.

ARE YOU READY TO GET STARTED?

J.V. Cheerleaders Can't Hide That Bulldog Pride.

The gym is dark and the humming sound of the fluorescent lights can be heard by the girls lying on the floor waiting for the coach and camp instructors to arrive. Ahead of them is a day filled with long cheers, excessive chants, and strenuous stunting.

"Camp involves the most physical pain that I have ever endured, but it's worth it in the end because they taught my bases and I how to do amazing stunts that fascinated the crowd," said freshman Kara Fox.

At the beginning of August the hard work finally paid off. Football season was a time of fun-filled, action-packed games. Not only did they cheer all four quarters, they also presented a half time show.

"Cheering in front of the crowd gives me such a rush. I like to see the fans respond to our cheers," said freshman Elle Ellison.

Unlike most sports cheerleading lasted a year. After performing their duties for the football team, they began to support the basketball team through February. Then after about a month off, the cheerleaders began again with tryouts.

"Tryouts are a nerve racking experience. I was almost sure that I did not make it, but when I looked on the list and saw my number, I was thrilled. Being a J.V. cheerleader has been such a great experience," said sophomore Tikima Bowers.

Being a cheerleader had many advantages. By working so close, many friendships that may not have had the chance to grow, did.

"I don't think that Amber Shockley and I would have become as close as we have if it wasn't for cheering. I'm glad that I really got to know her," said sophomore Diamond White.

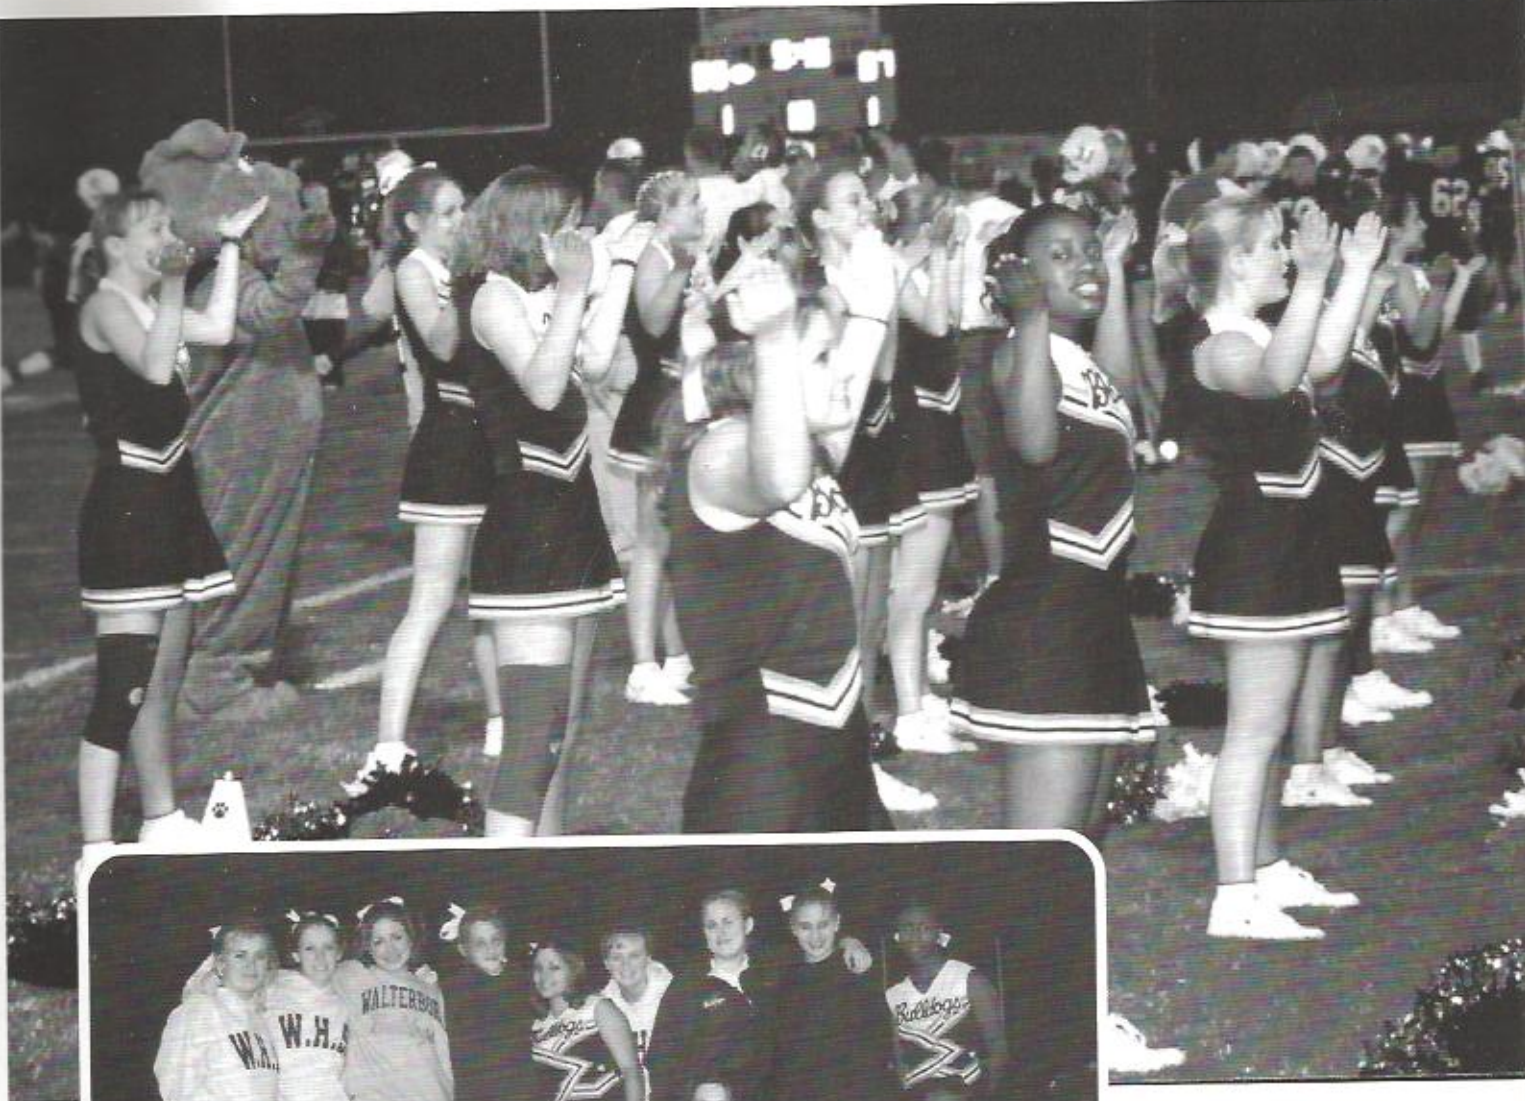

Cheerleading evolved from a "pretty girl" sport to a highly competitive sport for the twenty-first century.

-Lindsay Ackerman

3. Cheer Me Up. Giving the camera a sassy look, sophomore Tikima Bowers shows her spirit by wearing her bulldog jacket. "Cheerleading means hard work, working together, showing school spirit, and most of all, supporting your school," said Tikima. Many students, players, and cheerleaders expressed their spirit by wearing blue and white.

5. Program anyone? J.V. cheerleaders devote their Friday evenings to selling bulldog programs, stickers, and balloons at the varsity football games. Freshman Lauren Sheilly and Elle Ellison participated by selling their share of spirit items as the Bulldogs battled Beaufort in play-offs. This was the first year Lauren and Elle were j.v. cheerleaders.

Can anyone say cheesy? The cheerleaders, tired from a hard night, relax by saying cheese together. Though the girls had conflict, their coach helped them work things out. The squad brought everything to the table and dealt with it as friends do.

This tape sticks to everything! Cheerleaders Fraysse Lyle, a junior and sophomore Christin Mock hold up a sign while senior Gini Girardeau tries to unravel the tape. The taper had a hard job; the clear tape often stuck, and tore, and basically did all that it should not.

Cheerleaders are so cool! Senior Alexis Blakeney smiles as she tells a joke. On the way to away games cheerleaders had big fun. It was a time for the girls to tell stories, sing songs, and laugh at each other.

DON'T LET THE SKIRT FOOL YOU

Varsity Cheerleaders Have More Than Just Pretty Smiles

This year Walterboro's Varsity Cheerleaders proved to be more than just a bunch of "rah, rah girls". Over the summer the girls met to learn new cheers, and in July of last summer the girls went through what was to some of them the roughest, toughest week of their lives. On that week the notorious Mrs. Pam Antista came to Walterboro to conduct the girls' cheerleading camp. Mrs. Pam taught the girls a number of extensive stunts and cheer routines that helped better them as a squad.

"As a top you cannot expect your bases and spots to control all of your weight. Pam taught me that by keeping my body tight, my head up, and concentrating I could take weight off of my bases and spots," said sophomore Nicole Cook.

Senior Aston Hetrick added, "With this one girl I based for I was continually being kicked during her blow out; Mrs. Pam got the top to see what she was doing and made the stunt work properly."

This season Varsity Cheerleaders did not have to say how athletic cheerleading is; their complicated stunts proved it.

More than half of them even took part in Walterboro's Competition Squad. Those cheerleaders had practice nearly everyday; the hard work paid off because the girls won their first cheerleading competition.

By showing off their new talents acquired in the past year, the varsity cheerleaders proved to everyone that they were more than just pretty faces and smiles.

-Shantel Middleton

Buddies, Bosom Buddies. Junior cheerleaders Tamara Spangler and Amanda Lucas keep warm on one cold Friday night. The temperatures during football season dropped like W.H.S' opponents scores, but the cheerleaders continued to be rising stars.

Picture Perfect. At an away game the varsity squad shows off a run-through that they painted for the game. The cheerleaders used run-throughs to show their support for the Bulldogs.

SPIKE IT OVER!

Volleyball- 1 in the Spiking Industry

BUMP...SET...SPIKE...SCORE! After a long, strenuous volleyball season, junior Ashley Murdaugh is not the happiest player. She says "The team would have gone to playoffs if everyone would have played their best!"

Ashley played on the varsity volleyball team this year and led the team to victory.

Volleyball was a sport that required absolute dedication. "Volleyball games can get real tense. The competition during our matches is unlike any other sport that I have ever played," Ashley said.

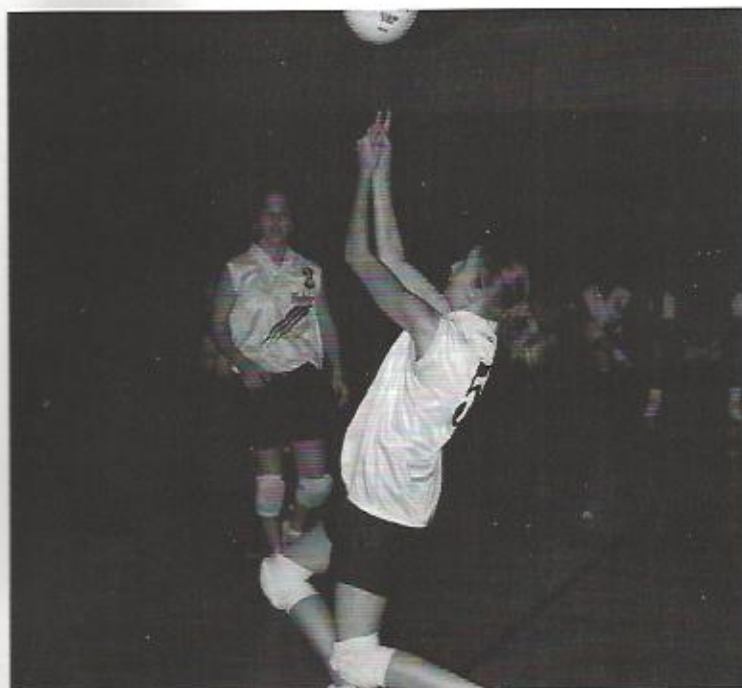

Overall, everyone worked together as a team to win a game. One person could not win the game for the entire team, it took team work. Everyone on the team put in an equal amount of effort. One person could not led the team to victory. Members of the squad took turns being motivators and team leaders.

