classes help to prepare students for life as adults

Students tried to prepare themselves for the future. Many students joined productive classes or clubs that promoted the career path they planned on taking in the future. Clubs and classes such as the National Honor Society, student council, NJROTC, Teacher Cadet, Teacher Assistant, Economics, Psychology, and Economics all prepared students for the future.

Members of the NJROTC dressed their best in their uniforms every Wednesday. "I really enjoy having my uniform and shoes shine, so I look professional," said junior Muntray Mitchell.

Teacher assistants and teacher cadets trained students who planned on becoming educators, and student council helped develop future politicians.

Economics taught students how to balance a household by creating a budget, while Health Occupations trained future nurses and doctors. "I hope to become a nurse, and my three years of health occupations has helped me so much. My mother is a nurse as well, so between my class and spending time with her, I've learned a lot," senior Cameron Rickenbaker said, "I feel like I have the basic knowledge down perfectly."

The clubs and classes at school taught basic lessons, but more importantly, they taught students what to expect in their futures.

Team Painting During Mrs. Wadell's art class, senior Dallas Tate and junior Tangi Jeffers work together to paint a picture of dalmations, fire trucks, and fire hydrants. "This project helped improve our all around art skills," Tangi said, "I hope to study art in college."