Although volleyball was a serious sport it wasn't all hard work and no play. Practice and games were a lot of fun for members of the team. "At practices we cut up a lot but when it gets down to it we work real hard. We know how to balance out our work and play," said junior Erin Driggers.

The team shared many fun and humorous times together. "We had a lot a good times this year, we had a lot of fun;especially on our away game trips." Ashley said.

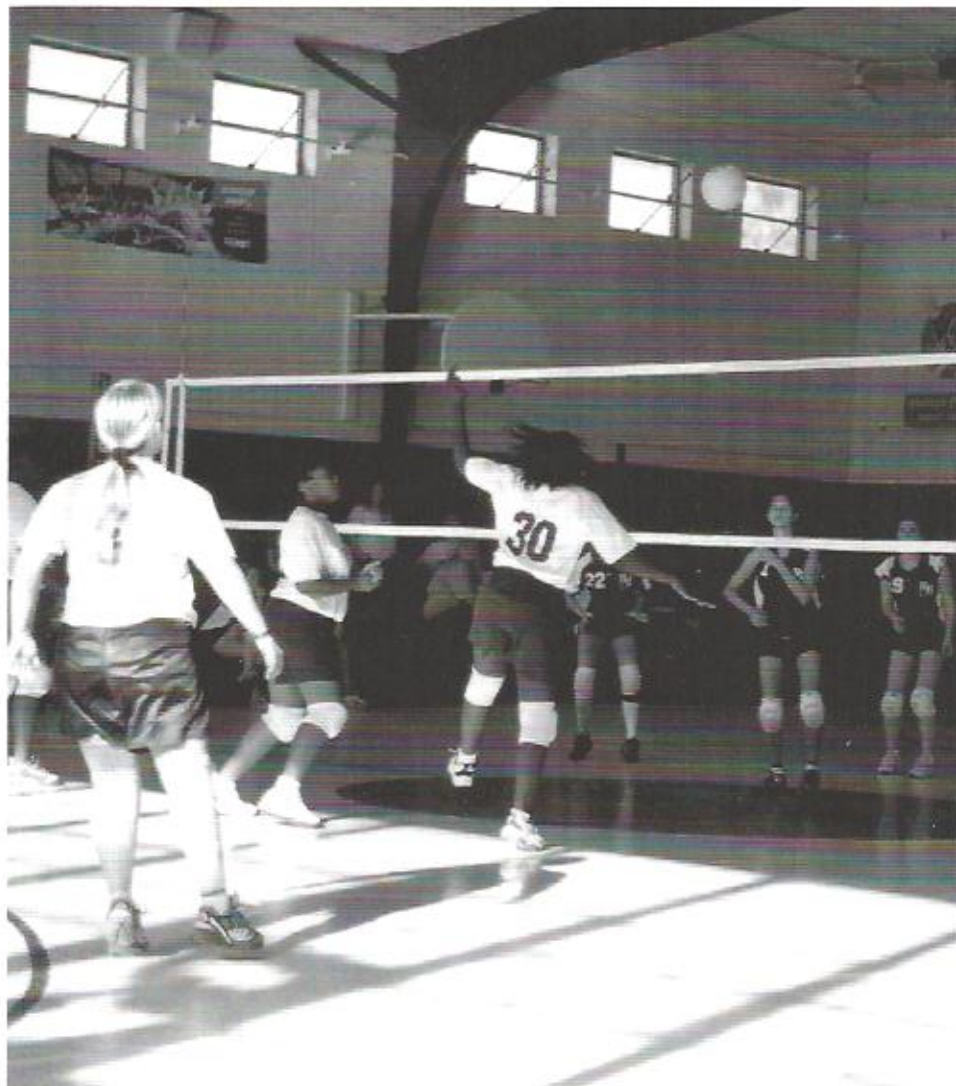

The volleyball teams worked hard to show off of their talents. They worked hard to win their games. Sometimes they accomplished their goals and sometimes not. No matter the outcome they were satisfied with how the season went.

-JoBeth Banas

"I play volleyball because it is a fun sport that takes teamwork and effort."

- sophomore,
Heather Craven

1. Get some skills! The varsity volleyball team met with Coach Coe to find out what they should do to allow them to win the game. She always gave them great advice and tips. Also, when they were stressed out it gave them a chance to calm down--physically and mentally! Players would get tired physically and need some time to get some water or towel to wipe their sweat.

2. Set that ball! Setting up the ball played a big part of volleyball this year, and every year. Junior Ashley Murdaugh, set up the ball for junior Erin Driggers. This allowed the varsity team to earn an extra point. They had to use teamwork which happened to be an essential characteristic of a W.H.S volleyball player.

3. GO JV GO! The JV volleyball team celebrates gaining another point. Their team celebrated many victories this year because they worked together and scored points. Sometimes it may have been harder to score points against some teams and easier on others, but they still did their best all of the time.

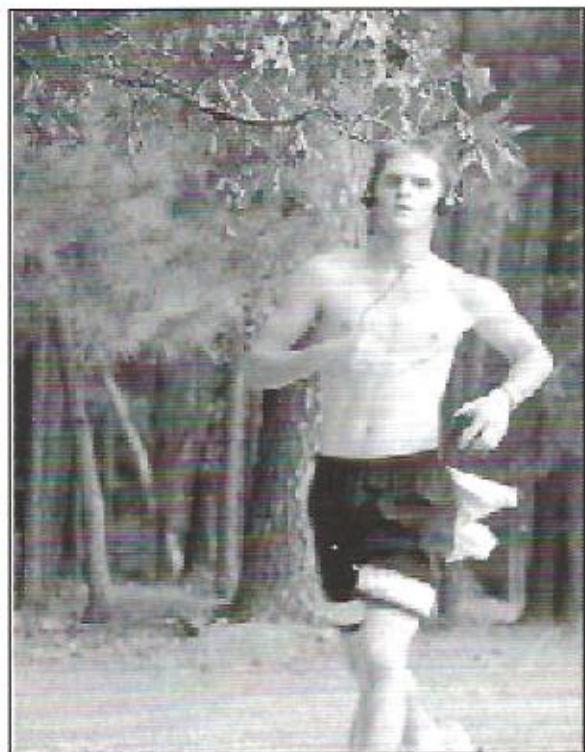

4. Show your stuff! Thanks to spiking, the junior varsity team scored many points. Sophomore Shanese Middleton, spikes the ball over the net and scores a point for the junior varsity volleyball team. This year the team had many spikes to help them win games.

"For me, the best thing about volleyball is that it is something I enjoy doing that doesn't have the pressure or expectations softball does," stated Erin Driggers.

Run, Run as fast as you can. Star runner for the cross country team, sophomore Calen Brown, runs as hard as he can in hopes of winning first place. Calen worked very hard and dedicated a lot of his time to the team this season.

BOUND & DETERMINED

The team is at the line and ready to go! The Cross Country team has not had the best year but they did show effort, because the coach would not accept anything less. The team only consisted of seven high school students this season.

Calen Brown, a sophomore, enjoyed running cross country. His brother, who had previously ran cross country, talked him into joining the team. Calen just finished his second year of running on the team and will continue to run next year. To stay in shape he also played soccer. He felt that he had vastly improved since last year, and hopefully would continue to get better.

"I am so much better this year than last year, it is not even funny. I've even gotten two personal records this year," said sophomore Calen Brown.

Practice was essential to be able to run on the team. Many of the players practiced not only during the scheduled practices, but they ran on their own time also.

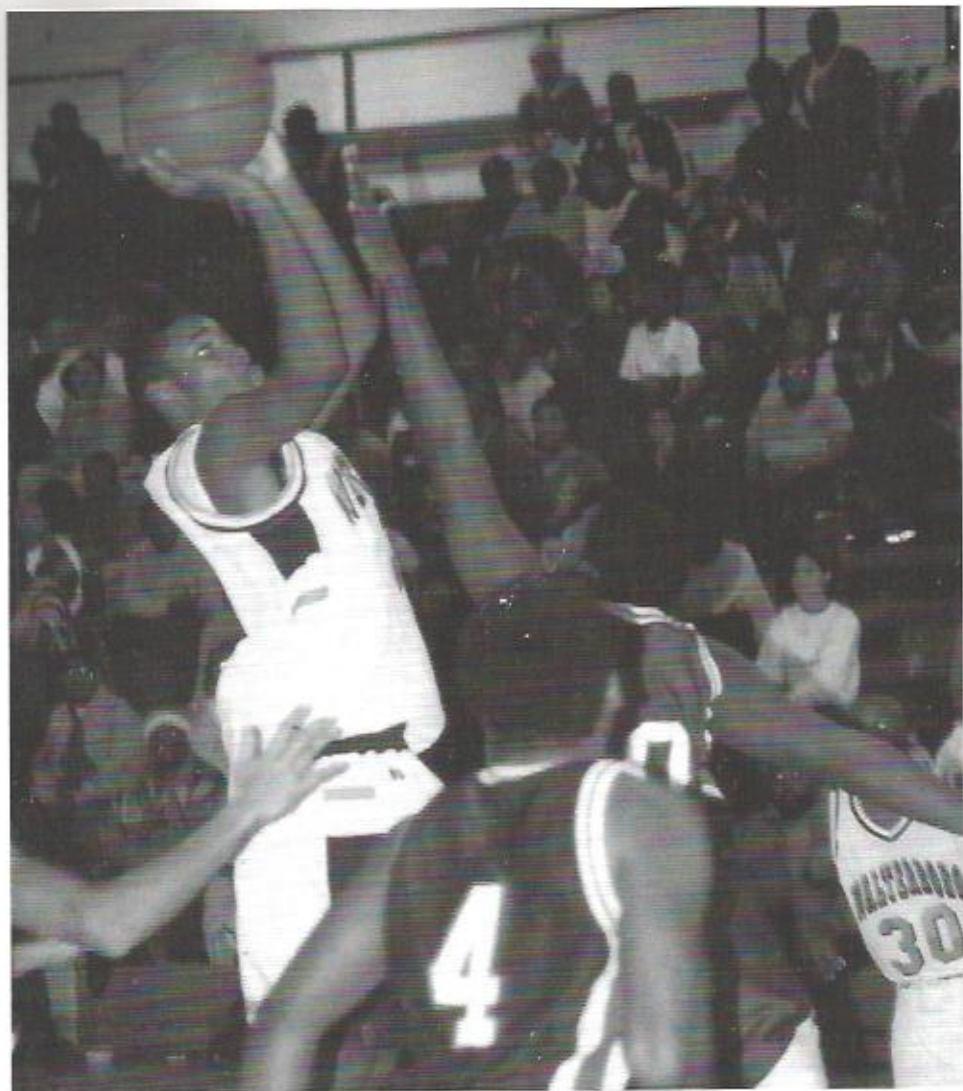

"I ran about three to five days a week for approximately one hour a day," said junior Melanie Winningham.

The team will get back on track and recover from the lack of returning runners next season. Next season will prove to be a challenge that the track team will try to overcome.

-Angela Reeves

Chillin' with my homies. All piled up on big yellow and ready to go, the team patiently awaited their arrival at the trail. The ride did not seem very boring for sophomore Calen Brown, though, he chilled on the bus surrounded by girls, acting crazy.

"I feel that this year our basketball team will be better equipped for the season and maybe even the playoffs."

What are you, blind? Although the referees try to call the game fair, junior Ryan Teasdale receives a tough call from the referee. The Bulldogs ended up losing to Ruffin in a close, but well-played game.

1. I believe I can fly. Attempting to earn his team two points, senior Bryan Vandyke soars above a Ruffin defender for a shot at the hoop. He did make this shot to help motivate his bulldog team, and the Walterboro High School basketball team needed all the support and motivation they could receive to beat Ruffin.

2. Out of my way, I'm coming through! Going for the gold, senior Steven Rogers makes a go for the inside lane. This lay-up boosted the Bulldogs' spirit. "You must earn your right to play on this team, and you must be capable of scoring when your team is in need," said Steven. The Bulldog players had to learn to live by this quote if they intended on playing for this

3. Ready, set, jump. As junior Ryan Teasdale prepares to jump for two points, his Walterboro teammates keep the defenders clear of him. Ryan had played on the Walterboro High School basketball team for the past two years. His hard work and perseverance really payed off this season.

4. Fanning out. Teachers, family, friends, and fans of all sorts pay admittance into the Walterboro basketball game. Although Walterboro lost, the fans still gave their team moral support. These fans stuck by their Walterboro Bulldogs through thick and thin, and through wins and losses.

STARTING OVER

Boys Varsity basketball team takes first step toward a playoff season.

"We will, we will rock you!" The varsity boys worked hard to pull themselves together as a team in hopes of reaching the playoffs. They intended on combining their individual abilities to create an overall team talent.

Junior Chris Washington played basketball for the high school since his freshman year.

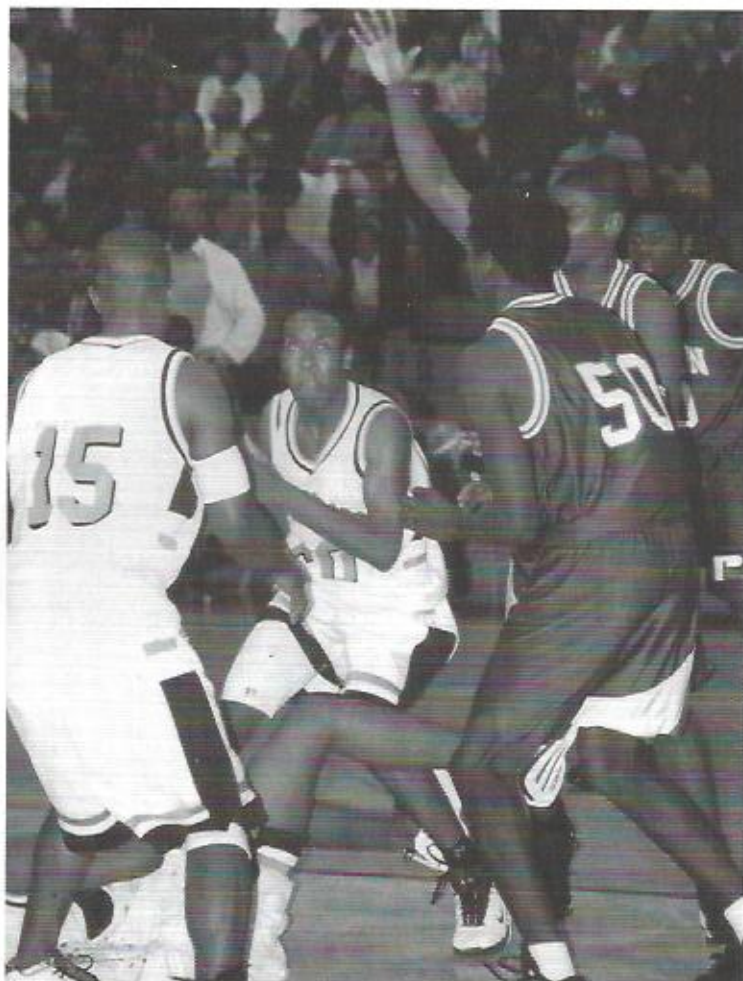

"This season I expect a big improvement in every area, and maybe even a shot at the playoffs," said Chris.

The outstanding coaching staff, another aspect that assisted the Varsity boys basketball team heavily, consisted of Coach Stevens and Coach Locke.

"The best qualities of our coaching staff are their good leadership abilities and their persistence towards the players," commented junior Eric Holmes.

The Varsity boys had a strong team, with competitive players and a perseverant coaching staff. Only one step away, the playoffs came into the grasps of this team.

THE HOOP IS ON FIRE

Girls Varsity Basketball blazes through an-

Listen Up Team! As coach Smith gets everyone in a huddle they talk about what to do next. He gave them more plays to try out in the game. The plays worked because they went on to win the game!

Shay Ebony Jones, a sophomore and six feet tall, varsity basketball player, dedicated her life to basketball. Shay's personality really made her fun and exciting to be around.

"I decided to play basketball because I have big dreams, to go to college. By playing basketball, I might just get a scholarship for college," said sophomore Shay Jones.

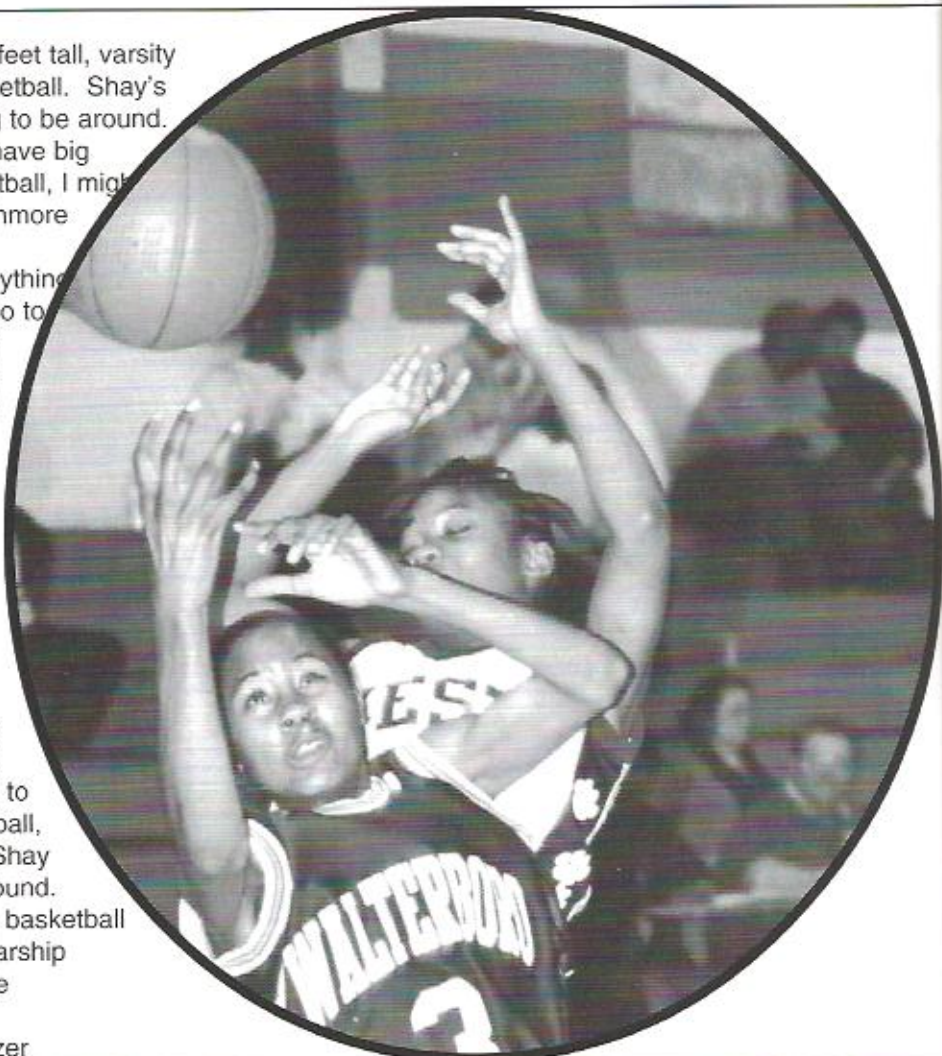

Shay's family meant more to her than anything else. If something came up, Shay did not go to practice and she tended to her family. "My mom use to play softball but I took after my dad and played basketball," said Shay, "My sister will be the softball player like my mom."

Because Shay's uncle inspired her, she started basketball in the fifth grade. Her uncle suggested her height would make her a great basketball player.

"I went to basketball camp at South Carolina State University in Orangeburg. Post players taught me how to post up. It has made me a better player. They taught me plays that I could use at my school and carry with me to college." Shay loved going to Upward Bound. She learned about basketball, got tutored and helped in the community. Shay also applied to colleges through Upward Bound.

Shay planned to go to the best women's basketball college, Tennessee University with a scholarship and hoped to get drafted from college to the WMBA.

-Erika Kizer

Just Push It! junior Erica Martin races down the court with the ball. She was a big part of the team and really enjoyed playing. Erica was really going to miss being on the team the next year.

Ahh, shoot. As freshman Tonique Fraiser shoots the ball, sophomore Natasha Ferguson stands away to watch. Although basketball sometimes came down to one person winning the game the whole team always worked together. A team would not survive without teamwork.

Shoot Fast! As sophomore Ashley Pinckney shoots the ball, the Ruffin player tries to block it. Playing the Patriots proved to be a challenge, the Lady Bulldogs practiced extra hard to keep up with their opponents.

GOING FOR THE GOLD

J.V. Boys prove that hard work and effort pay off.

"Hey! Pass me the ball!" Players screamed this line at the top of their lungs as they tried to make the Junior Varsity Boys basketball team. The Coaches held try-outs to determine which players would make the final cut.

Players exerted themselves fully to be a part of the basketball squad. The players who made the cut knew what it took and gave it no less than their best. These players would eventually lead this team to victory.

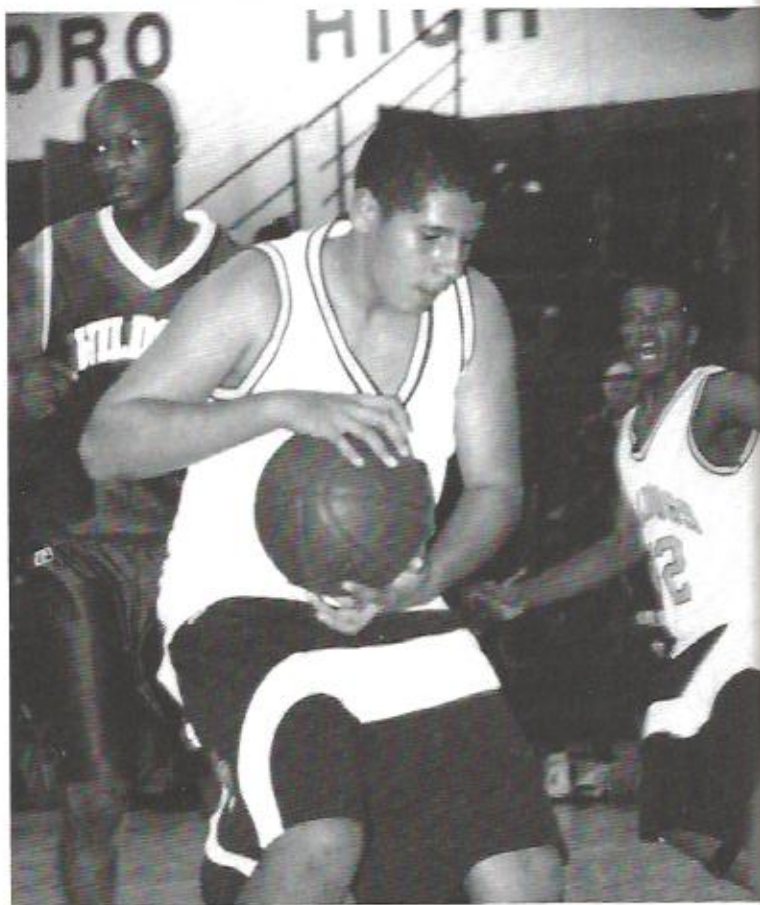

"During try-outs, I realized that to make the Junior Varsity basketball team took hard work, communication, practice, and determination," said sophomore Jarel Frazier.

Filled not only with promising young basketball players, this basketball team would not have been possible if not for the promising Coach Ricky Hanes.

Coach Haynes worked hard with the players and encouraged them along and along. He brought to the team new levels of determination and a different outlook on basketball in general. To those who did not make the final cut, Coach Haynes wished to see again in future seasons.

Although several students did not make the team, the players who passed the final cut had a reason to be thrilled and excited with their accomplishments. They did indeed deserve to be a part of this Junior Varsity Boys basketball team.

Charlie Hoffman

Now you see it, now you don't. Keeping the ball out of the opponents grasp, junior Ryan Jenkins covers the basketball up for safe-keeping. This was a good strategy for Ryan as he tricked the other team with his defensive techniques. Ryan later attempted to carry the ball upcourt. Dependable teammates who could safely carry the ball upcourt were a must-have quality. In order for this Walterboro High School Junior Varsity basketball team to gain victory this season, more players would have to follow Ryan.

Get out of my kitchen! Proving that defense is important, freshman Leron Bennett keeps his team alive by blocking an opponents shot. The Bulldogs did end up losing this game, but their defense could not be blamed.

BEAUTIFUL BEGINNINGS

The JV girls get an excellent start to a new and unblemished season

Starting the season over, the Junior Varsity Walterboro High School Lady Bulldogs realized that anything can happen. With a little bit of hard work and determination, they could make this season better than the last.

"Although we got off to a rusty start this season, I feel we will be able to make it all the way the playoffs," commented sophomore Shannon Doubleday.

Their goal of the playoffs proved to be an aspiration they could work towards. With practices held almost every day after school, the playoffs continued to come closer and closer to this Junior Varsity Lady Bulldogs team.

Although their record may persuade differently, the Junior Varsity Lady Bulldogs worked hard to achieve their goals this season. Whether they worked towards playing good defense, scoring goals, obtaining rebounds, or making it into the playoffs, they always gave their best.

In addition to their hard work and determination, the Junior Varsity girls got along with their fellow teammates very well. They played team basketball and believed that they should help one another, instead of competing among themselves.

"We may have our differences, and every now and then we disagree, but we win and lose as a team."

-Charlie Hoffman

Bounce wit' me. Dribbling the ball in preparation, sophomore Shannon Doubleday is ready to make a run for the goal. This was Shannon's second year on the Lady Bulldogs basketball team. "Playing well in games and tournaments is not a talent that comes naturally. It takes skill, practice, insight, determination, and most importantly of all, experience. Last year I was not as talented and skillful as I am this year because I did not have experience," said Shannon.

Pump it up. As the Walterboro Lady Bulldogs push their way to victory over the Wildcats, freshman Tonique Frasier scores a hard-to-earn two points. The Lady Bulldogs needed shots like these for their victory over the wildcats.

Atheletes Share Their Superstitious Ways For Receiving Good Luck

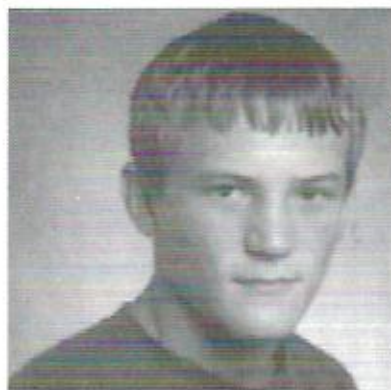

"On game days I always put my clothes on in a certain order. I do that because I feel like it brings me good luck while I play. I've done this ever since I started playing football."

-sophomore T.J. Hamilton

"My basketball team doesn't really have any particular superstitions, but I always pray before the game. Praying before a game gives me a sense of security knowing that He is with me. I love God, and I want him behind me in everything that I do."

-junior NaTasha Santucci

"The baseball team never crosses the handles on the bats on the game day. We've always thought that it gives us better luck. I've been doing this since my freshman year."

-junior Jimbo Warner

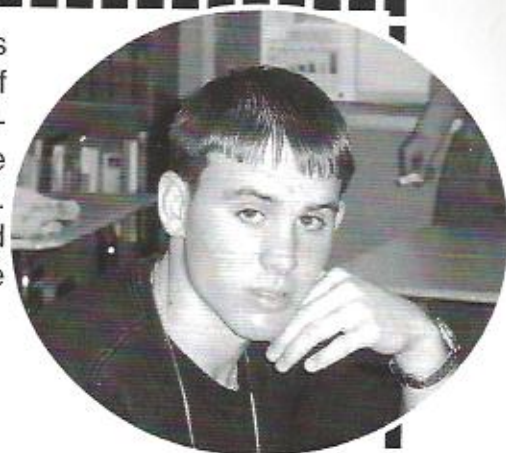

"I've been playing on the varsity softball team since my freshman year, and before every game we always do the same warm-up routine. Running the same order brings us better luck!"

-sophomore Karmyn Bowen

"The team has certain routines during pre-game and a couple of superstitions that everyone follows, but I always kiss my glove before I go out on the field to play. I've done that ever since I started playing just to give my self some reassurance."

-junior Joe Iademarco

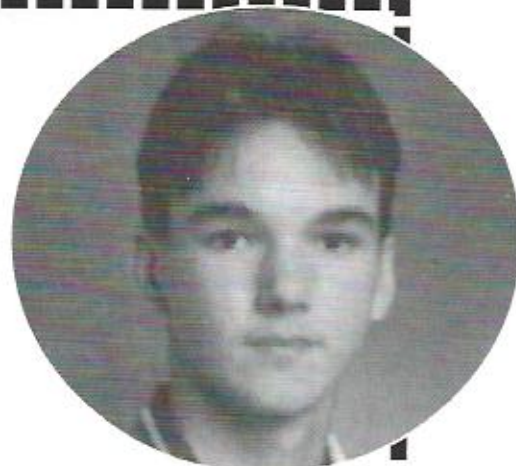

"The girls' soccer team has a couple of superstitions. Before every game the entire team huddles up and says the Lord's Prayer. This means a lot to me because I want God to be with everyone during the game. Then, all the starters circle up together and on the count of three we all spit on the field just to give us a little added luck during the game. We started doing that the very first year that we had a team (my freshman year). The superstitions may seem kind of dumb, but they mean even more to me now, especially since it is my senior year and I won't be playing anymore."

-senior Sophia Barnes

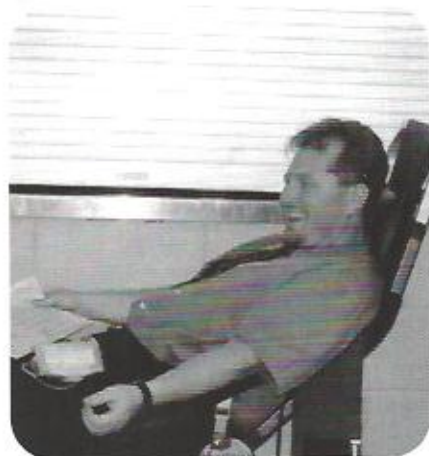

"I always want good luck during a football game so ever since I began playing I have worn the same underclothes. I wear the same under-shirt, socks, pants, everything. I take all the luck I can get while I am playing any kind of sport."

Like mother, like daughter... Pausing for a moment from work, Mrs. Sammons takes a minute to have a picture taken with her daughter, Julie.

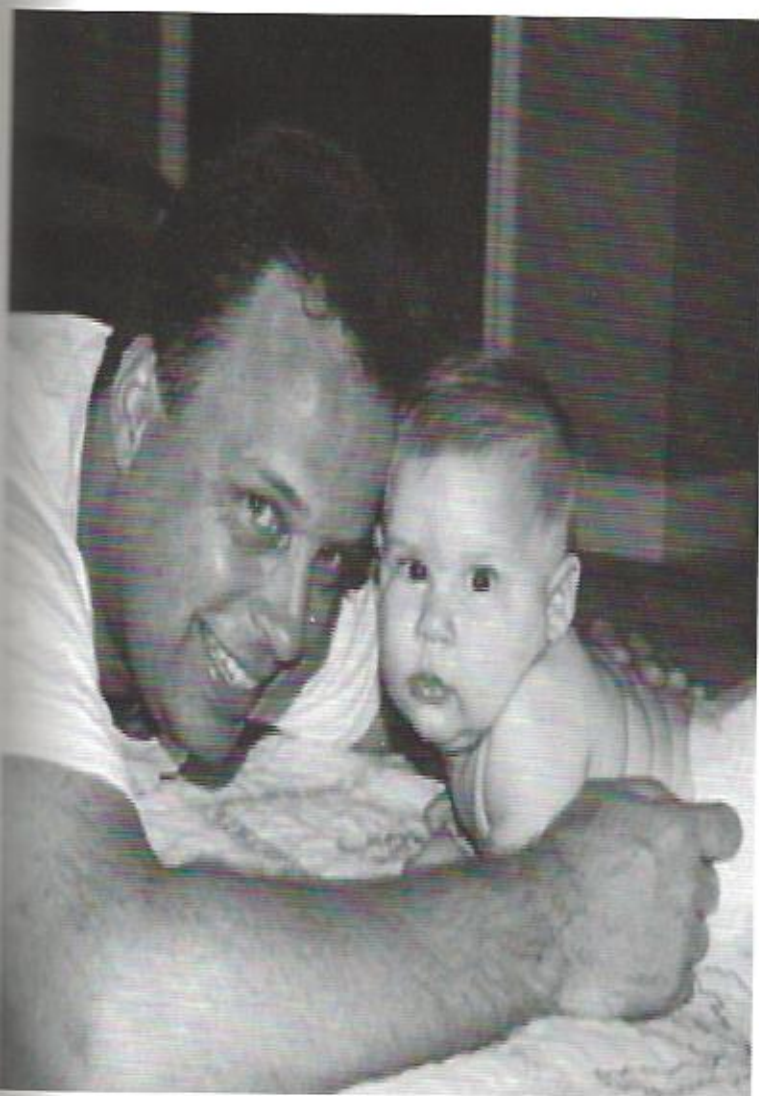

Will the real Mr. Pence, please stand up? During Spirit Week, members of the faculty and staff decided to dress up like Mr. Pence. From left to right stands Mr. D'Andrea, Mrs. Bird, Mr. Locklair, and Mr. Warner. All of these teachers enjoyed surprising all the students, staff and mostly Mr Pence, by participating in Twin Day. Wonder if they have anything up their sleeves for everyone next year?

Finally some free time. After his son's girlfriend's graduation, Mr. O'berg spends time drinking eggnog and talking with others.

Family Ties. "The most enjoyable moments with my family are spent going to the movies because it gives us a chance to enjoy ourselves," said Mrs. Jackson.

Faculty members step away from the classroom...

Along with students, the faculty shared fun moments with the people they loved. Away from the chalkboards and lesson plans, the faculty at Walterboro High School also learned ways to get out and have a good time.

Whether it be in Tampa, FL, cheering on their favorite football team, or in front of the Christmas tree spending precious time with family members, the WHS staff and faculty figured out when the right time to take a break, kick back, and relax was.

"Whenever I get together with my family, my sisters and I sit down and reminisce about our childhood memories, while comparing what we used to enjoy doing with what our children do today. I enjoy seeing my children interact positively with each other," said Mrs. Finney-el.

The faculty at Walterboro High obtained a variety of different lifestyles, memories, and experiences.

-Olivia Barnes

Have yourself a merry little Christmas... Celebrating their first Christmas together, Mrs. Travis and her husband sit down to chat with some friends. "Being with your family during Christmas is the most important part about the holidays," said Mrs. Travis.

Q: What made you interested in participating in the event and helping the community?

A: My grandfather has cancer and that made me feel more prone to help others because you never know when something might happen to you or someone you love. It makes me feel happy knowing that all the money we raise is going to St. Jude's.

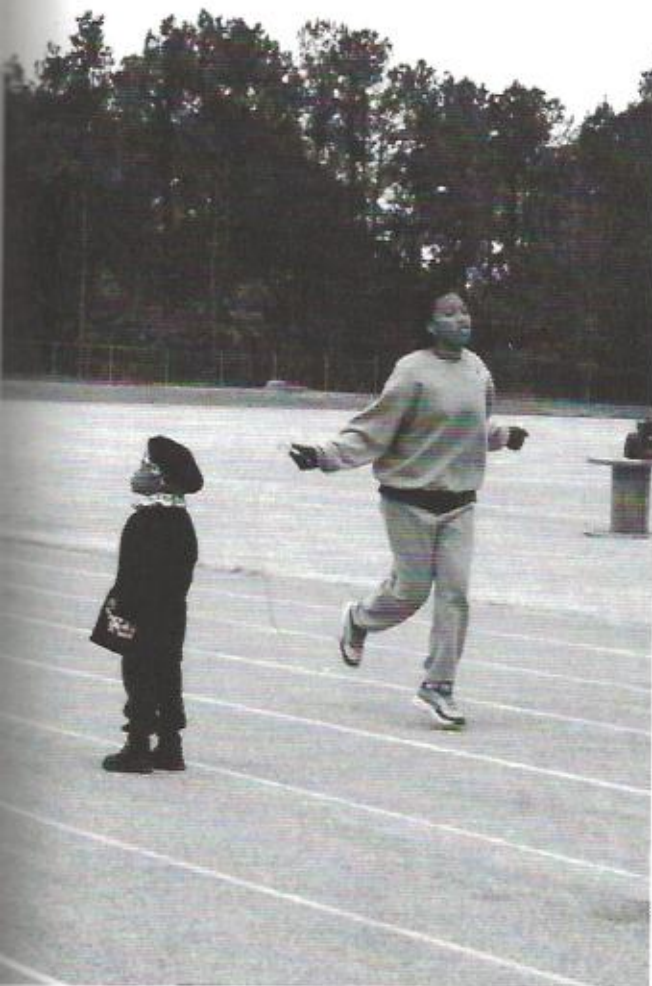

-junior Laura Burke

Walk this way. Senior Latoya Bryant, president of the Health Occupation class, starts one of many laps around the track. She opened the ceremony with a speech and things took off from there.

Hot chocolate anyone? Not only did the students raise money for St. Jude's Hospital for Children, they also waited in the cold for hours before they had any electricity to heat up the snacks on the track field. A lot of the people who participated in the walk-a-thon were students who took the occupational health class at the vocational school.

Say Cheese! Participants of the Walk-A-Thon gather around each other for warmth and a chance to discuss the day's activities with their friends, some of whom they just met. The community work brought many people together.

2, 3. Energy is still running high as Senior Shacurlyn Reed does laps around the track while jumping rope. She was at the track before seven o'clock in the morning and did not stop until one o'clock in the afternoon.

Warming Hearts in the Freezing Cold

Huddling together
Health Occupation
Strives to Make a Difference

Brrrrr..... On December 9, 2000 students, teachers, volunteer workers, and many more arrived at seven in the morning and kicked off the first annual Miracle Mile Walk-A-Thon. The profits, made on pledges and donations, went to Saint Jude's Hospital for Children. Walkers started to tire and to take small breaks after a few laps.

"My goal is to walk around the track one hundred times. I have done fifteen laps so far, and I am going to try my best to walk as many as possible," said sophomore Amber Straub.

Although she did not meet her goal because she had to leave the track early, Amber managed to do twenty-four laps around the track. She hardly stopped for any breaks.

"Amber began walking around the track before everyone else even started. I am glad that the few students and teachers that came here had fun and enjoyed themselves. This is going to a really good cause and I am glad I am part of it," said junior Gene Valbert, treasurer of the Health Occupation Class.

He and his classmates all noticed Amber's enthusiasm in the Walk-A-Thon. It even caught the attention of the Health Occupation teacher, Mrs. Ward. "I hope everyone is that enthusiastic," she stated.

All the participants in the Walk-A-Thon helped to raise money for the great cause of helping others. With the success of this Marathon, there may be a chance that it will become a tradition to help out others in need around the community.

-Rachel Hunt

Q: What made you interested in participating in the event and helping the community?

A: I started learning about community service work, and now I love helping out others in anyway I can. I also encourage others, whether they are students or not, to help out as much as they can, especially for charities that help children.

-senior Rita Manigo

In Your Own Words...

I feel like I am the only one with a heart,
From the rest of the world, I am miles apart.
Sometimes I feel like I have to put on a front for everyone.
Because if I don't, I may be shunned.
I fall in love, but only to get my heart broken.
No one would understand, for my words remain unspoken.
My heart breaks at every mean word said about me.
No one looks close enough to really see.
Just how much pain I hide,
I keep it locked up deep inside.
It comes out with every tear I shed,
As I lie awake, tossing in my bed.
No one listens to what I have to say,
They just think I can hold off another day.
Still my words remain unspoken,
My heart is a porcelain token.
So fragile and insecure
The pain they want me to feel for sure.
Life is not a smooth road.
It is often a heavy load.
As much as I think people don't care,
There are some that will always be there.
I think sometimes I just build it up in my head,
And have ignored the nice things people have said.
It takes only one cruel word to make me believe,
So I block the sweet things I need to receive.
All anyone needs is one true friend,
Some one who knows you, beginning to end.

~Heather M. Brown

Death

When I enter my peaceful state of mind,
I dream about soft green fields.
Nearby is a stream, shimmering in the cascades of blue,
There is a family having a picnic and the looks on their faces
Is pure contentment.
When I dream I am transported into another world,
Another time, another place,
I live in a blissful, happy state when I dream.
I am the only one who can enter this world
Others may hear about it and I may imagine others entering,
My world but I am the only one who can live and love,
My peaceful time.
The end is drawing near and I hear the angels singing,
I inhale and all the pain and trauma returns.
I look one last time at the ones who love me and then I return to my peaceful state, never again waking.

~Victoria Murdaugh

Sweet Dreams

The sound of rain is a sweet lullaby,
Raindrops are tears that you shed when you cry.
As crazy as it may very well seem,
Like an angel's kiss and heaven sent dream.

When the rain begins to fall from the sky,
Your thoughts begin to wander right on by.
Listening to rain brings a warm feeling.
Your heart then begins to start tingling.

The Dog Tale

This is a tale, of a heroic deed.
A tale that is true, it's true as can be.
One day on a dog drive, things were going good.
The dogs were running hard, a deer for sure.
We knew very soon, a deer would jump out.
Crashing through the woods, we heard something close.
It was a big ol' deer, with twelve points on top.
My small partner shouldered his big brown gun,
and began to fire at the deer very rapidly.
He emptied his chamber, his barrel glowed red.
The deer reared by, with a smirk on its face.
it jumped some train tracks, and went in the woods.
The dogs were coming, still sounding their call.
A train's lament sounded, it was close by,
The black coal monster, was coming down the tracks.
The dogs would crash into the cold black death.
The train started passing, no turning back.
Out came the dogs, headed to meet their doom.
We knew we had to stop them, those wet dogs.
We ran towards them, leashes in our hands.
The odds were against us, they were three to one.
We hurtled into the dog pack yelling.
Leashes were popping closed all around us.
It was a battle talked about in sagas.
The kind where the good men always prevail.
No dogs met the grim reaper that day,
because of me and my friends valiant risk.

-Matthew Mangum

A Second Look

These who hope to capture, or
Hold too close the past,
End their lives forgetting life's
Purpose, and how it must last.
Any who forget to grasp,
Wishes that they've thrown,
Peacefully except the fact that they'd Receive what was never known.
In the instant that you feel,
No one really cares,
Take the time to look around,
You'll be surprised to know who's there.
Every page of history,
And every step in time,
Reveals a time in all our lives,
Because of what you find.
On every rocky hill top,
On every teary day,
Keep the faith that you will look back and see life the other way.
-Harry Brown

"Dance like no one's watching ...and love like you've never been hurt."

I never believed in love at first sight,
till we kissed beneath the October moon.
I'm glad I met you that cold Autumn night.
I surely knew my heartache would fall soon.

ut who would have known while I put on my face.
That you could make my darkened mask to fall.
And let your beauty shine light in the space.
To let me out the black room and into the hall.

So, I would travel to see your smile,
Your beauty, your eyes, and your laugh,
Across the cold and ice a thousand miles,
Without the luxury of warmth or craft.

So, when you look for something tried and true,
Remember, all I know is I love you.

-James Eustace

THE TEARS AND LAUGH...BUT I NEVER KNEW
I WOULD LOOK BACK ON THE LAUGHTER AND CRY."

A Composer's Perspective

The trace of notes left behind,
The melody I try to find.

The endless thought that was never there,
The notes I now place with the greatest of care.

I see now a tune where once there were lines,
I hear not a tune, but see all the signs.

The notes play as thoughts heard only by one.
The sounds that are thought seem to be the most fun.

When the time comes to play, the rhythm flows through my fingers;
In the minds of the audience, forever it lingers.

-James Pinckney

WINTER RAIN

SNOWY AND WHITE IS THE SENSELESS RAIN
NEVER SEEMING TO STOP COMING FROM WHERE IT CAME.
TIRED ARE THE LITTLE PLANTS,
WHO DROWN IN ALL THE RAIN.
HAPPY ARE THE LITTLE CLOUDS,
THAT GET TO LOSE THEIR GAIN.
MOURNFUL ARE THE LITTLE CHILDREN,
WANTING TO PLAY OUTSIDE.
THE STREETS LOOK LIKE THE STORMY SEA
AROUND A FULL HIGH TIDE,
LONELY ARE THE LITTLE RAIN DROPS
LOST IN THE FACELESS STORM.
HAPPY ARE THE STARS ABOVE,
WHO GET TO SHINE UNTIL EARLY MORN.

CCX, Inc. purchased the Walterboro Plant on July 24, 1989 from the JPS Textiles Grp, Inc. The Walterboro Plant was involved in coating, weaving, and finishing of Plastisol Coated Fiberglass Insect Screening. The screening is used for window screens, door screens, and porch screening as a protection from insects and many times to shade light from areas of the home. Since CCX purchased the plant, much of our work now goes into other building products such as Exterior Finishing Insulation System, dry wall tapes, and wallboards. Not only do we have a strong domestic market but compete in the global market as well. Our people are our biggest asset. Without them we could do nothing; with them we can do it all. To the employees, we are grateful. Our Employees were students of Colleton's schools. We hope many of you will become our future.

Dear Hayley,

Here it is, your senior year! I guess I knew it would arrive eventually, but who knew it would be here, so soon. It Doesn't seem very long ago that I brought you home from the hospital, and was telling your brother to "be easy" with you.

Anyone who knows me, knows how very, very proud of you, I am. And now, those who do not know me, also know this.

I have no doubts that you will be successful in your future- not just because of your hard work and what you achieve, but because of the special person that you are.

Always remember which choices have been good for you and stand strong in them. Continue doing your best and trusting God for the outcome.

I would like to dedicate the following poem to you, and to the entire calss of 2001. I do not know who wrote it, but I would like to pass it on to you, with all my love and prayers, and to the class of 2001, with my congratulations and best wishes for their future.

Love, Mom

Wow! This year has been really stressful! It was really weird working on spring delievery this year, but we made it. I feel that the yearbook will be satisfactory considering this was our first year working spring delievery with all these rushed deadlines. I couldn't have done it without my staff, though. I know that I wasn't here quite often this year because of all the family emergencies I had, but ya'll did an awesome job of stepping up and taking my place while I was gone. Tamara and Paisley- what would I do without ya'll? I feel that ya'll have kept me straight this year and ya'll did a lot of work while I was out. A lot of the success of the yearbook is owed to ya'll as well. Thank ya'll soo... much! Morgan- you did an awesome job of ads this year.

Everything was done on time and with precision. You are an awesome worker and I thank you so much for that. Amanda- one of my copy editors. I know it was a little hectic this year because of the change in the style of our editing system, but I feel that it worked out really well for the first time. Same thing to you, Lisa. Ya'll both did a good job editing. (We all know it can get aggregating reading copy over and over again.). Shantel- thanks for doing such a good job with taking candid pictures this year and improving the look of our mugshots. The pictures in the yearbook should show it. Kristen, you were a big help with running all of our errands, we would be a nervous wreck without you. Fraysse, you are such an overacheiver! You saved me a lot of times and I am so thankful that you stayed after school all those hours and day that you did. You have contributed an anormous amount to the yearbook and I love you too death for that. Shera- what is there to say about you other than I LOVE YOU! You brought the life to this class everyday, thank you so much for your sense of humor! Jacob- you did an awesome job with design this year. Thank you so much for taking time to make our yearbook look good! To all the rookies, thanks so much for working hard and getting the job done to make our yearbook! Good luck next year!

Colophon

"A Show of Hands" Paw Print 2001, volume 31 was printed by Jostens with the help of John Bumgarner. The cover design is a Josten's design and the theme idea was developed at Carolina Journalism Institute's Camp. The actual theme was developed by Tamara Spangler. The book contains 180 pages plus a 21-page insert, and approximately 250 yearbooks were sold. The cover is a lithograph and the end sheets are printed on thermographicendsheet stock. All pages were 100 lbs. glossed enamel paper stock. The copy throughout the book was typed in 10 pt. Helvetica and captions were typed in 8 pt. Helvetic with the lead-ins bolded.

Aston,

Thank you for being such a blessing in our lives. You are a very wonderful daughter and have given us more joy than you could possibly imagine. We are so proud of the special person you have become and all your accomplishments. We pray that your future is filled with happiness. We love you always and forever.

Love,

Mom, Dad, and Meagan

Walterboro High School

Is it really over? Does it seem like nine grueling months of studying, games, and practice are over? The days have come to an abrupt end, but the the memories will live forever. The halls of Walterboro High will forever be the place where it all began.

-Shantel Middleton

Valentine's Day

SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Gathering Thoughts. Before participating in the activities, helper Kenyetta Middleton and participant Travis Bowman get it all together. The two enjoyed each other's company throughout the day.

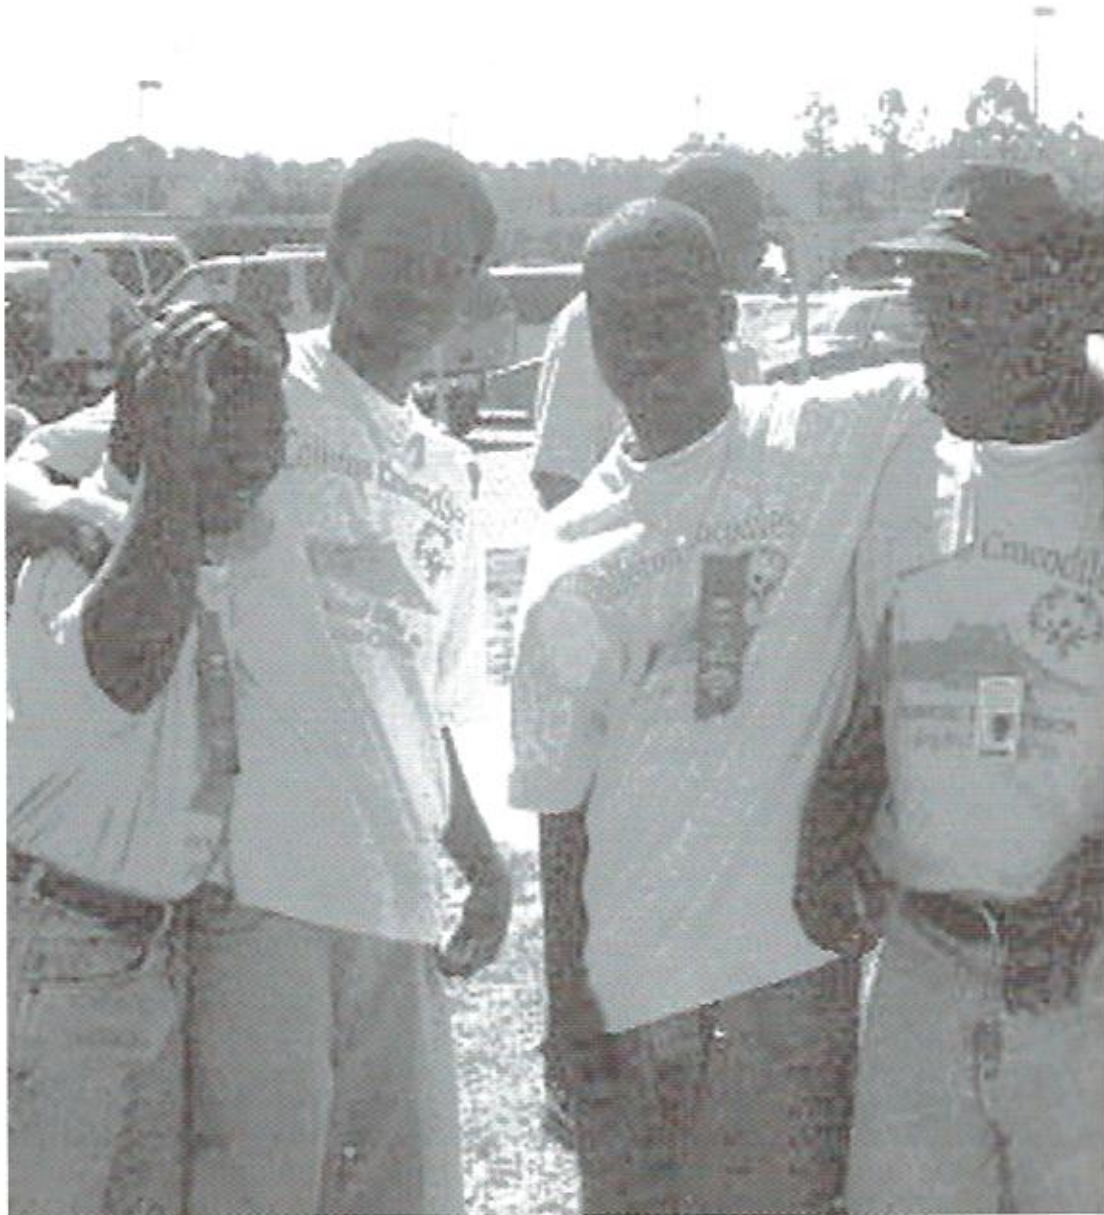

A special friendship. While spending the day together, Heather Brown and a special olympic participant share an extraordinary bond together. They had a blast together running in the relay races.

Are you looking at me? Standing on the track, Alexis Blankney and her friend Rebecca Pence patiently wait for the events to start. The group marched onto the track early that morning and enjoyed staying the whole day.

Up to No Good. This group of four guys look like they have something up their sleeves! The two participants gave all they had to win the races while the helpers loudly cheered them on.

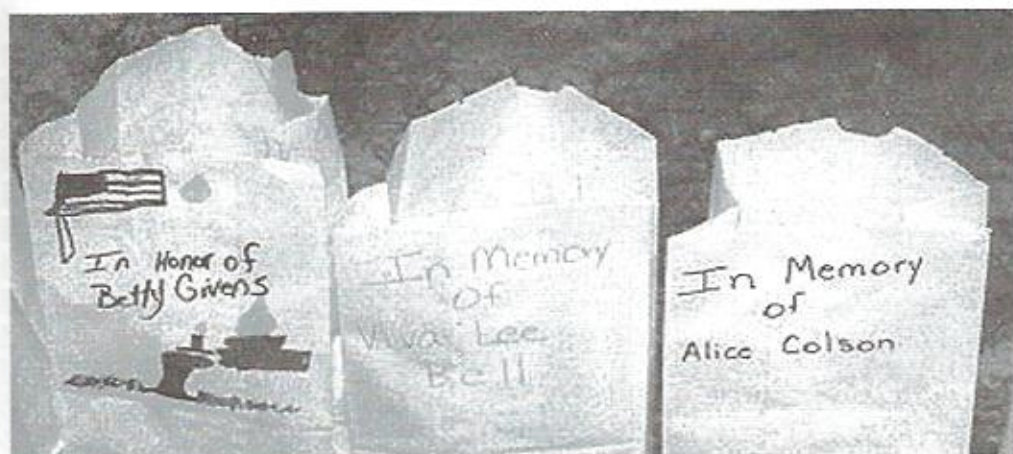

Calamity Jane 2001

Racing for a Cure

Colleton County comes together in order to raise money for an important cause.

This little light of mine... Many luminaries were purchased in order to raise money for the American Cancer Society. Luminaries have been a major help to the cancer research fund.

Lending a helping hand. As junior Paisley Polk prepares for Relay for Life, she reflects on the real reason behind this event. Paisley was one of many NHS members to help out.

Let's twist again. Junior Heather Brown plays twister with the kids at Relay for Life. As a member of FCA, Heather was in charge of the activities for the children during the night.

Q

How did you contribute to Relay for Life?

"I participated in the Miss Relay for Life contest and carried buckets to raise money."
-sophomore
Buist Bickley

"I dressed up as a zebra to display the Noah's Ark theme that my church's tent displayed for the 'best tent' contest."
-senior
Jaimie Goodwin

"I helped with NHS to put sand in the luminary bags that were to be lit later in the night."
-junior
Jackie Langdale

Let the Good Times Roll

Walterboro enjoys the Rice Festival, a long-time tradition.

Sisterly love. While watching the Rice Festival parade, senior Charity Capers and her sister pause to pose for a picture. Charity enjoyed spending time with her sister at the Rice Festival.

Ready, Set, March! While marching in the parade, the NJROTC colorguards strut their respectful stuff as they represent dignity and honor. The NJROTC participated in the Rice Festival each year.

WHAT'S SO GREAT ABOUT RICE FESTIVAL?

"The most enjoyable part about Rice Festival is getting the chance to see the whole town of Walterboro having fun together."

Sophia Barnes, 12th

"I love getting the chance to socialize with my friends during the Rice Festival!"

Mandie Breedlove, 10th

"The best thing about Rice Festival was the Taste of Walterboro. The food was delicious!"

Shantel Middleton, 11th

"While watching the fireworks at the Rice Festival I got to spend time with my friends."

Christin Mock, 10th

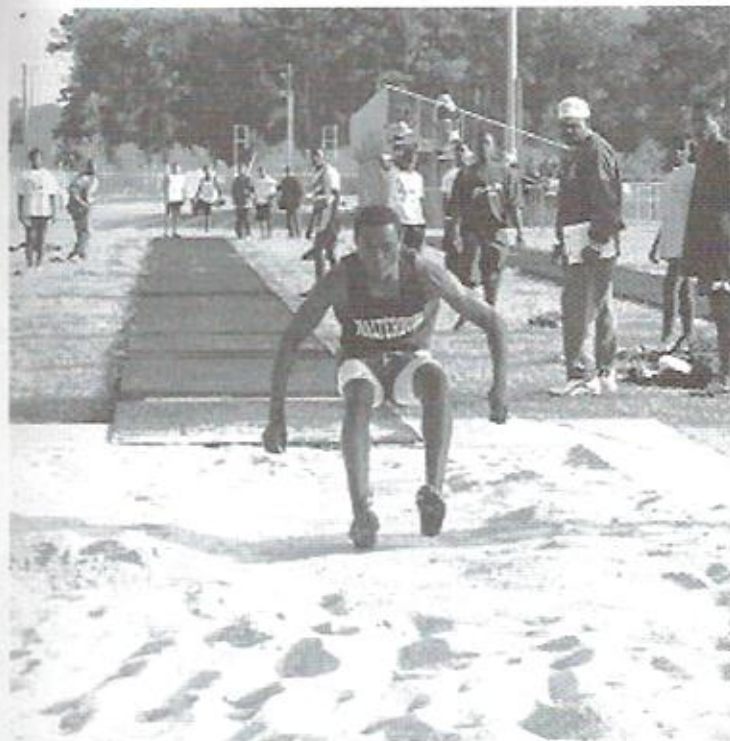

Easy as 1, 2, 3! As freshman Jessica Benton and Kara Fox count money at the WHS cheerleader booth, they try to keep cool under the shade of the tent. Both girls participated in WHS sports this year.

Coaches Corner

The track coach's assistant, Coach Chisolm, takes time to pose with two of his star athletes Shawn Tomlin and Pharez Adams.

Soaring High. Haskell Fields leaps over 22 feet, taking the lead of the region for 2001. Haskell, one of the few to qualify at nearly every meet and event, made it to region finals.

High Stepper. Junior Seildrick Wright uses his time to stretch before the race. After a football injury, he ran an excellent season and demonstrated true athletic ability.

Rookie Ruckus. Craig Jordan and Brandi Traynum are both eighth graders. They showed steady progression and are destined for an outstanding career.

• EVER SINCE THAT DAY, I'VE BEEN A RUNNING FOOL!

DONVILLE ROBINSON

"I run because I love the rush of emotion. It's a good and easy way to keep in shape too."

STEPHEN PINCKNEY

"I ran track to get back in shape and to get my knee right for football season."

SHELDON PIERCE

"I run to stay fit for football and to maintain my speed and endurance."

TO RUN OR NOT TO RUN...

- That is the Question

Got Spirit? Supporters cheer as the race begins. Danielle Bennett was a loyal follower and served as a devoted chaperone.

Tornado Tomlin. Junior Shawn Tomlin whirls around to gain momentum to launch the discus. He placed first in the event and went on to receive the gold.

On Your Mark...Get Set...Go! The Walterboro High School runners get off to a speedy start in the boys 100 feet run. Senior Sieldrick Wright, placed second in the event.

Gone With the Wind. Miss Brandi Traynum is not a movie star, but a star runner. She displayed skill and endurance as she ran the girls 3200.

Are You Ready to Fumble? These sprinters dash back from a near defeat. After stumbling on the first passover during the relay, these girls managed to capture third place.

FORE!

The Walterboro golf team kicks off the 2001 golf season with a long shot

That Will Do. Taking a breath of relief, sophomore Charlie Hoffman wonders what shot lies ahead of him. Although his ball was not in good condition, it could have been worse. "I was pleased that my shot turned out as lucky as it did," said Charlie.

The Crack of Dawn. To kick off the region golf tournament, senior Gareth Avant takes his opening drive. This shot is always a pivotal stroke. Gareth held the number one position on the Walterboro golf team.

How Far Will it Go? Carefully watching his drive, senior Kyle Moody anxiously awaits his final result. Kyle shot two outstanding rounds in the low eighties at the region golf tournament.

Going, Going, Gone. Teeing off on the thirty-sixth hole, sophomore Charlie Hoffman follows through in order to get off a long shot. His resulting shot was a perfectly placed fairway drive. "I was just ready to put an end to the long region golf tournament," exclaimed Charlie.

Only Time Will Tell. As he lines up his putt, senior Gareth Avant ponders what will happen next. Consequently, Gareth sank his putt. Gareth has been a starter on the Walterboro golf team since his freshman year.

Beach Ballin'. Attempting a difficult bunker shot, junior Ryan Berry takes his time to avoid disaster. Unfortunately, Ryan's attempt failed. Ryan will return next year for a second start to a new season.

Waiting to Exhale. As he carefully watches the flight of his ball, senior Kyle Moody prays that everything will turn out for the best. Fortunately, Kyle's ball remained in safety. This was just one of the many lucky breaks that Kyle received.

A Golfer's Insight

KYLE MOODY

"I feel that this season was an excellent way to finish my final year on the golf team. Even at the worst of times, our golf team has always been a privilege to play on."

GARETH AVANT

"As one of the two departing seniors on the golf team, I wish the best of luck to the golfers who step up and fill our shoes. Hopefully my golf career has not met its end just yet."

DUSTIN DOUGLAS

"Due to our number one and two players leaving, I know that it will be a tough season next year. I feel, however, that our golf team will be able to eventually claim a few victories."

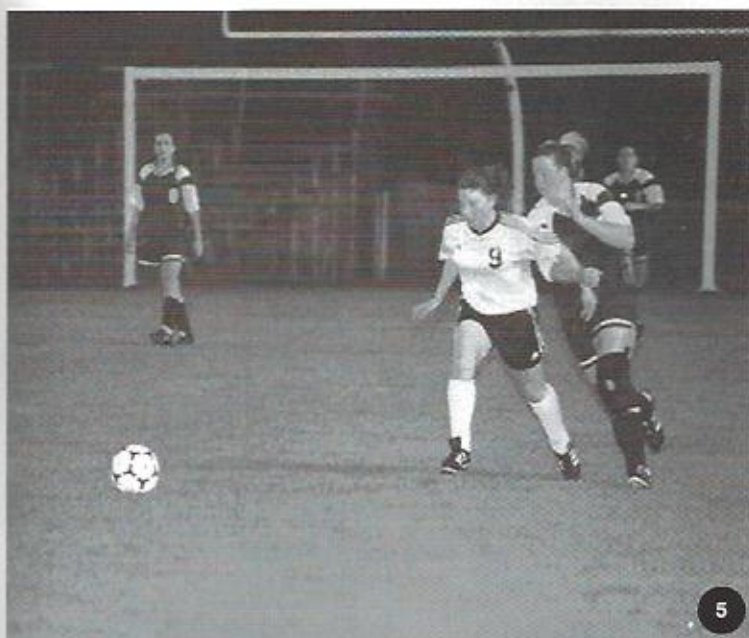

RYAN BERRY

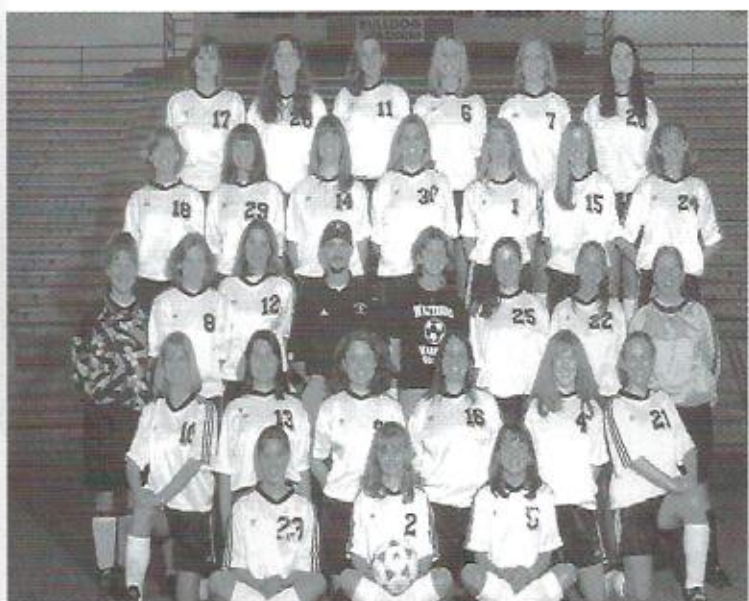

"Although our golf team accomplished several goals and continually defeated the Battery Creek golf team, I expect many more team victories in the future years to come."

AIM FOR THE GOAL

- 1 Fake Her Out. Sophomore Kinloch Smith dribbles past a Timberland player. Kinloch was a starter her freshman year as well as her sophomore year.
- 2 You Go Girl! Getting control of the ball, sophomore Julie McMillan dribbles down the field. Timberland players watched in amazement.
- 3 Ready or Not! Senior April Bullock gets ready to take a penalty kick. She was always a great person to get to take shots because she usually scored.
- 4 Charge! As senior Jaimie Goodwin fights for the ball, senior April Bullock and freshman Margaret Smith run to help. Jaimie was known for her aggressiveness on the field.
- 5 Get Off Me. Fighting for possession of the ball Jaimie Goodwin works hard while freshman Margaret Smith and senior April Bullock run up for support. Jaimie was known for her dedication on the field.
- 6 Get Together Girls! The girls stand in their ready position to run to the ball. Senior Sophia Barnes, sophomores Libbi Kinard and Meredith Dresher along with freshman Michelle Bullock are all focused on the game.
- 7 Watch Out! Freshman Jessica Goodwin takes control of the ball. She was known for her great kicks. Everyone hoped they would not get in the way of them.

"We really played some fantastic soccer this year. Record wise, it was not what we wanted, but a lot of great things happened this year."

- 1 Think Fast. Making an abrupt halt, Brad Peurifoy turns to recapture control of the ball. The ball was recovered and the team went into immediate overtime.
- 2 Locked on Target. Eric Van Hulst darts off to recover a ball from the opposing team. After which, he skillfully transported it down the field to assist in making the next goal.
- 3 Up...Up...and Away! Lucas Nettles sets up to punt the ball. Upon landing the ball was intercepted, aiding the team in capturing a goal.
- 4 Heads Up! Lewis Rebello uses his most prized possession, his head, to reclaim control of the ball for his team. The team then pressed on until accomplishing yet another victory.
- 5 Unleash the Dragon! What did you expect, Jackie Chan? No, just a player who doesn't mind battling for a victory. Freshman Lucius Culpepper kicked the ball in an attempt to intercept it.
- 6 He's not doing the Two-step. Brad Peurifoy carefully maneuvers himself into a position that is ready to stop the ball. He was later able to apprehend it from the opposing team.
- 7 Proud Parents. The Reverend and Mrs. Zane Brown take time out of their busy schedules to support their son, Calen. They also helped to coach the team into a victory.

Season Highlights
WHS Varsity Soccer

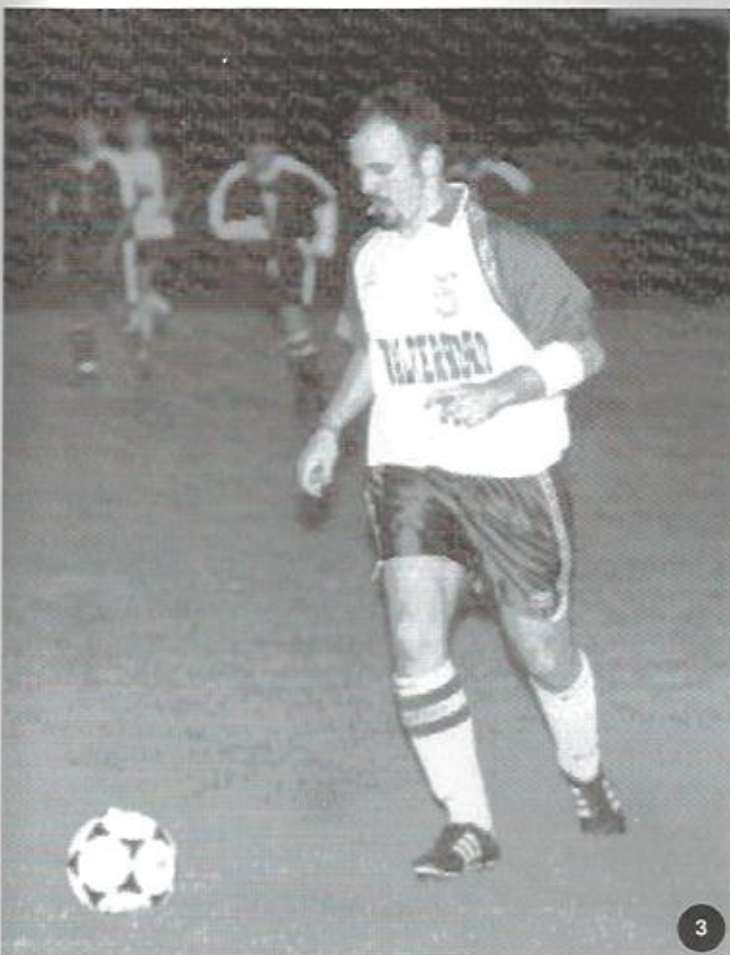

Bench the best and see if others can pass the test. JV players got the opportunity to participate in many varsity games. Some of these guys included: Sagar Madhiwala and Kenneth Waldhour (far left & right).

Varsity Blues. After an excellent season the varsity boys soccer team poses for a team shot. They are as follows: Row 1: (left to right) Lucius Culpepper, Lewis Rebello, Ben Williams, Hunter Thomas; Row 2: Kasey Hudson, Eric Van Hulst, Lucas Nettles, Coach Ulry, Tripp Padgett, Craig Stivender, Robert Pence, Brad Peurifoy; Row 3: Andy Kiser, Taylor Smith, Calen Brown, Hal Tate, Matt Magom, Lee Chasteen, Scott Kinsey.

Dog Carded

Senior's Corner

An important player to the team and a role model for the others, J. D. Neal's last year with other senior Chris Green was great. Making the best of things has always been a goal for seniors.

Bleacher Bouncers. Players and fans watch the games from the bleachers outside of the fence at Forest Hills Tennis Courts. Support for the tennis team was important for its future.

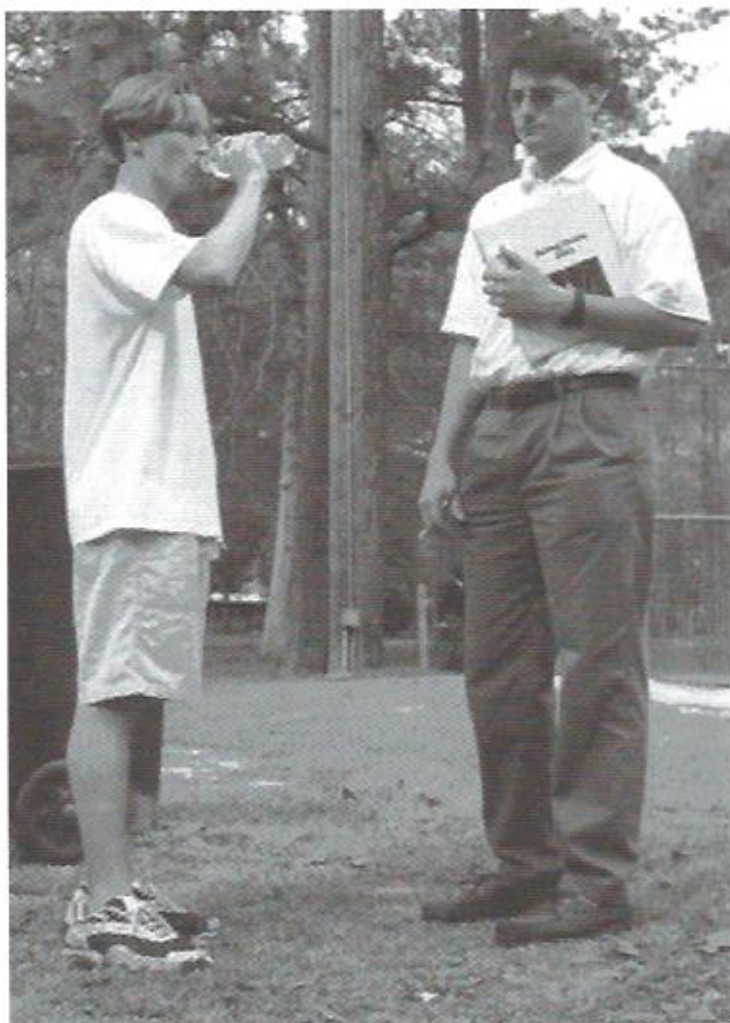

Coaches Conference. Prepping players for the game is a great quality for this coach because of the one-on-one competition involved in most games. Encouragement made the game for the Bulldogs.

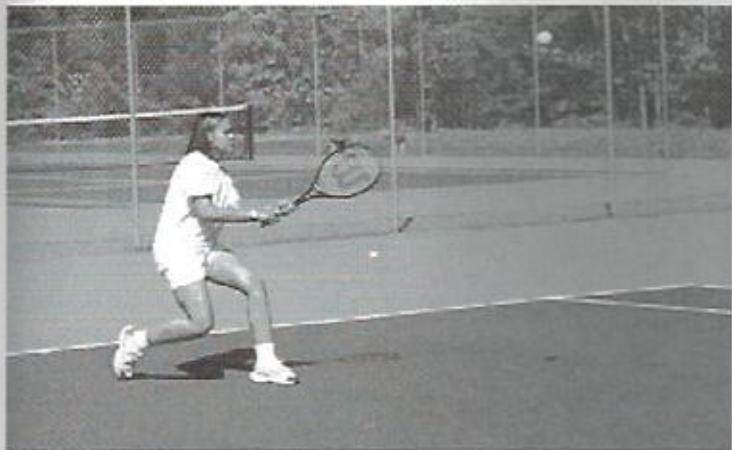

The Goof-offs. Being the guys for the team, Will Smoak, Chris Green, and J. D. Neal all make fun and laughs. Although the guys were important, the girls had their power too.

Getting Pumped for the Match. Grouping up and getting ready, the Dogs gather the balls and rackets before a sunny April game. Coming together before each game kept the players a true team.

RUCKUS AND RACKETS...

Swing It Taking a dip, Crystal Crosby swings for the tennis ball while warming up for a game. Warming up make a big difference in games.

Here it Comes Preparing for a return, Chris Green shades his face and opens his eyes for a perfect ball. On a sunny day like this, wearing a hat could prove to be helpful.

Thinking it through. Coaches makes a huge difference in winning or losing. Coach Dandrea planned out every game for perfection in the scoring range.

Wait for it. In tennis, timing is everything. Junior Will Smoak show us how to do it on this overcast day at Forest Hills Tennis Courts where the team practiced and played.

A Sportsman Handshake. Before every game, players meet their opponents and shake hands. Sportsmanship in every game is important, but tennis is one of the few sports with one-on-one atmospheres with which to deal.

The "Fantabulous" Lady Bulldogs

Three Up, Three Down! The infield huddles together on the mound before the inning to yell the famous "Three Up!", while the outfield yells back "Three Down!" It was a ritual they did to start off each inning.

"I'm going to miss all the friendships I have made playing my four years of high school, and I'm also going to miss not being able to play on the same team ever again with the girls I have grown up playing ball with."

-senior Cindy Crosby

Pep Talk Time... Coach Ben Harrison gives Brandy Burkett a little word of advice on first base. Sophomore Brandy Burkett started on first base for most of the season, and played very well for her first year on varsity.

4 Huddle girl! Erin Driggers rounds second ready to make it to third. Erin enjoyed softball more than anything, and if you asked her what her favorite pastime was you would probably hear her say "Softball is my life!"

BATTER UP

3, 2, 1; That's How It's Done!

Home Run Baby... As junior Joe Iademarco tries to concentrate on hitting a homer the team waits patiently. Joe did hit the ball and made his team mates very happy.

Not Getting By me... The ball will not be getting by junior Jim Iademarco. He was always ready to get someone out. Jim, as well as his twin brother Joe, were both known for their talent in baseball.

Not Stealing today... As a James Island player tries to steal to 2nd base, Junior Jim Iademaco turns and throws the ball to first baseman, junior James Bazzle, for the out.

Time Out... Coach Kennedy calls a time out to have a serious talk with the boys. The boys ended the season soon afterwards, proving that pep talks encouraged the boys to play harder.

the graduating class of Two-Thousand One

- 1 Clemson Bound. Kyle Moody and Gareth Avant nervously wait to give their validictorian and salutatorian speeches. After ending their high school career as #1 and #2 they'll go to Clemson and see how they'll do.
- 2 Emotional Smiles. Andrea Robinson pauses for a hug on graduation day. She was known all through high school for her outgoing personality and smiles.
- 3 Be Prepared! Fred Flemming always made sure that he was prepared for a fire drill. Now he is preparing himself for his future. Beside him waits Samantha Flatten with her hard-earned diploma in her hand.
- 4 Show me the Money. Latoya Bryant hands over the senior gift to Mr. Pence. The gift was to go towards a plaque honoring the Tuskegee Airmen, and to be placed in the new edition completed in 2002.

1 Where's the AC? Michael Bostwick-Jones tries to beat the heat at graduation practice. Don't get him wrong, he was ready for the next day but he could have gone without the long practice. Just hand him the diploma!

2 In Loving Memory. Placed in memory of Archie Evans, who passed away in a car accident last summer, floats a blue balloon.

3 Smile if you just Graduated. Michelle Hoffman and Samantha Hoerl look at the camera before marching onto the field.

4 Joe the Genius. Joe Hamilton proudly smiles with his many honors showing around his neck and on his head. Among the many was his 12-year perfect attendance. Put that on your job application!

5 W-H-S! Shouting out the Alma Mater for the last time in their high school days, the graduating class of 2001 is all smiles. The day of graduation turned out much cooler than the morning before at practice.
